JOSEPH BATELL, Middlebury, Vt.

A DELUGE OF UNSALABLE STOCK.

It is all well enough to complain about the absurdly low prices paid for horses in Chicago and other leading markets...

The doctrine of quality as affecting equine values now being taught at such enormous cost to the country is one which ought not to be soon forgotten.

Mr. Edmunds nowhere discusses the merit of the different money standards, or points out which is best.

Mr. Edmunds suggests that the owner of silver bullion will realize more for it should the government use it for money.

SECRETARY MORTON AND THE HORSE.

From the Horseman.

From the "viewless visera of his vacuity," as a St. Louis ditty puts it, Secretary of Agriculture J. Sterling Morton evolved the following in answer to the question, "How about the great American horse?"

These words, fraught as they are with the savor of a gigantic intellect, give but little evidence of even the most superficial knowledge of the subject with which they deal.

the counter jumper whose days are spent among ribbons and laces, but in the man of all men whose duty it is to acquaint himself with the facts relating to horse-breeding in the United States it can not be forgiven.

THE OREGON HORSE ABATTOIR.

From the Breeder's Gazette.

We have noted the establishment of an abattoir in Oregon for the purpose of working up the surplus range horses into merchantable products.

The abattoir of the Western Packing and Fertilizing Co., located at Union, twenty-five miles below Portland on the Oregon side of the Columbia, is now in full blast.

prejudice that now exists against the use of horse meat. No one imagines that the raising of horses for food will ever become an established industry.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

SPEECH OF MR. EDMUNDS AT PHILADELPHIA REVIEWED.

We quote again from Mr. Edmunds' speech: "Mr. Preston, the director of the mint, to whom I wrote the other day, says:

"The average price of silver during the calendar year 1894 was 63.48 cents. At the average price of silver for 1891 the bullion value of the silver dollar was 49.97 cents, so that the silver dollar, at any store where they have them, is worth a little less than 50 cents, so far as the metal goes.

"This, ladies and gentlemen, is no argument; it is the cold and hard truth of what the state of things is, and, as I said before, there is no person of common, average intelligence, rich or poor, sick or well, who cannot fall to understand what that means to him."

Mr. Edmunds nowhere discusses the merit of the different money standards, or points out which is best.

Mr. Edmunds suggests that the owner of silver bullion will realize more for it should the government use it for money.

But if the mints are thrown open to the free coinage of gold and silver at a fixed ratio, and this money made legal tender, Mr. Edmunds, as lawyer, or anyone else, as creditor, when he receives it, has received all that his debtor has agreed to pay him.

We have followed Mr. Edmunds' speech through, so far as it appeared, in the paper we saw. We do not see that he has done much to assist the people in their efforts to put things right, nor, indeed, that he has tried to.

Easy.

"Nirvana," said the business man's wife, who has taken to occult subjects, "is a place where we see, feel and hear nothing. How to reach this peaceful condition is the great question."

the old ratio of 16 to 1 suggests itself as the proper one, because, first, there is no sufficient reason to think that this or about this ratio, sustained for hundreds of years by the bimetallic system, would not be again sustained by it, and next because that is the present ratio of our coinage, and the trouble and expense of melting this coinage down to change it should not be attempted until found to be necessary.

It is advanced by the timid or cowardly that we should wait for European nations to act with us, especially Great Britain, Germany and France.

Every sensible American knows that we can get along better without Europe than they can without us. If they will not take our money, they cannot get our trade.

There is another question that confronts the American people at this time concerning which they are bound to act: the taxing of wealth.

The country is called upon, too, to consider the railroad problem. When in the senate Mr. Edmunds was on the side of the people in insisting that the Pacific railroads should pay the obligations due by them to the government.
