Parish Notes

Next Monday the Feast of St. Thomas Aquinas will be observed with vespers at St. Thomas' Theological seminary on Myrtle hill in South Denver. Priests from all the churches of Denver will be guests of the college on that afternoon, and a theological disputation will be not the least interesting feature of a program which has been carefully prepared.

The exercises begin at 3 o'clock and musical selections will possess a program which reflects deep thought. G. W. Ryan will open the afternoon with an oration and the salutatory, or formal welcome, will be made by J. C. MacKenzie. A vocal number by F. J. Brummel will follow, and then will come a paper on "Transubstantiation," by D. F. Callaghan. F. A. Upton will have a solo, and then the pater noster. St. Thomas will be read by F. J. Brummel and by J. D. Karnovsky, but any of the guests at the seminary will be privileged to put questions to be answered by Mr. Murphy. Annually the feast of St. Thomas is a solemn and interesting occasion at the seminary, and these disputation are a source of experience for the students and of gratification to the priests who are interested in the advancement of the seminary.

A lasting monument to the memory of the martyred Father Leo, pastor of St. Elizabeth's church, will be erected in the sanctuary for which the Franciscan Sisters will shortly break ground in the vicinity of Washington park. The announcement was made on the anniversary of Father Leo's death last week, and although it was known that the hospital would be built, the fact that it would be reared to the memory of Father Leo had not been hinted at.

The proposed sanatorium will be for the treatment of tuberculosis, and fifteen acres have been purchased out close to the St. Thomas seminary and near the site for the new home of the House of the Good Shepherd. Father Wulstan, O. F. M., assistant pastor of St. Elizabeth's church, and the priest who gave the idea, will be in charge, and one wing has been spoken for by the allied printing trades.

The directory edition of Parish Topics for the cathedral, which was distributed last Sunday, is being reissued. It contains the names and addresses of the 2,500 members of the parish, and incidentally gives away what financial responsibility was borne by each during the year 1909.

The Altar and Rosary society of the cathedral parish had mass celebrated on Tuesday for Miss Katherine Shea, who died last month. The pastor officiated.

Denver Knights of Columbus are on the qui vive over arrangement for the European pilgrimage which is scheduled for August of this year. Definite plans have been made. The number of pilgrims will number about thirty from previous indications. While the tour proper covers but fifty-two days, it is probable they will return on a later boat, giving two weeks' additional time for a tour of Ireland. The Knights and their friends sail August 6, Saturday, from Boston on the Romantic of the White Star line, and will stop first at the Azores. From the Gibraltar will be visited, and on August 15 Naples will be reached. From Naples a special train will be run to Pompeii, and on the return to Naples the sail for Genoa will be undertaken. Genoa, one of the principal seaport towns of Italy and the home of Christopher Columbus, will be one of the especially interesting points covered on the itinerary. A special program will be followed there, and leading Knights will make addresses. Pisa will be visited August 22, and that evening the party will leave for Rome. Four days will be spent in the Eternal City, a special audience having been arranged with Pope Pius X, who will give his blessing to the tourists. The following two days will be spent in Florence, and there they will attend high mass on Sunday, August 25. The tourists go to Venice from Florence and thence to Milan. Short visits to less important and interesting places will be made, Lucerne being reached September 2. From there the party goes to Obermergau. They will be entertained there in the homes of the principal performers. On Sunday, September 4, they will visit the Passion play, which begins at 8 o'clock in the morning and lasts until 6 o'clock in the evening, with two hours for lunch. Munich will be the next stop, and then Wiesbaden. Down the Rhine to Cologne the party moves, going next to Brussels and then to Paris. Four days, September 5, 10, 11 and 12 will be devoted to the French capital. On September 12 the start for London is made, and after four days there the tourists go to Dover, and on September 17 sail on the Zealand for home, arriving at New York September 26.

The Sacred-Heart Aid society held a regular meeting Thursday afternoon, March 3, at the home of Mrs. E. G. Straub, 1723 High street. The year books are now ready for distribution and present an attractive appearance. The members are much interested in their annual card party, which will be given at Knights of Columbus hall on the afternoon of St. Patrick's day. St. handed euchre will be played and handsome prizes awarded. The tally cards will be appropriately and handsomely decorated. Mrs. William A. Grainger is chairman of the arrangements committee.

A card party was given on Tuesday afternoon, March 1, by St. Clara's Aid society for the benefit of St. Clara's orphanage. The party was given at the home of Mrs. E. G. Straub, 1723 High street, and was one of a series designed to arouse interest in the work of the Sisters of St. Francis are doing in the care and domestic training of dependent girls.

St. Vincent's Orphan's Aid society had its annual election of officers Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. J. Dunn, 1827 Grant street.

The collision of a Rock Island train and a railway car Wednesday, February 23, was responsible for the death of John Joyce, a motorman, whose home was at 3543 Wyncope street. The accident occurred as the car was crossing the railroad tracks at Josephine street and East Forty-second avenue. The motorman was just entering the vestibule of his car after an inspection of the tracks, when the train crashed into the railway car, completely demolishing the latter. Mr. Joyce was thrown a distance of about twenty feet directly in the path of the moving car, and was buried in the wreckage. When picked up he was unconscious, and was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where he died early Thursday morning. Mr. Joyce was a member of uniform rank Ancient Order of Hibernians, division No. 1, which society had charge of the funeral, which was held from Annunciation church Saturday, February 21. Other fraternal organizations and a large concourse of sorrowing friends assisted at high requiem masses. The body to its resting place in Mount Olivet cemetery. Mr. Joyce was born in Ireland, and was about forty years of age. He had lived in Denver since 1901.

The death of Mr. Joyce is peculiarly sad, as it deprives a wife and five very small children of their natural protector. Albert Leon O'Neill, who was injured in the Colorado & Southern yards on Sixth street, died at St. Joseph's hospital on Wednesday, February 23, having been baptized in the Catholic faith a few hours previous. The young man, who was but twenty-one years of age, was working as fireman on a Colorado & Southern engine when he met with the accident which necessitated the amputation of both legs, and death resulted from the shock. He is survived by his mother, Mrs. C. H. Hammell of 2427 West Calhoun place.

Mrs. Mary Meehan of 3055 Walnut street, passed away on Thursday, February 24, after a long illness. The funeral took place Saturday afternoon from Sacred Heart church, and was attended by members of many religious societies which deceased had been affiliated. Interment was in Mount Olivet cemetery. Mrs. Meehan was the mother of Thomas and Hugh Meehan, well known residents of Denver.

A terrible tragedy has darkened the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond L. O'Laughlin at 2524 South Broadway. Their little daughter, who was five years of age, while at play on Thursday, February 24, set herself on fire with matches, and so severely burned that death resulted in a few hours. The little girl, who was named St. Joseph's church Sunday afternoon. Burial was in Mount Olivet cemetery. Mrs. O'Laughlin, who bravely attempted to extinguish the flames in her little daughter's clothing, was painfully though not seriously burned.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS

London.—Interest in politics centers in the premier's audience with the king and the prolonged cabinet council generally is considered to herald a probable change in the policy of the government. It is stated the prime minister conveyed to the king his belief in the impossibility of proceeding with the reconstruction of the house of lords and in the necessity of continuing the forces on the veto question. Although though several members of the cabinet strongly favor reconstruction, it is not believed a split will result, but the attitude of the Conservatives and Nationalists is disquieting.

New York.—A record fire in cold storage is reported a statement by Dr. Bayard C. Fuller, chief inspector of foods for New York City. According to the doctor's story, there was discovered in Russia some time ago the carcasses of a manatee, which scientist said had been alive before the glacial period. That meant that the body, still in perfect condition, was more than 10,000 years old. Tests showed the animal was probably a young one, and a steak from it was served at a dinner given by a prominent scientist. The guests pronounced the meat excellent. Once meat or poultry has been frozen, Dr. Fuller says, the bacteria time has no effect on it, and fermentation is completely arrested, so long as it is kept in a frozen condition. When thawing sets in, however, disintegration is rapid.

South Bethlehem, Pa.—Peace prevailed in South Bethlehem and its environs today, but the coal miners' company, many of whose employees are on strike, was not able to resume work as was expected when operations were stopped by the disturbances on Saturday night. At 10 o'clock the percentage of the 9,000 men reported for duty. Most of the men went to work, the officials say, but are afraid to run the gauntlet of the pickets. Since the shooting on Saturday night, when a miner was killed, the foreign element among the strikers has given the state police little trouble.

Spokane, Wash.—In swift succession two terrible disasters have carried death and dismay to the mining towns of the rich Coeur d'Alene district in northern Idaho. At 10 o'clock on Monday night a snowslide swept down the mountainside, striking the little town of Mace and burying twenty-five houses and their sleeping occupants in a mass of snow. In the morning the snow was cleared away, but the remains of the town of Mace, crushed a score of houses under thousands of tons of earth and snow.

Portland, Ore.—The bodies of six dead have been found at Burke, and how many are still buried can only be guessed at. It is feared fifty or sixty more are still buried under the snow. There is fear that the number of dead at Burke may be even larger than that at Mace. Every man that can be spared from the rescue work at Mace has been ordered to help at Burke. The bodies of the men were found at Burke, and were taken to St. Luke's hospital, where they died early Thursday morning. Mr. Joyce was a member of uniform rank Ancient Order of Hibernians, division No. 1, which society had charge of the funeral, which was held from Annunciation church Saturday, February 21. Other fraternal organizations and a large concourse of sorrowing friends assisted at high requiem masses. The body to its resting place in Mount Olivet cemetery. Walla Walla, Wash.—The catastrophe at Mace occurred at 11:30 at night, according to telephone reports received by the Union from Wallace, Ida., and overwhelmed the entire town of Mace, and the twenty-five families who lived in the little village under tons of snow and debris. Rescue parties have gone from Wallace to the scene. Residents in Wallace say that the roar of the avalanche could be distinctly heard there. Mace is five miles from Wallace.

Berlin.—The women of Germany have at last become aroused to the serious conditions in the public schools. A movement already has been inaugurated with some of the most influential women of the empire back of it having for its object a reformation of the public schools. The movement is being led by a little boy and girl have been drawn to suicide because they could not stand the strain put upon them in keeping up with their classes. There has been a regular epidemic among the German school children in recent years. A typical instance was that of the self-destruction of George Hardenburg, aged 11, a pupil at one of the public schools in the suburb of Berlin. Hardenburg had failed to pass rather a stiff examination necessary to qualify him for promotion into a higher class, and his lack of success depressed him to such a degree that he found life unbearable. After writing a number of formal letters, which seemed to bear the stamp of an intellect far older than that of an 11-year-old boy, he took poison and died. There have been many other child suicides during the last twelve months, and the overstrain involved by the existing schooling system is held responsible for these juvenile tragedies. The opponents of the German educational system allege that it crams too much knowledge into the heads of the victims, instead of training them to apply their learning to practical problems of life.

Spokane.—A telephone message from Wallace, Ida., to the Spokesman-Review says that twenty-five families, and probably a score of persons, were buried in an avalanche. A special train left Wallace, carrying rescuers.

Dublin.—While William O'Brien, leader of the Independent Nationalists and arch enemy of John Redmond and T. P. O'Connor, denies the report that he intends to go to America as soon as his parliamentary duties permit, it is generally believed that he will visit the United States for the purpose of explaining to Irish-Americans his reasons for fighting Redmond, and incidentally cutting down if not cutting off entirely the American source of supply for the nationalist war chest. The O'Brienites, of whom twelve were returned, were elected largely by Unionist voters in the constituencies of the north. The Unionists had no chance. On being charged with this, Mr. O'Brien recently said: "It is a rejoice to say, perfectly true the everywhere throughout the south my friends and myself have enjoyed the cordial good will (and doubtless their support at the polls for whatever it was worth) of our Protestant fellow-countrymen. The statements of the 'Molly Maguire' lodges will, doubtless, be horrified to hear that we regard the fact as one of the happiest achievements in all Ireland. The history of our past years and classes. The Protestant minority voted with us for the very substantial reason that they and we have now an indissoluble common interest in compelling the abolition of the land system and saving Ireland from further overtaxation. If it would not be fair to construe their support as an open admission to home rule as well, it is absolutely certain that the struggle we have made, in the teeth of impossible odds, for generous treatment for them, material and moral, has completely disarmed the suspicions of the Protestants of the south of Ireland as to our attitude towards Ireland, and that as soon as the Protestants of Ulster have been similarly reassured, home rule will be more a question of friendly settlement between the Protestant and Catholic Irishmen after the model of the historic land conference of 1902."

The budget is the cause of the split in the nationalist party. The O'Brienites believe in a budget to be treated in the budget and will fight it tooth and nail. On the question of the lords' veto I understand they will act with the Liberals. During the campaign the charge was made that General Sir Reginald Pole Carew had, during his election campaign, referred to the people of the south of Ireland as "a large, idle, ignorant, seditious lot of people." General Pole Carew indignantly denies he made any such statement. It was first contained in an anonymous letter published in a Tipperary newspaper, and would have been treated with silent contempt by General Pole Carew if it had not been reproduced in the Irish newspapers, and made the subject of a general protest against the county council and other public bodies. The general's indignation is shared most intensely by his beautiful wife, Lady Beatrice Pole Carew, who states that she is proud to be regarded as one of the "southern Irish," and who, with other members of the Ormond family, is most popular amongst rich and poor in Kilkenny.

At the recent meeting of the Nationalist party, John Dillon moved and Joseph Dillon seconded a resolution which was unanimously adopted, which declared that "this first meeting after the general election, the Nationalist party desires to place on record its deep sense of obligation to the friends and supporters of the National cause in a most cordial and splendid cooperation to the funds of the party, which has enabled it to meet and repel the attacks made upon it during the recent elections. And we especially record our warmest thanks for the generous contribution of the brilliant gifts and invaluable services of Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, president of the United Irish League of America; and we tender our warmest thanks to the other national officers of the American organization."

Acting on a suggestion contained in a letter written by the Rev. Dean Kelly, D. D., of St. Peter's Athlone, the Westminster county council has decided to preserve the old home of Oliver Goldsmith at Lissoy from further decay. "Opposite its gate," writes Dean Kelly, "is the ancient fort of Lis, of which the ruins are still to be seen. Daniel Hodson: I had rather be placed in the little mound before Lissoy gate and there take in, to me, the most pleasant horizon in nature." The capacious fireplace, around which sat the group depicted in "The Vicar of Wakefield" and "The Deserted Village," is gone. The ruin is now a mere shell and a zinc-roofed shed has been erected within it."

San Francisco.—By marrying his sister-in-law, Miss S. Upton, an spinster of 68, and who for the last twenty years has been his housekeeper, Loren Colburn, millionaire of San Mateo county, and aged 84, last night cut off his relatives from inheriting his $300,000 estate. For several years Colburn has been resisting the efforts of his kinsmen to have him adjudged legally incompetent. After the wedding ceremony, which was attended only by Colburn's business and legal representatives and newspaper men, the aged millionaire chuckled grimly as he took his wife's arm and prepared to leave the church. "The old man is not quite incompetent," he remarked with a sneer, "enough to pick the best woman and his truest friend for a wife."

Colburn's fortune came from several old Spanish grants.

Managua, Nicaragua.—The casualty list of the battles between the government and insurgent forces at Tisma and Tiptapa, has increased until it is estimated that 225 men were killed and 350 wounded. Searchers have come upon bodies scattered over a large territory, many wounded having died while attempting to drag themselves from the field of battle. It is now known that Captain Godfrey Fowler, in command of General Chacon's machine guns, who was wounded in the left leg, escaped capture, a conservative concealing the American for two days. Captain Fowler, on the one side, and General Lara on the other, were the heroes of the Tisma battle.

Ludington, Mich.—Antoine Cartier, proprietor as a lumber man and capitalist, and a member of the Northern Michigan Transport company, died here today. He was 74 years old.

Cleveland, O.—Fully 4,000 people are homeless in Ohio as a result of the flood that is still sweeping over the state. At Zanesville alone 1,000 persons are reported driven from their homes. The public buildings are crowded with refugees. At Warren, O., over 300 were refused from their homes in boats.

New York.—Supposing that it was her husband who had slipped quietly into the parlor of her Brooklyn apartment, rival in the darkness of an adjoining room, William Allen, awaiting his good-bye, thought she would play a good joke on him. She slipped into the room and kept quiet for a long time, but finally went into the parlor. In stead of meeting her husband she found herself face to face with a stranger, who was calmly taking down the oil paintings and tapestries from the wall with a noiseless touch. Confronted by Mrs. Allen he divined for the door. She grappled with him, but he bowled her over and ran out into the street. Mrs. Allen picked herself up and pursued him. After a chase of nearly a mile she would-be burglar slipped exhausted. Mrs. Allen kept him prisoner until a new-boy brought a policeman to relieve her of her charge.

Rome.—The Pope has created four dioceses in the Philippine islands. These are Zamboanga, Tuguegarao, Lipa and the islands of Samar and Leyte, with the apostolic prefecture of Lalawan.

The Right Rev. Monsignor Pablo Singson, vicar general of the diocese of Cebu, has been appointed bishop of Samar and Leyte; Monsignor I. Petril, former secretary of the apostolic delegation at Manila, bishop of Lipa; the Rev. J. MacGinley of Philadelphia, bishop of Nueva Caceres; and the Right Rev. J. P. Gorodo, formerly auxiliary campaign against prominent Chicagoans were frustrated by his erstwhile arraigned to the old man. Dr. B. W. Chamberlain in his office on February 4.

Chicago.—Thomas Sheridan, 102 years old, who came to America from the south of Ireland in a sloop, which took forty-two days for the journey, died yesterday at the residence of his granddaughter. He was an inveterate smoker for more than ninety years.

Milford, N. H.—Ten years past the century mark, Michael Leavitt is dead at his home. He had been an inveterate smoker for ninety-six years.

Washington.—War is to be waged upon southern post cards which ridicule the Irish race. Leading Irishmen of the national capital have started the crusade. Efforts will be made to have a post office department hold them up as un-American.

Paris.—Paris can now sympathize with those people in America who find it necessary to call in the volunteer firemen in the administration of justice. During the recent floods it was found necessary to administer justice without the formality of trial to the apaches who engaged in robbing and pillaging. Many justice was administered in true backwoods style. The crowd lynched four ruffians at Issy, hanging them from signposts, and a patrol fired volleys at fugitive scoundrels at Boulogne-sur-Seine, and killed two. Another pillager had the misfortune to be caught by a civilian boat patrol at Ivry. To his rescue he was taken to the police station by a boat patrol. He was unconscious when he landed, and was taken to a hospital. The boat patrol, which landed three-quarters of a mile from Ivry, was a band of eight men and women was arrested, after a determined resistance. It was with the greatest difficulty that the reactionaries protected them from an infuriated mob.

Two other men were not so fortunate at Ivry, but were strung up to lampposts. At Ruell, where the apaches were active, one was given a warning to fire at every boat which did not stop when bidden. Ivry gate has been closed to prevent the entrance of everyone not showing a pass from the police authorities. At Issy, the people were awakened on Monday night by a fusillade. Eight pillagers had landed from a boat and entered an evacuated lace factory. A policeman fired repeatedly when help came. The gang defended themselves with revolvers. Eventually they sought to escape by plunging from the windows and swimming. Three were drowned. When the boat was pulled up, the three were found. They were rapidly overhauled, began to use revolvers. The sailors pursuing replied by putting a few holes in the fleeing boat, which went down. Two of the apaches were drowned, the third escaped, and the fourth, when brought to land, was seized upon and lynched by the crowd, which left his body hanging as a scarecrow for his comrades today. The same would be repeated indefinitely. These drastic measures, it may be said, were extremely discouraging to the apaches.

Finding her son Kostka hanging dead in his room, the lad having committed suicide because he had been punished at school, Mme. Effrou hanged herself in her home, and his mother declared to survive her child. The career of Mme. Effrou was remarkable. The daughter of a former governor of the interior, she some years ago threw herself into the arms of a Russian in Russia, and narrowly escaped execution for her acts. The greater part of the unfortunate lady's life was passed in prison or in exile, and she had returned to live in Paris solely to have a view to watching over the education of her young son.

Tokio.—A lively discussion is in progress in Japan regarding the advisability of adopting the jury system. Even among the members of the legal profession opinion is divided, but if anything the balance appears to be against the innovation. It is pointed out that Baro Hatano, formerly minister of justice, who declares that no argument has been advanced to justify the introduction of the system into Japan. He repeats remarks on the statement that in European countries juries are generally regarded as a nuisance, and would be got rid of if it were possible. The danger, he says, of allowing laymen to interfere in matters in which they have had no special training is very great.

Wreck in Oklahoma.—End, Okla., March 3.—Three trainmen were injured until it is probably fatally, when Rock Island passenger train No. 36 collided with a freight train at Pond Creek. An open switch caused the accident.

Favored Nations.—Washington, March 3.—President Taft has issued a proclamation extending to Austria-Hungary the minimum tariff rates of the Payne-Aldrich act.

The killing of Baron Widenor, he said, was accidental, owing to the kicking of the pistol. He had not the slightest intention of killing, for he aimed at his opponent's feet.
