Wicklow.

Married.—On June 30, at the Church of the Assumption, Sandford, County Dublin, by the Rev. Philip Ryan, C. C., Patrick McCabe, Inspector Dublin metropolitan police, to Mary Ellen, second surviving daughter of the late Patrick Weldon, ex-R. I. C., and of Mrs. Weldon, Redcross, Co. Wicklow.

Mrs. Mary Brien has reached the great age of 100 years. She celebrated her last birthday on the first of June of the present year. Residing with her son in a cozy little cottage at Sandford, a short distance outside Duncrum, Mrs. Mary Brien, the old lady referred to, is in fairly good health, notwithstanding her age.

There are some photographs that are toned by the use of gold. For a time the image will become plainer, more distinct and sharper. It must then be washed off or the print will begin to fade, become dirty and spotted and finally ruined. So it is with character. The honest exchange of a reasonable income by energy, industry and enterprise will add influence and power to character, but too much gold with too little religion will forever blot and blur the image of God in man.—Walter Rhodes.

Right Rev. James J. Keene, D. D., third bishop of Cheyenne, consecrated Oct. 28, 1902, preached at the solemn vespers Aug. 15, on the occasion of the dedication of St. Mary Magdalen's cathedral.

The weather-beaten rocks of the summit are clad only with mosses and alpine plants. Thus it is with mountains, as perhaps with men, a mark of superior dignity to be naturally bold.—Henry Van Dyke.

CHEYENNE, WYO.

Mrs. R. J. Putman entertained a number of little girls yesterday afternoon for her daughter Helen. The party was a complete surprise to the little hostess and caused much merriment. The afternoon was pleasantly spent on the lawn playing games. Late in the afternoon they all enjoyed some excellent musical selections. The little girls who played were Mildred Burke, Helen Bailey and Margaret Umshler and Katherine Murray sang several pretty selections. A picture of all the guests on a sea-saw was taken, and as soon as they are finished will be given to them as souvenirs of the occasion. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Putman, assisted by Miss Frankie Dolan and Mabel Wilson of Russell, Kan. The guests were Mary and Winifred Garlock, Katherine Moore, Mildred Burke and her guest, Katherine Murray of Evanston, Wyo., Helen Bailey, Margaret Umshler, Helen Ulrich and Mildred Cook.—Cheyenne Tribune, Aug. 5.
