SALT LAKE CITY AND NEIGHBORHOOD.

Dr. J. E. Talmage has gone to Millard county in behalf of the state land board to conduct a series of investigations as to the practicability of increasing the water supply by means of artesian wells. He will begin his investigations in the vicinity of Holden, and will look into the conditions on the desert west of these and in other places. When he returns the board will hold a special meeting to consider the question.

Rev. John T. Axton, recently appointed chaplain in the United States Army, has been ordered to Fort Russell, Wyoming, to assume his duties. He will discharge the duty of chaplain for the Eighteenth Infantry, which is stationed there, and with which regiment he will be permanently connected. Mr. Axton left last week for his new post, taking his family with him. Mr. Axton was some time ago assigned to the Eighteenth Infantry, but was left at the post here for the time being.

The second story of the Summit block, which only extends back about thirty feet, on the west side of Main street, between Second and Third South streets, may soon be torn down and a new floor constructed in its place, extending from the front of the building to the rear, which opens onto the alley running north and south through that business block. The ground floor of the building is now occupied by the Lave House and the L. & A. Cohn dry goods firms. The second story, which runs about a third of the way back, is occupied by offices, with an entrance on Main street. The volume of business of the two companies has so increased that they require more floor space.

Commissioner Helmer estimates that about 3,000,000 pounds of coffee are used each year in Utah, which is equal to twelve pounds per capita. That is an increase per capita of four pounds during the past few years. Two-thirds of the annual consumption is of a very low grade, selling at an average of 12 cents per pound. Of the 2,000,000 pounds of low-grade coffee used the commissioner thinks at least 25 per cent of it is adulterated. Through that adulteration he figures the people are annually cheated out of $60,000 worth of good coffee.

M. J. O'Meara left Tuesday for Tonopah and the Lone mountain district, Nevada. Mr. O'Meara expects to be away until Christmas time looking after the interests of the King Tonopah and the Alpine companies' mines in the districts named.

Money makes money. Yes, if you know how to invest safely. There is one golden rule to be observed. It is, trust no person. For every dollar you loan, get gilt edge security and you cannot possibly lose your hard earnings. We carry a large list of such securities, all first mortgages. After a thorough examination, and we find title perfect, we loan our own money, then give these securities to our customers who have money to loan. In this way the customer is perfectly safe, trusts nobody and is his own banker. Write for a list of securities to McGurkin & Co., 38 West Second South, Salt Lake.

Thanksgiving Day at Kearns-St. Ann's Orphanage

A happier crowd of children could not be found anywhere than were those at the Kearns St. Ann's orphanage Thursday. From early morning till they retired at night their smiling faces indicated their peace, contentment and happiness. Friends, by their presence, added to the pleasure of many of the little ones.

At an early hour all assembled in the little chapel to give thanks to God for the favors and blessings bestowed on them. Hymns of praise to the giver of all good things were sung by all. The praises and grateful acknowledgments of so many innocent little ones ascending like sweet incense before the throne of God. Father Kelly spoke to the children and told them how they should unite in spirit with children throughout the world and breathe of the land in returning thanks to God for the many favors bestowed on them. He told them that the greatest favor of all was that they were all in good health, that they would be under the roof of St. Ann's, and that they should all thank God for that great favor; that they should pray to God every day to extend that blessing to them whilst they would be under the roof of St. Ann's. He told them what a good father they all had in Bishop Scanlan, who was so deeply interested in their welfare, thanked God every day because they had a good school, where they could learn to be good and useful citizens, and that all the good things that were in the world were theirs to enjoy. He told them not to forget Mr. Kearns, who gave them their nice home, and Pat Phelan, who gave all that he had to buy food, clothing, shoes and coal to make them happy and comfortable, who remembers them on every Thanksgiving day by sending them all the turkeys they needed.

When the little ones appeared on the stage, neatly dressed, they presented a picture like that of a fairy land. All, even little tots 3 and 4 years old, performed their part with precision and accuracy that would do credit to older children. The address was by three boys and two girls. H. Townley began by saying: "This is Thanksgiving day, and we children are happy, content and united with all children of the city and our beloved country in giving thanks to God and never forgetting our good blessings we enjoy."

OGDEN.

Sacred Concert at St. Joseph's Church Thanksgiving Eve.

The most important event during the past week in Ogden was the grand sacred concert given on Thanksgiving evening in the beautiful new St. Joseph's church. The concert was the best ever given by local talent. The following was the musical programme rendered: Sacred Fantasia—"Providence"..... Theodor M. Tobani Short's Orchestra "There is a Great Joy Away"..... Charles Gounod Mrs. Florence Purdy Powell. "O, Love Divine"..... George B. Nevill In Edgemoor Conroy. Cornet Solo—"The Holy City"..... Mr. Carl Litzenger. Male Quartette—"Lead, Kindly Light"..... Dudley Buck Messrs. Ferrin, Hinchcliff, Tout, Anderson. Hosannah..... Jules Granier Mrs. Mary Harrington Stevens. "King of Eternity"..... Harrison Jones Mr. H. H. Anderson. "Veni Creator"..... Harrison Millard Mrs. Stevens, Miss Hendershot, Mr. Ferrin and Mr. Tout. "The Last Chord"..... Arthur Sullivan "Fear Not, Ye, O Israel!"..... Dudley Buck Mrs. Bessie Dean Allison. "Te Deum"..... Harrison Millard Mr. Shannon, Ferrin, Miss Eleanor Henderson and Chorus. A full account of the successful affair will appear in next week's issue of the Intermountain Catholic.

That it was a success in every way is gratifying to every one, but it is no surprise. All of Ogden's citizens, both Protestant and Catholic, are proud and happy to always assist Rev. Father Cushman in any undertaking. It can be truly said that he is the best loved and most popular citizen of Ogden.

The rest of the fine stained glass windows arrived last Monday and were placed in the magnificent church for the concert.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald entertained at dinner on Friday of last week in honor of Governor-elect John Spinks of Nevada.

On Friday afternoon of last week Miss Nellie Healy entertained in honor of Miss Emma Wright.

Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, with her guests, Mrs. Sheedy, Mrs. King and Miss King, visited in Salt Lake last week. They were the guests of Mrs. Charlton and Mrs. Marks.

H. N. Reno of Butte was in Ogden last Tuesday.

Mrs. T. Kennedy is back from a visit with her sister in Oakland, Cal.

Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald's of the past two weeks, Mesdames Sheedy and King, and Miss Louise King, left last Saturday for their California homes.

with all children of the city and our beloved country in giving thanks to God and never forgetting our good blessings we enjoy."

Next came M. Glassett, saying: "And why should not we be happy and give thanks to God, who gives us all good health, so many of us little ones have all we want—plenty to eat, nice, cozy dormitories to sleep in, and can go to school every day, summer and winter."

C. Morgan next spoke, saying: "I knew M. Glassett would spoil our little entertainment by being so selfish and forgetful. He tells about having all and never mentioned our good bishop's name, who got all these wants. Plenty to eat, yes; turkeys, too, and you forgot to say 'Thank you, Mrs. Keith, who sends turkeys every Thanksgiving day.' Nice, cozy dormitories, yes; but no nice boy would forget to thank Mrs. Kearns, who provided all these for us. That Martin always makes blunders, except when he is eating and sleeping."

M. Warner enters as a peacemaker, saying: "Stop this quarrelling, boys, on Thanksgiving day. Martin did not get the bishop, or Mrs. Keith, or Mrs. Kearns. How could he? Did we not all pray for them this morning? We do it each day. You saw how bashful and nervous Martin was whilst talking. That was his first speech. Now, I think he is good timber to make governor of the state out of him."

C. Stevenson concluded the address by saying: "Indeed, Miss Warner, you need not lecture the boys. Leave them to the sisters, and they will tell them what to do. But let me say to you, that one word about the bishop, Mrs. Keith or Mrs. Kearns, to whom we all are and ever will be grateful. How to express we do not know. I will say for all the boys and girls that they are thankful to you, dear Bishop, dear Mrs. Keith and dear Mrs. Kearns. The only way we can show our happy and grateful feelings is by singing for you 'My Old Kentucky Home.'"

At the conclusion, Bishop Scanlan thanked the children for their nice and successful entertainment, and congratulated them on their healthy and neat appearance. He said if they did it well in all their other studies as they did in their little entertainment to-night, he was satisfied that they were doing nicely the rest of the year. Advantages they had. How a good lady came once a week and spent nearly two hours in teaching them catechisms, physics, and to be so graceful in all their movements. "That is a big favor, children," he said, "and forms a part of education as well as reading, figuring and writing. Then he spoke another big advantage they had, namely, a good man, whose services could not be purchased for money, came once a week to teach them stenography and typewriting. He has been doing that quietly for six years, and some of his pupils today are making their own living, and their employers speak highly of them. "You do not know, my children," said the bishop, "how highly favored you are in having those good people come here and teach you. They love you, for it is only love that could prompt them to come."

The bishop thanked the large audience for their presence. It was an encouragement to the children, and also to himself, to see that the public appreciated the work done at the orphanage. No nobler or grander work than in raising children up to be good and useful citizens. That was the mission he proposed to himself when he founded the old St. Ann's home. God has blessed the work, and your presence lends enchantment to its success, and I assure you a great encouragement to my dear sisters. The bishop concluded his remarks by thanking God for the blessings bestowed on the institution and the people for their generous support in carrying on the good work.

When all was over, the children, after a long day of successful festivities, retired happy and content.

Gifts from generous friends were: Mrs. Keith, sixty turkeys; Mrs. Kervin, 100 pounds of candy; Mrs. M. Fitzgerald, apples and candy. The Salt Lake Soda works sent generous greetings to the orphanage.
