The Panama Canal—Another Proposition Which Will Save Much Labor.

One of the Largest Whisky Houses in the U. S. is Consumed by Fire.

The Jesuits are to be Granted a Stay of Proceedings in France.

Ratification Meeting in Cincinnati—Wool Market—News in General.

Washington, July 10.—Mr. Blanchet the original projector of the Nicaragua Canal, and of the plan of extending the level of the lake of Nicaragua to the closest proximity to the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, arrived in this city yesterday. Mr. Blanchet is an eminent civil engineer. He has just returned from Nicaragua with Engineer Menscal. He has devoted the past fifteen years to study of an Inter-Oceanic Canal through Central America. Being seen by a reporter to-day Mr. Blanchet said regarding the enterprise, he had three visits to Nicaragua, and in March, 1879, he obtained an interest in an influential French company, and a concession from the Nicaragua government which failed of confirmation by the senate. Having recently returned to Central America the prolonged interest he has taken in the canal has given him special popularity in matters pertaining to this project. He is in common with Menscal approached the government and the result was the granting of a concession to the Menscal or the American company which he represented. Mr. Blanchet denied that it was important for the completion of the great work to obtain a fusion of interests, this being acquiesced in by Mr. Menscal, the result was a complete understanding favorable to the enterprise which was arrived at. Hence Mr. Blanchet is now here to confer with Admiral Aneau, Mr. Menscal and others, with a view of arranging details for his effectual representation in Europe and he expects to represent the European interests in any organization that may be consummated. Mr. Blanchet is in direct opposition to the plans so urgently favored by Count De Lesseppe; he considered the Panama project impossible, owing to its great cost and the deadly character of the work. Digging in one of the most unhealthy swamps in the world, and sacrificing thousands of workmen to the ravages of the fever. He does not admit the practicability of the canal in view of anything like reasonable profits. Supposing it practicable he estimates the necessary outlay at four hundred million dollars, yielding at the outside eight or ten million dollars revenue per annum. The Nicaragua canal, Mr. Blanchet says, will not cost more than forty five million dollars under the present arrangement, and the revenue will be equally as large as if constructed by Panama. He thinks it will take about five years to build the canal under the present arrangement. But it will be through an exceedingly healthy country, and under the active influence of the trade winds which are so strong on Nicaragua Lake; which are as rough as on the British channel. In economy of time Mr. Blanchet considers the Nicaragua route much shorter than via Panama, and instances as follows: Going to New York or San Francisco there is a saving of five days for any steamer in transit, and always in the trade winds, having only to reach the 11th degree of north latitude, whereas the Panama canal is entered on the 9th degree and the vessels have to strike south entering the Pacific below the 7th degree; where the calm belt is touched renders it impossible for sailing ships and might retard their voyage seriously. Mr. Blanchet expects to return to Europe about the 14th inst., in order to interest his friends and raise the capital needed for the company, which the American projectors of the scheme have undertaken to organize. An immediate survey will be made for the execution of the complete plans of the works, and Mr. Blanchet expects to return to Central America in the fall. He is quite confident the canal will be completed. He anticipates that the Count De Lesseppe may begin work in Panama, but, he's quite certain it will never be completed. The competent authorities in France, Mr. Blanchet says, favor the Nicaragua route, and that fact he considers will be a great obstacle in the way where it is attempted to raise the capital for De Lesseppe's scheme. The fundamental difference between the two canals so far as the system of working is concerned, is that the Panama canal would not require the construction of locks, whereas the Nicaragua will require a number; but the advantages for navigation together with other obvious conditions, it is considered will render the latter only feasible.

EXECUTION SUSPENDED. Paris, July 10.—The government seems disposed to suspend the execution of anti-Jesuit decrees against other orders until legal tribunals have decided the case. The Jesuit question of jurisdiction is still to be heard before the tribunal disconflicts on a mixed body, composed of a judge and members of the council of State under the prestige of the minister of justice.

OMAHA, July 10.—The Omaha elevator was destroyed by fire between midnight and two o'clock this morning. The insurance on the building was $23,000; on the grain store, $4,263; estimated loss, $75,000. The fire is supposed to have been caused by the friction of the machinery.

WOOL MARKET. BOSTON, July 10. The wool market is comparatively quiet; but prices are steady, and firm. Manufacturers and dealers are still moving cautiously and all transactions are quite free from excitement. There is a good demand within a certain limit; but beyond that, buyers hesitate to go and decline to purchase, in anticipation of any prospective advance. Combing and Delware fleeces were more inquired for with very firm feeling. Unwashed wools are in steady demand. California wool is in good demand. In sales for the week there was 427,000 pounds of spring at 25@40; and 20,000 pounds of fall at 18. Pulled wools are in fair demand. There is no movement in territory wools. The sales include Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces, x x and x x x, at 45@48; Michigan x and medium, 41@44; Combing 44@50; Kentucky combing 28; unwashed combing, 33; Kentucky clothing 35@36; Georgia, 35; Louisiana 34@35; Texas 33; Territory, 29@30; unwashed fleeces, 18@20; scoured, 45@48; superfine and x pulled, 41@45; Australian, 45@47. The total sales for the week were 15,000,000 pounds of which 1,300,000 were domestic.

The superintendent of the Imperial Silk manufactories at Hangchow, in China, states that the expenditure of the Chinese court upon silken fabrics has, within the past two years, attained unheard of proportions. During the year of 1878 alone silks of various qualities valued at $400,000, wholesale price, were supplied to the imperial palace—among them 1,300 pieces for the use of servants in the emperor's gynaeceum alone, the greater number of which pieces he believes to have been fraudulently disposed of by sale to retail silk dealers or lenders of money on portable property. The above sum $400,000 does not comprise the cost of the gorgeous silken robes and other garments supplied to the emperor and court ladies, many of which cost over $5,000 apiece.

Mythical Millions. From the Philadelphia Times, June 24. Among the many alleged unclaimed English estates the agitation of which has resulted in bleeding and victimizing persons of a gullible nature whose name suggests a possible family connection, there has been none more prominent than the so-called "Hyde estate." This particular subject was recently revived by the dispatching of Ex-Governor Army, of New Mexico, to England as agent of the supposed heirs, and he returning reported a mine of wealth awaiting them in the English chancery. This week however, Messrs. Richardson & Co., Claim agents, No. 711 Shansom street, who sent Gov. Army's report to their correspondent in London, with inquiries relative to it, and received a lengthy reply, in substance as follows: That the Hyde estate is even more a stupendous fraud than the tautasy that has been deluding the so called Jennings or Jennens estate, and that the report is without foundation whatever. Instead of there being $500,000,000 in chancery belonging to the mythical Hyde estate that amount represents the entire chancery funds relating to thousands of suits. There is no mention of the Hyde estate in the list of unsettled chancery cases for 1877, and the only sum credited to that name is several thousand dollars, to which there is probably no American heir. In reference to a statement that the agent of the Hyde heirs labored eighteen hours per day for eighteen days, the letter states that the office hours are from 10 to 4 o'clock, and the information embraced in the report of the agent, whose expenses were $1,325, was obtained from an hours study of the parliamentary report. While there the writer claims that ex-Gov. Army applied to him to search the records, stating that he was wholly engrossed in "looking up his own especial claim," and had written to America for $300, out of which he would meet the expenses of the search, but he failed to give any instructions, the correspondent hints that ex-Gov. Army's employers merely supplied him with funds to enjoy a pleasure trip to Great Britain.

The London Spectator notices the gradual decay, or rather diminution in the number of the Quakers in Great Britain, and wonders at it. While persecution of the followers of George Fox continued, the society of Friends increased in numbers. Now that they are granted special privileges in the United Kingdom, they are decreasing. The number of Quakers in Great Britain, according to their own official statistics, is only 14,892. The list include only those who are actual members of the society, while probably a far greater number of Englishmen have Quaker connections and relations. The diminution of membership is at least partially explained by the fact that the regulations do not permit marriages of members with those who are not. When such marriages takes place, which often happens, the offending member is "disowned" and the children loose their birthright in the society, while they may walk in Quakerly ways through life. Thus nature often rebel against the social restrictions and nature imposes the penalty of thinning the members, and proselyting is against the society's rules. Thus the decrease in membership is easily accounted for, while the society has constantly increased in public favor. Two members of the cabinet are of Quaker extraction and twenty-three of the house of commons. Both legal and social rules are waived in their favor; they are exempt from taking oaths, and it is stated that when the first Quaker accepted cabinet office the Queen, unsolicited, offered him exemption from the usual etiquette which regulate court costume. The society of Friends has not only out lived persecution, but it is now a class upon whom exceptional favors and indulgences are bestowed, yet the society is nowhere on the increase, but quite the contrary. The natural reason for the decay is doubtless the true one, and nature somehow will have her own way to results.

Two fashionable and wealthy women of Dubuque, Io., were fined $5 each for taking flowers from a cemetery.

A Russian seems to have beaten the magician of Menio Park in the introduction of the electric candle. A good many of the capitalists of Europe were blazing with the Jablockoff candle, and the orders for lanterns are pouring into "The Russian Society of Electric Light." Jablockoff sold out his patent and all orders on hand to this society for 2,000,000 rubles, a great fortune, and the company was started on the basis of 9,000,000 rubles capital. Jablockoff transferred to the company orders for 1,000 lanterns, and the demand already pays twenty per cent. per annum on the investment, which is making money very rapidly for Russia. It is a monopoly of lighting Europe with electricity. Edison's electric lantern is not yet perfected, and if he doesn't look sharp the Jablockoff candle will cast its rays in New York, and may be in Menio Park.

Turkish officers do not enjoy the consideration at home enjoyed by their profession elsewhere in Europe. A Turkish captain is regarded by his senior officers with but little more respect than a private, and is sometimes struck by his colonel or general in a moment of anger. Even a major is barely secure from such treatment. The pay of an officer under the rank of general is very inadequate and irregularly received. The families of officers in garrisoned towns are generally with them, and the latter are often sorely pushed to feed their charges. They may be seen daily with baskets, returning from market, seedy and partially but-tonless.

A wealthy Chinese merchant of San Francisco has a full-blooded negro wife. Their six children are a singular combination of two races in appearance, with crisp, curly hair, coppery skins, almond eyes and a Mongol expression of face.

It is not until the flower has fallen off that the fruits begins to ripen. So in life it is when the romances is past that the practical, useful begins.
