FROM AN OLD COUNTRY LADY
 A Clear Conscience.
 I can't sleep good at night. I have gotten so I can't keep my eyes shut after 4 o'clock strikes in the morning. When the clock strikes four they for open and there is no more sleep for me, and this morning I decided that I was going crazy. Yes crazy. I never enter dreamland until about 11 o'clock and waking at 4 gives me only five hours sleep and really it is seldom I sleep five hours for I have a wake more I must be crazy—surely something is wrong. I have been at the time I could sleep twelve hours at a time, sleep like a log the whole night long, and that wasn't long ago. I was pulled out of bed about sunrise, and told that I had slept about twelve or fourteen hours and it was time I was at work at this coming I began a day's work, but I had rather dozed a while longer and rested more, not that I was tired, I was never tired then, even if I did want so much sleep and rest, but now how different. Now I am tired and I don't care to rest. Now I need sleep and I can't rest with myself understand. I can't see why I can't sleep and I can't reason with myself why I should be glad for daylight to come that I can get up and begin work. I'm sure this feeling does not come because I am more able to work or that I have greater physical power. It is certainly not this, for two hours hard labor brings a very tired feeling now, while forty years ago I could put in twelve hours and feel good over it. So good that at the close of the day I was ready for both rest and sleep. But not so now. While I am tired in a way, it's not the way which calls for rest and sleep, and I am all put out, about it. I don't know what to do and still less what to say—only I am going crazy.
 In some of Beas's old music I find a piece of rag time "I'm Going Crazy, Don't You Want to Come Along." Well I am sure there is none who want to condition out do you know there are hundreds and thousands who are right along with me—yes, a whole world full of old fathers and mothers who feel as I do—can neither sleep nor rest, a longing all the time—dislike the day because its labors are too heavy and find night horrible because it fails to bring rest and we can do nothing, but cry out, O, the horrible-ness of it all. What is the matter! What is wrong! Why can't we sleep! Why can't we rest! Then we leave off all thought of the body—our bodies are all right. Our bones are whole and our flesh is sound, and we ask again and again what can the matter be? No, it is not the body and limbs, that rebel to the remedies we apply, but it's the brain—the great mass of nervous matter that has been strained and exerted, till its motions are so violent we can't control them and then we are very nearly crazy.
 I have thought sometime that we have a spite at our brain. We will not give it rest. Our bodies care for themselves, but the brain has no way of helping itself. But right here I mean to quit. I'm getting too deep I can't understand deep things, but this morning while I lay awake and all the others in the house were asleep, I suddenly decided I was either going crazy or my conscience was in a bad way. Then I began to go over my past life. It seemed to me I could read the 365 days of every day since I had passed my twelfth birthday. The few little good deeds I had done were lying around in the corners, while all the evil piled high as a mountain in the center and the more I gazed at it the higher it climbed, till I felt I deserved to go crazy because I had done so few things right. But do you know I've found it real hard to do right. I don't know that I have ever done anything exactly right, but I love my children. I have done that part of my life to perfection maybe, overdone it, done too much for them and too little for myself, made them independent at my expense. But I don't want anyone to think I ever did too much for my children. Of course mothers never do anything like this, and then you know children never have a great deal done for them till they marry and leave home. I wish you could read a letter I have just gotten from Beas. I haven't said much about my little girl, but I don't see her often and I have quit entirely working for her. Well, maybe I never did do much for her—not anything compared to what Jimmie means does now. She writes home to be the best fellow in the world and how lucky she is to get him. Says she knows he is the very best man in all this big world. Then goes on to tell how good he is. How thoughtful he is of her. He never leaves her alone and she only works as she wants to, and he takes her to Sunday school and preaching every Sunday and she is going to town soon she get a new hat and dress and slipper. She only wants to get one of each. Says Jimmie works hard and she never meant to throw away his money. Says she's going to come home from every standpoint, and added to this she is learning to work. Can you think the good she has done upon Beas to learn how to starch clothes the yards, sweeps them with a brush broom, bounces she don't want to buy another. Says she mends Jimmie's clothes and has put away all her good stockings she can't tell the old ones till you can't tell the old ones. Says she won't wear his shirt for she is not going to buy many for the next few years. That it is all nonsense, but these you don't need

NEW BASEBALL RULES
 Baseball Commission Issued Notice to National Agreement Clubs.
 Cincinnati, March 26.—The National Baseball Commission today issued a notice to all national agreement clubs as follows:
 "Section 18 of the agreement with the Baseball Players Fraternity reads as follows:
 "Before a major league player shall be released outright, or under an optional agreement, to class A or a lower classification, his services shall first be tendered to all class AA clubs at a price not to exceed $1,000, and then to all class A clubs at not to exceed $750. If he is a drafted player the club from which he is drafted shall have prior claim to all other clubs in his classification."
 "There seems to be a misunderstanding as to the exact meaning of this particular clause.
 "When a major league club makes application for interleague waivers, it should at the same time notify the president of the league of which it is a member, whether the player will be released outright, or under an optional agreement, or under an optional agreement, if the player is to be released outright, the player's transfer from one club to another, either with or without a consideration and without the retention of the right to recall him. In such case the player must first be tendered to class AA and A clubs at a price not to exceed those stipulated in section 18.
 "If it is the intention of the major league club to release the player under an optional agreement, then the amount of the option price shall not be less than $200 as stipulated in rule 13 of the commission and not more than the respective amount prescribed in section 18 of the Fraternity agreement.
 "If the major league club and the claiming minor league club cannot agree on the optional price, the president of the league of the respective clubs shall determine the consideration provided however, it shall not exceed the amount fixed in section 18, above quoted.
 "Section 18 does not change the system of returning drafted players as prescribed in section 3, article VI of the National agreement, and regulated by rule 32 of the commission, in any respect.
 "A drafted player who has not been claimed before February 1, following his selection, becomes subject to section 18 when released by a major league to a minor league club."

INSURE NOW AGAINST LEACHING AND SHEDDING
 It is a wild extravagance to buy fertilizers containing mineral ammoniates for a long growing crop like cotton and corn. If there is the slightest possibility of a wet spring or summer. They are not retained in the soil, so that the rains leach them out and the crop is cheated out of its most essential element of plant food.
 The safest and best preventive against leaching is the MORRIS BRANDS. They are ammoniated solely and entirely with high grade packing house tankage and blood and are so guaranteed on every bag. As one of our customers says of them: "As for shedding, your goods prevent it; as they do their best work after the nitrogen in other fertilizers has gone."
 The difference in cost is so little, and the difference in yield so great that the rich only can afford NOT to use them. The MORRIS BRANDS are conceded by all who have used them to be the cheapest fertilizers on the market.
 You can exercise true economy only by insisting on getting them, regardless of price.

 Col. Wille S. Fillingsworth, member of the state senate in California, who visited relatives here last summer, writes that he was on the train near San Jose that was held up by bandits. He says, "I was sitting within 10 feet of the man who climbed on the train and I had $240 in my pocket, and when the excitement was over the money felt as big as a million dollars."
 Prof. W. H. Hicks, the weather observer, dropped into this office one day this week and gave us the sad news that there will be no fruit this year. He says that there will be cold weather to the first of June. He studies it out in the stars. The professor some time ago predicted continued winter, and soon thereafter it snowed.

 "An I see it," says Frank Alexander, the land selling man, "there is the best of feeling in Anderson now. No knocking—except possibly a few chronic cases. New houses in all parts of the city. I think the most conservative will say that Anderson has the brightest prospects in her whole history. Store rooms all occupied. No houses for rent. Hotels and boarding houses running over. Let everybody get busy and build some more houses."
 W. S. Hamies, the man who put Q. O. E. in the cash grocery business, is much pleased with the success of his advertising campaign. The Intelligence, his first advertisement was a suggestion to the house wives to call up the Anderson Cash Grocery in the morning and get early deliveries of fresh vegetables, etc. The call was heeded and the orders came in early. Just the part which pleases Mr. Hamies particularly is the fact that all the other grocers in the city seemed to share along with him in the benefit of the advice given to the good women.

The board of trustees of the city schools is scheduled to have a meeting this afternoon and close some matters with reference to the new school building.
 The coming party looking for a location of the National highway under the patronage of the United States government has been in Columbia and Augusta and will be in Atlanta today. Commissioner E. J.
