Clonmel.

In the town hall, Clonmel, a meeting, convened by the mayor at the request of the corporation, was held to express sympathy with the bishop of Waterford in the recent litigation forced upon him in the Dublin law courts.

Cork.

At the last meeting of the Cork chamber of commerce, Mr. Augustine Roche, M. P., presiding, a resolution was passed, on the motion of Mr. Patrick Cahill, seconded by Mr. Charles McCarthy, that a crisis has arisen in the history of the country which calls for united and immediate action on the part of all Irishmen, and calling on the leaders of the Irish people, irrespective of past differences, to come together and determine on a policy in this moment of grave national peril and difficulty.

Kilkenny.

The farmers in the parish of Templeoran, County of Kilkenny, have combined to abolish the supplying of intoxicating drink, at hay-making and threshing. This decision has been arrived at as the result of a three weeks' mission conducted by Rev. Father Risher, Rev. Father Murphy and Rev. Father Keating of the House of Missions, Ennisceorty.

Westmeath.

Very Rev. Luke Barton, P. P., V. F., Castleton-Geoghegan, County Westmeath, is dead at the patriarchal age of 82. Deceased, who was ordained at Maynooth in 1848, was greatly esteemed in the diocese of Meath. He was an ardent nationalist, and gave practical support to the various movements calculated to advance the Irish cause, during his career. His remains were laid to rest beneath the shadow of the handsome church which he designed.

Clare.

Dr. McAuliffe was elected medical officer of Labashedda dispensary by the Kildarett grand jury on June 26. At the 12 o'clock mass, June 16, in Ennis, the Most Rev. Dr. Fogarty, lord bishop of Killaloe, at the termination of the mass, referred to his late visit to Rome, and administered the Papal Benediction to the immense congregation.

Eillard, late master of the Glin industrial schools, took place on June 19 at Marino, County Dublin, where he had been since his resignation a couple of months since of the charge of the schools, owing to illness. He was in the 64th year of his age, and the thirty-fifth of his religious profession, and belonged to a highly respected family of Buttevan, County Cork. He was a worthy member of the Order of Christian Brothers and his too early demise will be lamented by all who had the privilege of knowing him.

Longford.

John Meenan, Aghlitrach, Longford, died June 17, aged 80 years. Miss M. Bligh, Glencose, Castlereagh, was elected nurse in the Grand Union on June 17.

IRISH FACTORY GIRL.

First Woman in U. S. to Receive Government Medal for Bravery.

The first woman in the United States to receive a medal from the government for bravery in risking her own life to save another, is Miss Mary Guinan of Middletown, N. Y. She has been employed in a shirt factory for the last eighteen years. She is about 40 years old and, with a sister, is the sole support of an aged and infirm mother and a little nephew and niece.

Dec. 19 last, when Miss Guinan was returning from her work at the shirt factory, she saw John C. Runyon, an aged grocery merchant of the city, standing on the Erie railroad track at Montgomery street awaiting for a train to pass. The train was going west and Runyon did not see an east-bound train approaching. Miss Guinan saw the old man's danger, and, stooping under the gates, pushed the aged merchant off the east-bound track as the train rushed past. The two were then in a space of less than three feet, with a train rushing past at high speed on each side.

Miss Guinan held the old man firmly until one of the trains passed, and then assisted him to the sidewalk. Miss Guinan went home without giving her name, and told no one about the incident. But the spectators told of her brave act, with the result that the industrial commission awarded her the bronze medal.

KILLARNEY TREES.

(Written for The Pilot.) Moss-capped they stand, each tree the story of the lute-voiced bird, his citizen wings. Not for the heart that whispers on the strings. Of Erin's harp—oh! strings—the murmurers! Not when the careful step of deer descends. Debatable o'er crevice and o'er rock. (Killarney dreams—she knows the startled knock. Of putting leaves within that night of hers.) Unmoved they stand, and ever in ivy shroud. Vibrant beneath their outer veil of calm. They fold their round about with sacred green. Green which was Druid charm to souls embalm!

I through the silence heard the canticle Of haunted forests, lone, primordial. —Lillian Shuman Dreyfus. Killarney, May 21, 1907.

Kerry Cows for Long Island, N. Y.

Dwarf cows no larger than a Shetland pony or a St. Bernard dog are something of a novelty in America, though they are common enough in Ireland, where they are known as the Dexter, or Kerry cows. They promise to add a novel feature to the picturesque side of fashionable life in the Hamptons section of Long Island.

Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg, who owns an estate of some 200 acres adjoining the house of the Meadow Brook Country Club, is the prime mover in starting the sale in this country, and has recently brought from Ireland two fine specimens which are to be augmented by another importation, now on its way from the other side.

Kerry cows never grow more than thirty-six or thirty-eight inches in height. In appearance they might be compared with an ordinary-sized cow as a dachshund might to a bound of normal proportions. They are squat in appearance, with a fairly good-sized body, but with short legs. They are kind and gentle, and although so much smaller than ordinary cows are equally fine milk producers. The animals are raised in various places in Ireland besides Kerry.

A COOLING RECIPE.

Good Results From Mixing Common Sense and Hot Weather.

(Washington Herald.) If the people of this country would mix a little common sense with the hot weather, they would find the good old summer time much more nearly bearable. Some heat prostrations are unavoidable, of course. So long as men mutter and mope in the broiling sun we must expect to hear of victims of high temperature. But when supposedly intelligent human beings deliberately go to the extreme of thoughtless, foolishness in weather, like this, there is nobody to blame but themselves.

One may accomplish wonders in the way of avoiding the effects of hot weather by the use of a little common sense. Especially when especially violent exercise, should not be taken in the heated part of the day, and persons not accustomed to outdoor life should be careful how they go about under a hot sun at all. The mind should be kept off the subject of the weather, too. Don't talk about it continually. Don't go about saying, "Wh-e-e-e-w, isn't it hot?" or something else equally as ineffectual and useless. Don't worry yourself, and don't worry others. There are many things worse than hot weather, and there is no excuse for failure to apply common sense to the problems it presents.

Where They Were Not Bad.

A visitor who was going through the penitentiary one day, turned to the warden and said: "I suppose you have a good many bad people here?" "Bad! Bad people here?" ejaculated the warden, with an air of complete surprise. "What put that into your head? There are no bad people here. Why, if they wanted to be bad we would not let 'em."

The warden smiled grimly, and the visitor awakened to the fact that the "pen" was not the place where people wished to afford to be bad even if they wished.

"By George!"

"By George!" which is the president's nearest approach to profanity, is an expression ranking with Shakespeare and the love of liberty as a common heritage of the English-speaking world. For "By George"—which used to be "fore George"—is no evasion of the type of "bagad," "golly," "gosh" and the old "by cock!" It is simply the old adoration of the English national saint—the shorthand form of the battle cry, "St. George for England!"—which has been ours ever since Richard Coeur de Lion defeated Saladin on St. George's day in 1192.

TOLSTOI'S PROPHECY.

Great Russian Predicts Downfall of the United States.

The downfall of the United States is predicted by Count Leo Tolstoy. In an interview recently with Stephen Bonsal, the latter spoke of America as having grown great and strong.

"Great and strong? Great and strong!" Tolstoy pounced upon my commonplace before it was uttered. "But it is not the sly, furtive politicians say you are great and strong? I grant you were great and strong in the days of Emerson and Thoreau, but today you place your trust in your vaults. Great and strong! Oh, I think not. A nation like an individual, is only strong by the faith that is in it, and today I fear the faith of America is in the almighty dollar. A man's work is the reflection of a man's soul. A man's soul is the conception of his Maker, the Supreme Being. Of course, I do not know, but I think the rude images of the Indians are more grateful to deity than your rushing railroads and your never-resting factories, which have enslaved the freest people. At least the Indians have vague ideas of eternity and of a God, and with rude, trembling fingers tried to incorporate it, but you think only of time, and of 'big men.'"

In his earnestness the count now rose, and forgetting his well nigh four score years, walked up and down in his study with the stride of a young man. "Prosperity, prosperity!" he repeated. "What a shameful plea that is which your American platform makers address to the voters. They do not say, 'We will give you an honest, righteous government,' but they say, 'We'll make you all fat and sleek if you vote for me you will have a double chin!' And no one arises to say, 'What will your full dinner pails profit you if while gorging your bellies you lose your immortal souls?'"

Then the count stopped and gazed at the photographs which adorn his study, speaking likenesses that were of Emerson, Thoreau, Channing, Bush, Henry George and the late Ernest Howard Crosby.

"Oh! I thank you for what your country has given the world in the lives of these men. I thank you for what you have given me in the past. But in the future I have my fears. I see no one to follow in their footsteps. There were tears in the count's eyes as he spoke of his love and affection for those great Americans. Of Mr. Bryan's visit to the farm he spoke with gratitude. But for the rest of our statesmen he made it quite clear that they are outside the Tolstoyan pale.

"The fall of America," he continued. "When I see the deserted shrines of your forefathers, I think it will come more swiftly than came the fall of Rome. We of the world have been punished for our covetous designs upon the lands and the wealth of our neighbors, but with what mercy and tenderness we were punished! I cannot but think that the great Judge knew that at heart the Russian people were not guilty of covetousness; that they, blinded and bound, were led by the score of misguided or wicked men, and so, it seemed right that our punishment should be tempered with mercy. But you stole the Philippines, or at the best paid another robber to give up his claim, and your people at the polls have time and again sanctioned the theft. I hope there are extenuating circumstances that will speak for you, but I confess I see none."

"How can you take an interest in the duma? And why do the people in America take interest in it, too? The little duma a legislative body like the duma might do under conceivable circumstances is as nothing to the evil it is sure to do at present. One can say, and I surely will say, but little that is good of our present government in Russia; but certainly it is more favorable to the development of the perfect man than was that of Herod and Pilate."

"And yet under their rule he lived, and in spite of all obstacles he taught his lesson. Countless generations and millions of individuals have tried to follow in his footsteps, but one has ever attained his perfect manhood. So we seek to alter conditions rather than ourselves. I suppose because we find it easier."

"Then for one moment his iron mood relaxed, and relenting, he said: "No, no, forget that I had the temerity to say that. They are not all bad men; I am sure to do at present. One can say, and I surely will say, but little that is good of our present government in Russia; but certainly it is more favorable to the development of the perfect man than was that of Herod and Pilate."

Up With the Times. "I tell you, mum," remarked Sandy Pikes, as he dipped up the strawberries and cream, "when you are leading the hobble life you have to keep up with the times." "Is that so, my poor man?" said the sympathetic housewife. "Yes, indeed, mum. Why, this time last year I used to say I came from San Francisco and people used to give me handouts cause dey thought I was an earthquake sufferer. Now, if I should forget myself and say I came from San Francisco dey would be liable to hand me over to de police for being an escaped grafter."—Chicago News.
