Some Current Notes of the Modes—A Driving Cloak—Costumes of Scotch Tweed—Answers to Correspondents—Hints for the Household.

ANOTHER sample of graceful design is shown in a long fur cloak for driving purposes, when the furs are too heavy and warm, as is often the case in our changeable climate. It is in color a pale yellow tan, and in material a lovely rough boucle, all covered with its silky hairiness. The long underbody is but half-fitting, though curving beautifully at the back, and fastened down the double-breasted front with great horn buttons. A set of tiny, round horn buttons decorate the strap at the throat, and another at the top of the convenient side pocket.

There is a set of full triple capes, piped about the edge with a thick cord of silk as big as your finger. A jaunty collar, tilted back from the face, and wired so as to stand against the wind, finishes the throat prettily. A smart hat, perked directly up in front, and held there by a bow of cream lace, is of tan felt, faced with black velvet, the outside loaded with a lot of silky black plumes.

Another charming coat is of scarlet wool, with all the seams banded with Persian lamb, and a huge butterfly collar of the same fur to turn up about the ears. The modistes are also turning out many handsome fur-trimmed gowns for riding and skating wear, some of which are remarkably swell. The one which most takes the fancy has a combination of steel gray broadcloth, yellowish white kid and ermine fur. The skirt was a whirling Paquin, with stripes of ermine laid over the side seams and reaching to the waist. The jacket is a short one, with flaring basque, the body of ermine, fastened with huge ivory buttons. There are sleeves of steel gray, and a huge muff of ermine, while the sweetest bit of a hat is made of ermine, lace, and a gray wing.

Moist gowns show a deal of handsome braiding and the more popular applique work, outlined often with tiny jewels.

Costumes of Scotch Tweed.

Now that almost everyone has one of the jaunty little coats of tan or the darker shades, everyone is suddenly becoming dissatisfied because they are a part of the common herd who flock the streets in reefer coats. This is a catastrophe difficult to avoid, as it is to be expected that all pretty, modish things will become more or less common, unless the price is so high as to place it above their heads. It is a positive relief from the masses of tan-coated girls to meet one in a jaunty cloth suit, who has braved the first popularity of the coat and clung to her first love, a dainty street suit. A pretty costume of this description was recently seen, and may be copied at a trifling expense, at least trifling as compared with the prices paid for a tailor-made jacket. The material is tweed, genuine Scotch tweed, in dull shades of brown, barred with black, something one may wear continually without being noticed. The skirt is in the latest mode, and made to flare abnormally at the feet, while fitting like a glove at the waist. It is lined throughout with rustling percaline, and stiffened smartly at the feet with a broad band of specially prepared and wired canvas. The tiny round bodice is double-breasted and fastened with a row of brown horn buttons. The sleeves are huge gigot affairs, stiffened so as not to be crushable. The shoulders are warmly covered by a set of capes, very much rippled, lined with wood-brown satin. A black collar of wood-brown velvet finishes the neck. With it is worn a pretty hat, moderately wide, of wood-brown beaver, and massed on top with a lot of choux of creamy white crepon, with jet centers. A muff of sealskin completes the toilet.

Family Recipes.

Grape Sherbet—Take one quart of grape juice, two cupsful of orange juice, and two cupsful of sugar; mix and stir until the latter is dissolved; turn into a freezer and freeze. When half frozen take out the dasher and add the beaten whites of two eggs, mixing well. Pack, and set away to harden.

Carrots—Pare and quarter one-half dozen large carrots; put them into a sauce-pan; cover with boiling water; add a pinch of salt, and boil until tender. Serve with cream sauce.

serve many quiet, leisure hours for reading. Fortunately—for the reading—they have been able to effect a combination of social pleasure and mental effort that has resulted in the popular reading clubs that have already been mapped out for the matrons, belles and debutantes of this season. These readings are sometimes arranged by a society woman, who prepares her own program and invites her special friends to attend the course without money and without price. Again, a number of society favorites are invited to act as patronesses to a series of readings that have been launched by some enterprising, clear-headed young woman who, though not in the swim, desires to profit by its existence.

In Golden-Hued Velvet.

The young hostess who entertains lavishly must needs have a lot of smart gowns this season, for, though she possibly be brave enough to appear in the same frock twice at someone else's house, she must always have something fresh for her own entertainments. Of course, this necessitates expense and outlay, but when one thinks of the amount of admiration one will elicit, why, it more than pays. Never is a woman at better advantage than when entertaining in her own home, where all the pretty womanly ways are called into play, and her unselfishness is unbounded in caring for her guests. She knows she is the center of gravitation for the present, and the thought is pleasant. A young matron who is feeling the joy of preparing to entertain in her home for the first time, though married three years, has a very pretty though simple, frock for the first affair and many a pretty design for those to follow. She is to give a succession of entertainments through the winter. This gown is composed of creamy white crepe de chine, golden-hued velvet, and lapsels of embroidered satin in butter yellow. The skirt is laid in large, tapering box plaits, with the under parts of the golden-colored velvet; a charming combination. The bodice is of the velvet, cut to come below the waist at the front in sharp little points, though round at the back. It has a full vest of creamy mousseline de soie, plaited full and pouched over a belt of velvet. There are broad, stiffened revers of butter-yellow satin, and sharp pointed cuffs of the same finishing. The elbow sleeves are enriched with a delicate tracery of gold. A deep crushed stock of velvet has a huge bow at the back, and with the tiny gilt slippers, complete the costume.

Answers to Correspondents.

Quarrelsome Couples.—A subscriber asks the following question: "A man and his wife quarrel. Regardless of the provocation or circumstances, is a man ever justifiable for striking his wife, either with his hand or any article?" Answer: It seems strange in the present state of American civilization that anyone should, in soberness and truth, ask such a question. Certainly not. There is no justification for such an act. When a man cannot get along with his wife peacefully and without blows, it is his own fault. The remedy is worse than the disease. Wife-beating destroys the self-respect of the man who is guilty of the act and also of the woman who suffers from it. It destroys the mother's authority, and makes her a byword and a subject for contempt to her children and neighbors. The club and the fist are very poor domestic arguments, and are best left out of the household altogether.

An Unfortunate Girl.—Minna is in a good deal of trouble. She is fond of company, and would like to have young people call at her home, but her father is unwilling to furnish the house in a way to make it attractive or even passable, and as she has nothing but her piano she is ashamed to have her friends see the shabby rooms. She asks what she shall do. Answer: There seems to be very little to do except for Minna to make herself so attractive that her friends will never think about the rooms. She may become an accomplished musician and entertain so charmingly that all else will be forgotten. Besides, music sounds better in rooms where there are but few furnishings. Perhaps your father may be unable to afford new furniture.

Washington Irving said, he supposed a certain hill was called "Rattlesnake Hill" because it abounded in—butterflies. It's "rule of contrary" governs other names. Some bottles are, supposedly, labeled "Sarsaparilla" because they are full of . . . well, we don't know what they are full of, but we know it's not sarsaparilla; except, perhaps, enough for a favor. There's only one make of sarsaparilla that can be relied on to be all it claims. It's Ayer's. It has no secret to keep. Its formula is open to all physicians. This formula was examined by the Medical Commission at the World's Fair with the result that while every other make of sarsaparilla was excluded from the Fair, Ayer's Sarsaparilla was admitted and honored by awards. It was admitted because it was the best sarsaparilla. It received the medal as the best. No other sarsaparilla has been so tested or so honored. Good motto for the family as well as the Fair: Admit the best, exclude the rest.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the proper physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness, without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, and sold by all reputable druggists. If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, then laxatives or other remedies are not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, then one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.
