

IRISH CHARACTER SKETCHES.

The Roadmaker.

He was always talking to himself. If he had not anybody else to talk to, and if he had, well that person might consider himself or herself lucky if they escaped beyond the reach of Peter Fahy's tongue in the short space of two hours. It was a study to watch Peter Fahy, the roadmaker, in conversation. Standing right before his listener, he held forth on all subjects under the sun, and at the end of his every sentence, the first finger of the right hand was placed on the palm of the left by way of emphasis, and the head assumed a slanting position. Every item of news or any remark of his Peter usually professed in this way: "I know ye in a hurry, but I won't keep ye long," and then, if the listener grew uneasy at the length of his remarks Peter caught the top button of the listener's coat with his right hand. "Just a minute, for I'm near the end now, an' ye'll live to see that what I say is true. Now, don't ye think I'm right (when Peter had stated his case). I know I am, for Peter Fahy wasn't born yesterday, an' Peter Fahy hasn't lived fifty years for nothin'."

P., John Quinlan, John street, Kilkenny, to Mary Bridget (Rosie) Meagher, only daughter of the late Thomas Meagher, Stephen street, Waterford.

Wicklow. Sister M. Catherine, a lay sister in the Presentation convent, Baitinglass, died suddenly April 27. Sister Catherine, after returning from 7 o'clock mass, at which she received holy communion along with the other sisters of the community, took breakfast as usual, and afterward went for a walk in the convent garden. She had only been there a short time, however, when she suddenly fell. Some of the other sisters and an employe who was at work in the garden, noticing her collapse, at once went to her assistance, and the Rev. Father O'Neill, P. P., who was immediately summoned, administered the last sacraments, but after a very brief time it was found that life was extinct. Sister Catherine, who was daughter of the late Dr. Heydon, Rathmore, was about 70 years old, and joined the Presentation order some thirty-five years ago.

The religious reception took place recently at St. Patrick's convent of Mercy, Sligo, of Miss Lillie Halpin (in religion Sister Mary), eldest daughter of Thomas Halpin, Rivers-town, Killycan. Most Rev. Dr. Clancy, bishop of Elphin, performed the ceremony, and preached an impressive sermon appropriate to the occasion.

The Emerald Isle. (An Uncollected Poem by John Greenleaf Whittier, in the Independent.)

The poem given below was never included in any collection of Whittier's works. I find it in a scrap book kept by his older sister, who thus preserved fifty other poems, few of which have ever been published, except in Garrison's Free Press and the Haverhill Gazette, in which they first appeared. The first two poems were published in the Free Press Aug. 3, 182, and the date of its composition is not indicated. It will be noticed that two of the three poems have Irish themes, his interest in the cause of liberty first taking this direction. His earliest anti-slavery poems came several years later.—S. T. Pickard.

Brightly figure thy shores upon history's pages, Where names dear to fame and to science long known, Like unsetting stars through the lapse of long ages.

From the sea girded Isle of Hibernia have shone: Fair island! thy vales are embalmed in the story Which history telleth of ages gone by.

When Ossian's proud heroes strode onward to glory And ocean's wave answered their loud battle cry.

The wild wind is creeping—the shamrock is cloeing Its foliage o'er many a dimly seen pile— Where entombed on the fields of their fame are reposing The proud, peerless chiefs of the Emerald Isle.

And in far later years, with the purest devotion To the high cause of freedom, full many a son Of the green shores of Erin, the gem of the ocean, Fair evergreen laurels of glory has won.

The martyred O'Neal and the gallant Fitzgerald, On the bright list of glory forever shall stand, And fame circle Emmet, the eloquent herald.

Who wakened the spirit and pride of his land, They are gone! They are gone! but their memories that linger On the shores where they perished no wretch shall revile,

No slave of a tyrant shall dare point the finger Of scorn at those sons of the Emerald Isle.

Hibernia, though tyrants seek to degrade thee, Thy proud sons of science acknowledge thy birth On the sea girded shores, whose high genius has made thee The gem of the ocean, the wonder of earth.

Long, long, has the halo of glory surrounded The memory of Bryan, the pride of thy shore; And o'er thy dim lakes and wild valleys have sounded The heart touching strains of Carolan and Moore;

O, soon may the banners of freedom wave o'er thee, Green island of Erin! may liberty's smile To the luster of primitive ages restore thee, The gem of the ocean—the Emerald Isle!

Sentencing the Turks. On Sunday, the day after the occupation, no military pass was needed. Freely you rode through Pera and Stamboul, passing patrols which brought from their fine house-to-house search prisoners, in great-fallen, dogged march, on the way to trial before a court martial grinding out sentences of death with the summariness of a police court's disposition of drunks and disorderlies. Somewhere behind the walls firing squads were telling off the victims.—Frederick Palmer in Collier's.

Too Late to Begin. "Why don't you try to drive that horse without profanity?" "It wouldn't do any good," answered the canal boatman. "It ain't fair to the horse to ask it to start at its time o' life to learn a lot o' polite words."

A Bird's Nest in Church. A bird recently built its nest immediately above the hymn board on one of the pillars in the church at Lumsden, near Regina, Canada, and during worship the congregation could see the mother endeavoring to teach the young birds to fly. They were hatched out in the church, and advanced through the various stages to maturity without any mishap. The nest was now destroyed, and the bird never seemed frightened during the services.
