At the biennial meeting of the Independent Order of Foresters (High Court, south of Ireland), which was held on Monday at 13 Harcourt street, the report stated that the number of members had increased by over 100 per cent since the last meeting.

The jury found a verdict of death of shock and asphyxiation at the request of John Eskin, house painter, whose dead body was found in the smouldering hayloft back of 2 Lesson Park on Sunday night after an outbreak of fire. No information transpired as to why or how the deceased came into the loft.

Mr. John O'Leary presided on Thursday at a meeting in the Mansion House in furtherance of the projected pilgrimages to Lough Linnane next year. Letters of support were received, and suggestions were made that the trip might include places near Fontenoy, like Ramillies and Louvain. A strong committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

A case of considerable importance to trade unionists was heard before Mr. Drury in the Southern police court yesterday. James MacNamara sued the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners to recover £100 as accident benefit. The society raised the point of "no jurisdiction," and Mr. Drury said he was constrained to decide in accordance with the point raised. The plaintiff's solicitor said he would appeal.

Maurice Robayne met with a sad death on Friday while engaged stacking corn at Knockglass, Ladybridge, County Cork. He fell from the upper rung of the ladder on which he was standing and sustained such injuries that he succumbed almost immediately.

Meetings of the United Irish League in various parts of the country on Sunday voiced the popular feeling against exorbitant landlord demands. A meeting at Clannorris dealt with a recent circular by Mr. Rutledge, the agent. The West Waterford executive also met on Sunday.

An impressive ceremony took place at Letterkenny on Friday. In commemoration of the twelfth century of St. Eunan, the lord bishop of Raphoe (the Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell) laid the foundation stone of the new college. Important speeches on the education question were delivered.

The poor law reform commission sat on Thursday in Roscommon and heard suggestions from Mr. John Fitzgibbon, chairman county council; Mr. Mapother, chairman Roscommon union, and other Roscommon, Castlebar and Strokestown witnesses as to improvements in poor law administration.

On Thursday Mr. Christopher Efiery, county coroner, held an inquest at Rush on the body of Mr. Walter James Matson, which was found on the shore of Rush, and at the inquest a verdict was returned of "found drowned." The coroner conveyed an expression of sympathy to the relatives of the deceased.

On Monday at the Cork revision court a voter applied to have his name placed on the list in Irish characters, instead of English. An interesting discussion ensued, which resulted in the revising barrister refusing to grant the application on the ground that the law precluded him from acting otherwise.

On Friday an inquest was held in Carrickmacross by Mr. Thomas Dignam, coroner for South Monaghan, regarding the circumstances touching the death of a respectable farmer and dealer named James Marron, Mullacrogery. After evidence had been given, a verdict of death through heart failure was returned.

On Saturday the annual meeting of the Philanthropic Reform association was held at Killyraddy castle, under the presidency of the Earl of Meath, when the questions of street trading by children, day industrial schools, domestic service, workhouse reform and other subjects of social reform were discussed at length.

Addresses were delivered by Sir Horace Plunkett, the chairman, the vice president, the Rev. Father Finlay and other gentlemen, and a number of agricultural topics were discussed.

The Irish Reform association publishes a report explanatory of the suggestion as to devolution contained in its former report. It advocates the handing over of the control of Irish expenditures to an Irish financial council, half elected and half nominated, and the devolution to a statutory body of such parliamentary business as parliament itself may judge expedient.

A meeting of the tenantry on Lord Talbot de Malahide's estate, who have already agreed on the terms on which they will purchase their holdings, was held on Friday at Malahide to discuss questions still unsettled. They resolved to allow the sporting rights to the landlord for his life, to take the opinion of each tenant individually on the landlords' offer as to arrears, and to ask the landlord to sell to the estates commissioners, that the evicted tenants may be reinstated.

On Saturday an inquest was held in Cork on the body of an old woman named Ellen Kelleher, aged about 90 years, who died at the South Inhamon on Friday night as the result of injuries and shock caused by being knocked down and rolled over by a float in Cook street, Cork, on Friday. Dr. J. P. Higgins, resident surgeon at the infirmary, gave formal evidence of the reception of the deceased after the occurrence. Death, in his opinion, was due to shock caused by the accident. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the medical testimony.

On Thursday morning at 10 o'clock a particularly shocking accident occurred in the Brownlow Arms hotel, Lurgan, whereby a young woman named Julia McGlynn, aged about 21 years, was seriously injured. It would appear that the victim was in the front bar of the hotel boiling beeswax and turpentine for the purpose of floor polishing, when the sauceman overflowed, and in attempting to quench the flames, the girl's clothing ignited, and before anyone came to her assistance she was badly burned about the face, arms and body. The patient is progressing as favorably as can be expected.

The show of Irish fruit and conference of fruit growers, to be held in the Royal Dublin society's premises at Ballsbridge on the 19th and 20th of next month, should prove of considerable value to the increasing class of people directly interested in the fruit industry in this country. Fruit growing in Ireland, like the raising of eggs and poultry, has never been taken in hand with sufficient seriousness or determination, except in one or two districts. It is generally looked on as a minor business, not worth bothering about very much. But there is a vast amount of money now spent on fruit in these countries, and the consumption of apples, pears, plums, etc., is certainly increasing all round, even amongst the poorer classes. The show and conference will be a timely opportunity for Irish growers to exchange opinions and compare notes. They will be under the auspices of the agricultural department.

The want of a residence for the nuns of the Order or the Little Company of Mary, and who are in charge of St. John's hospital, has long felt by the friends of that invaluable institution, and it was in accordance with that feeling that so many of them were present today to witness the foundation stone of the new building being laid by the bishop, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Dwyer. Twelve o'clock was the hour fixed for the ceremony, and despite the inclement weather, there was a large attendance of the laity and clergy. A platform had been raised for the visitors, and the bishop, in canonicals, and attended by Father Griffin, administrator of St. John's, and the acolytes, discharged the ceremony with a silver trowel, on which there was a suitable inscription, and which was presented to Dr. O'Dwyer by the contractor, Mr. Gough. On the stone was a Latin inscription, which will be visible from the square, set as it will be in the handsome front of the convent.

FIRST PRIZE FOR MUSIC.

Ireland's Own Band Wins in World's Fair Competitive Contest.

"Concessionaires' Day" on Thursday, Sept. 8, was one of the great social days at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis. Among the various features of the day was a magnificent parade, in which all the nations and races of people represented at the fair participated, each concession being headed by a large brass band. Some of the musical organizations were very large, that of the Philippine Scouts aggregating more than 100 musicians. Some of the principal bands of the United States as well as from foreign countries were in line. Ireland was represented by ten jaunty cars, beautifully decorated with artificial flowers and flags, drawn by splendid thoroughbreds, and filled with the prettiest of cooleens. The cars were headed by Ireland's Own, band of Dublin, which played Irish music exclusively, along the line of march. The Irish section was universally conceded to be the noisiest and daintiest portion of the parade, and greeted, by thunders of applause as it passed through the mass of sight seers.

As the Irish contingent neared the reviewing stand, the band struck up an arrangement of the "Lament of the Irish Emigrant." The trim, military appearance of the men and their clean-cut execution of the music brought a storm of cheers and applause from the tens of thousands of spectators who thronged the plaza, and the cars came in for their share, as they followed. It was a sight that made Irish hearts beat high, for in that three miles of procession, dazzling the sight with gorgeous oriental color, there was nothing so beautiful as the simple display made by Ireland.

Immediately after the dispersion of the parade the judges met to decide the winners in the various contests. Ireland's Own Band was unanimously awarded the first prize of $100 in gold for the best appearance and performance of the day. The Boer War section composed of 700 veterans of the conflict in South Africa, superbly mounted, carried off the first prize for appearance, but Ireland came in a close second, taking the second prize of $50 in gold.

A girl in the Paris section won the prize for being the most beautiful woman in the parade, but only after much discussion, as one of the Irish girls, Miss Josephine Collins, was named by several of the judges. Miss Collins was dressed in simple white, with a red Kerry cloak and looked the ideal of beauty. She was awarded the second prize.

JOAQUIN MILLER'S TESTIMONY.

"I know that the miracles attributed to St. Anne, the good St. Anne de Bearyre, as they call her, are authentic, and that, if miracles were wrought in olden times, they are still wrought nowadays. There may come, and doubtless will come, many American travelers disposed to laugh at all they see. Americans are so fond of laughing! But allow me to say it, this measure of our national character, which makes us smile at what we don't understand, and treat with contempt ideas current elsewhere, sometimes does a great deal too far."—Joaquin Miller.

THE IRISH VOLKFEST.

In a little cafe on William street, New York, says the Tribune of that city, a sign has been posted for the last week inviting patrons to buy tickets for an Irish Volkfest. The combination is so peculiar as to attract the attention of every one entering the place, and the comments have been many and varied. "Well, wouldn't that make you angry?" said one big Irishman, after he had studied the Irish Volkfest sign from several angles. "It will be 'Sprakenze Irish' next."

"I suppose the sign means that it is an Irish picnic with a German hand," offered another. "Well, there was a time in New York when a sign like that would have caused a riot. Any cafe showing one of them would have been mobbed. Indeed, it would have been mobbed twice. The Germans would have been just as judgment as the Irish."

The proprietor of the cafe offered

Catholic Advertising.

Catholics who desire to contribute their full share to the success of Catholic journalism should patronize those business firms whose advertisements appear in their Catholic paper. And they should make the knowledge of this fact one of the considerations of their trading. It may be put down as a rule that the houses which do not advertise in your Catholic paper are unfriendly to it. The fact that a firm does advertise in your Catholic paper is a guarantee that it considers your patronage worth the having. It is a guarantee that it believes you a desirable customer and is willing to patronize your paper to secure you. Such people are worthy of your patronage and you should always scan your paper to see who they are. If you have money to spend, they are the people who should have the first call on it.

This explanation: "This picnic is given by a concern which employs only Irish and German help. They get along in perfect harmony, and the picnic will go off without the least sign of racial conflict. The only Irish-labeled Irish girls will dance with the red-faced German youths, and the flaxen-haired German maidens will jig with the Irish boys. The two races have been growing closer together as time goes on. They have been crowded into the same quarters by the Italian and Jewish immigrants, and there has come about a friendly understanding, as makes an 'Irish Volkfest' possible."
