

Diocese of Denver.

THE DENVER LETTER.

A Denver Priest Honored.

A signal honor was conferred upon a Denver priest last week when the Very Rev. Henry Robinson, vicar general of the diocese of Denver, was raised to the degree of monsignor by the late Pope Pius XI. The announcement was a source of gratification to the entire body of clergy of the diocese as no priest is so well and favorably known. The late pope's venerable pastor belongs some to the ranks of his work in the Rocky mountain region to which he has devoted his life. Years ago, when this broad field was yet unbroken by the foot of the missionary, Father Robinson came out west and struggled to plant the cross in the wilderness. One of his most notable achievements followed in 1870 when he was appointed vicar general of the diocese. For many years his labors were not the growing town of Denver, the zealous pastor labored there among the miners, teaching them to work for a higher and more noble life than the vain quest for gold, and now the work which he planted has taken root and Leadville is today one of the most thoroughly Catholic towns of Colorado. And through these years he has not been forgotten for his early efforts which are now so gloriously bearing fruit, and the honor of which he is now the recipient has brought untold pleasure to hundreds of his old flock in the mountain towns, as well as to his Denver parishioners.

Last Thursday the pastors of the city, with a few from outside cities who were visiting in Denver at the time, were invited to dine with Right Rev. Bishop Matz. At the time there was some speculation on the part of the guests as to the occasion for the celebration, but it was thought to be something in connection with the plans for the new cathedral. When the dinner was over and the company had adjourned to the bishop's study, the startling information was given out that a communication from Rome had been received by Bishop Matz announcing that the venerable monsignor of the Denver diocese had been raised to the dignity of monsignor. By the appointment, Father Robinson is now a domestic prelate to Pope Leo, with the title of archbishop. When a monsignor, which is equal to the rank of a bishop without the responsibilities of the latter's position. He will wear the purple cassock with which he will be invested on an early day. The office will not interfere with Father Robinson's pastorate of the Annunciation church, or with his duties as vicar general of a growing diocese.

Although the news from Rome came to Denver Dec. 31, it was not until the Bishop Matz until he could meet the pastors to a body. It was, therefore, a complete surprise to all when the announcement was made. This is the first time in the history of the diocese in the Rocky mountains that the title of monsignor has been conferred, and Father Robinson has been receiving the congratulations of his colleagues ever since. The venerable institutions of the city there was general rejoicing among the Sisters and inmates, with whom Father Robinson has always been a great favorite. Those present at the dinner were: Bishop Matz, Very Rev. Henry Robinson, vicar general, Rev. P. A. Phillips, chancellor of the diocese; Rev. M. F. Callanan of the cathedral, Rev. William O'Ryan of St. Leo's, Rev. P. Carrigan of St. Patrick's, Rev. Edward Cantwell of St. Joseph's, Rev. Francis O'Neill, O. D., of St. Dominic's, Rev. Father Pius, O. F. M., of St. Elizabeth's, Rev. Richard Brady of St. Joseph's, Rev. Timothy O'Brien of St. John the Evangelist, Rev. John J. Jarzanski of Holy Trinity, Rev. J. B. Quinn and Rev. J. J. Brown of the Sacred Heart college, Rev. Henry R. Mitchell of Idaho Springs and Rev. J. D. Sullivan.

A committee consisting of Rev. Father Phillips, Carrigan, O'Ryan and Brady was then appointed to make arrangements for the ceremonies which will mark the occasion at which Father Robinson will be invested with the purple robes and insignia of his office. The services will take place in the church of the Annunciation, and will be participated in by nearly every priest of the city and a number of out-of-town places, who will come to Denver for the occasion. Already elaborate preparations are being made for the event.

Father Robinson was born in Salem, Ill., in 1842, and at an early age was ordained priest of the Catholic church. Since that time he has lived entirely in Colorado, devoting his efforts to the upbuilding of this diocese. The entire community followed in the honor which has been accorded him.

The date for the annual musicale for the pupils of the Immaculate Conception school has not been set. The musicale will take place before the end of January. As usual, admission will be by invitation.

Next Sunday will be meeting day for the St. Anthony sodality of the Logan avenue chapel. The boys will receive Holy Communion at the 7 o'clock mass.

Father O'Malley preached at the high mass in Logan avenue chapel last Sunday in the gospel of the day. His sermon was a glowing tribute to the obedient spirit of the Child Jesus and showed in what manner it could be imitated by the children of today.

The promoters of the League of the Sacred Heart will meet on next Sunday afternoon in Logan avenue chapel.

Rev. Cornelius J. Farrell of the cathedral who has been quite ill for the past two weeks, is now on the road to recovery.

The mission to be given by the Jesuit Fathers of Chicago will open with solemn high mass in Logan avenue chapel on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Special music has been prepared for the occasion. The opening sermon will be preached at this service, and at 7:30 in the evening devotions will be held. It is the intention at present to devote the first week to women and the second to men. As the arrangements seem desirable to many, there is possibility that a church will be made. Services will be held at 8 and 8 o'clock on the morning and 7:30 in the evening. At the early morning mass there will be five-minute instruction, but at the other services a sermon will be given. Confessions will be heard every afternoon after Tuesday, beginning at 7 o'clock, and all who can find it convenient to do so early should do so as there are many who of necessity put it off till the last evening and this hinders the work of the missionaries.

An unusually enthusiastic and interested gathering marked the meeting of the Young Ladies' Sodality last Sunday afternoon when the annual election of officers was held. After the recitation of the office, the director, Rev. Father Callanan, thanked the serving officers for their excellent work during the year and announced that a committee of five would be appointed as organizers, whose work it would be to find new members for the sodality. It is hoped in this way to more than double the membership. The following officers were then elected: President, Miss Margaret O'Keefe; secretary, Miss Margaret O'Keefe; treasurer, Miss Rosalind Shiel, and librarians, Miss Julia Connor. All the new members have shown by their prompt attendance the deep interest they take in the welfare of the sodality and are well equipped to fill the various offices creditably. They were all in a great measure associated with the sodality.

Colton of the First New church of Denver, Sunday, at 10 o'clock, at the home of the dead man, 117 Eighth street. The rooms of the pretty home were crowded with friends. Banks of flowers embowered the casket and hid it almost from sight.

PUEBLO, COLO.

The Austrian St. Joseph society, one of the most prosperous and wide awake clubs of the city, Sunday closed its two days' celebration and dedication of their new hall located on the corner of B and Rush streets. The hall was just completed last week at a cost of nearly $17,000 and is one of the most beautiful club houses in the west. The new hall is a two-story building in size and accommodations for balls, dances and any sort of public meetings. Besides the main hall, which is 72 by 120 feet, there are cloak rooms, office, gymnasium rooms and a balcony that will give seating accommodations to 300 people. The hall is large enough to allow for couples dancing room and is one of the smoothest floors in the city. The St. Joseph's society is very proud of their work and the hall is a valuable addition to the development of the city. The membership of the club is now 250 and every member has a part in the construction of the new hall. Great enthusiasm prevailed at the celebration, which began at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. The honor of leading the first dance in the hall was sold to the highest bidder and the contest was so enthusiastic that the privilege was sold for $15. Frank Kravich was the buyer, and with Miss Frances Hoyer, led the grand march, in which 600 couples took part. Saturday evening was devoted to dancing and at midnight an elegant lunch was served. Sunday the crowd was equally as large and everything was done that was possible to make the guests enjoy the evening. The affair was under the management of a committee from the society and great honor is due them for the able manner in which the celebration was conducted.

The society is under the direction of the officers recently elected: Joe Culligan is the president and Andy Pajlich secretary. Both the president and the secretary, as well as the committee, worked hard for the success of the celebration and also to them are due much of the honor for the erection of the new hall. Fathers Cyril and Zupan of St. Mary's church were present at the celebration, which was held on both evenings. The hall will be open for all kinds of public meetings as well as for the affairs under the auspices of the society.

W. A. Conlon, secretary of the Knights of Columbus, received a letter from his old home in Buffalo, N. Y., conveying the sad intelligence of the death of his mother, Mrs. Conlon. Mrs. Mattie Jeanne Nevolt, who died Jan. 10 at the residence of her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. R. Thomas, 122 East Evans avenue, was born Dec. 27, 1850. Mrs. Nevolt died as she had lived, true to the Catholic faith. She was one who suffered much, but bore her trials patiently and with fortitude. The remains will be taken back to her old home in Kansas City, Mo., where she will be laid to rest in Mount Elmwood cemetery beside her young married daughter, who died five years ago. Funeral services will be conducted in the chapel on Oak street, Kansas City. The body will be accompanied by Mrs. Nevolt's sister, Mrs. Selby R. Thomas, and her son, Ernest Nevolt.

BESSIMER, COLO.

Father Antonio Masso, priest in charge of St. Carmel church in the town of Bessemer, died at his home on the street car feeder. In any event, the tender, said him from serious injury. It was about 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when Father Masso was driving east on Northern avenue in a light spring wagon. He was accompanied by a resident of Salt Creek and was hurrying to that settlement to visit a sick member of his church. At the corner of Northern and Evans avenues a southbound truck was struck by the wagon on the side as the driver attempted to pull his horse to one side to escape a collision. Father Masso was thrown from the seat and struck the ground directly in front of the car, the fender of which rolled him for about five feet and pushed him from the track.

The accident was witnessed by a large number of people, and a crowd soon gathered around. Fortunately, Father Masso was but slightly injured, the only injury he complained of at the time being to one of his arms.

Gaylord Wislizenus, the millionaire capitalist of New York, would carry off the nomination."

SCIENCE AND THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

(Continued from Page 1.) mous empire, she diligently sets to work to establish schools. At a council held in France in 529 her bishops, under the direction of the supreme pontiff, ordered the establishment of country schools and by virtue of a decree, cathedral and parochial schools were founded wherever it was possible to do so. It was at the commencement of the sixth century that the great cathedral schools of Spain were established; also the Benedictine schools, which spread like a network over the entire western church.

Like a tree which is judged by its fruit, these schools can be judged from the scholars which they sent forth. Among the illustrious men of learning might be mentioned a Faustus, a Hilary, the Gregories, Basils and many others, who were pupils of these schools, Mariana, the historian, writing of the school of Seville in Spain, said "that as if from a citadel of wisdom many came forth illustrious, both for probity of manners, and for learning." All these schools were enriched with libraries, which monks, who have been the target of abuse for four centuries, spent years in their cells transcribing on parchment. The history of the Catholic church in western Europe from the sixth to the sixteenth century is a direct contradiction of Historian's allegations, and shows her efforts to establish schools. This is especially true of England, Germany and France. The famous and renowned universities of Bologna, Paris, Oxford and Cambridge, were founded by Catholics prior to the sixteenth century.

Guizot, an author hostile to the Catholic church, writes of the intellectual activity of the sixth century. He recommends and speaks highly of the poetry of St. Fortunatus, who flourished in the sixth century. He compares the poetry of St. Avitus with that of Milton, awarding the palm of merit, in many respects, to the former, who was bishop of Vienna in the sixth century.

If we follow the course of history from the sixth to the eleventh century we will find this intellectual activity encouraged by the church. The names of Alcin, Scotus, Ercgena and Raban Maur bespeak the intelligence of their time. The facilities introduced by the invention of the printing press for the general diffusion of knowledge were not as good as they have been since, yet there can be no question of the intellectual activity that prevailed everywhere in the eleventh century. St. Anselm was a brilliant scholar and profound philosopher. His treatise on the existence of God is unrivaled in any age, whilst his name is more than sufficient to redeem the age in which he lived.

From the eleventh to the sixteenth century the scholars and authors, who flourished, can hardly be surpassed. Abelard, as a professor of philosophy, Greek and Hebrew, was besieged with pupils from all parts of Europe. Albertus Magnus and St. Bernard enlightened the world by leaving to posterity the rich legacy of their gigantic intellects, consisting of twenty-two huge folio volumes, treating of the most varied subjects. As a metaphysical writer, St. Thomas Aquinas stands without a rival before or since his time. St. Bonaventure, Roger Bacon, Petrarch and Dante flourished during this period, yet Historian, apparently oblivious of the fact, terms these Dark Ages.

The names quoted flourished when Historian alleges that the "Catholic church by her authority retarded progress." They were all Catholics, and for their learning and piety received the highest marks of honor which the church could bestow, many being crowned as saints of the church.

Since the sixteenth century our esteemed correspondent seems to be satisfied with the attitude of the Catholic church. He comes down to date by referring to the action of the present supreme pontiff in appointing a commission of learned men to keep abreast of the times and meet all unfavorable criticism of the Bible. We are pleased to have Historian's approval of the action of the church in the twentieth century, whilst his assurance of a friendly spirit is consoling. But we can assure him that the church needs no special pleading for her attitude toward science and learning from the first to the twentieth century. Her record is an open one, showing that she always fostered science and learning. These were the peaceful implements of war, which she used when her soldiers of the cross tried to subjugate the savage and convert pagan nations. The first effort of the Spanish missionaries in the Philippines was to civilize the native savages, then preach to them the gospel of peace and good will. If we compare her success with that of our own efforts at home in civilizing the American Indians, we must award her the palm of success.

The reference made to Galileo in a postscript requires a special answer. We will give the reply in our next number.
