ABE'S GRANDFATHER BROUGHT CANNON HERE MUCH TALK ABOUT THE "OLD REFORMER"

TO CHOOSE A SITE Cannon Was First Brought Here In 1814 by Mr. Hanks, Father Of Abe Lincoln's Mother

Mr. J. Pickney Reed, the man who rescued the "Old Reformer" from a cotton field near Starr, urges the people of Anderson to place the famous old cannon on the public square. He says that he voices the sentiments of the old soldiers and the Red Shirts when he makes this appeal. He declares that the old soldiers have always wanted it on the court house square. It was always such a reminder of stirring times.

The "Old Reformer" is an old English make of brass cannon which has a remarkably long history. It was used during the war of the Revolution, perhaps on both sides of that fray. It was brought to Anderson county in 1814 by Mr. Hanks, father of Nancy Hanks, the mother of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Reed got this piece of history from the late "Tommy" Hanks, who explained the circumstances.

This is an old brass field piece, weighing 600 pounds and was "touched off" with a fuse, instead of the lanyard of late days. The gun carriage has gone to the worms a hundred years ago.

Before the war of Secession there were many "minute men" and militia companies in the State. The old Fourth regiment of this county, anticipating an inspection by the governor on muster day, applied for a field piece for its artillery company. The request was granted and Mr. Hanks went to Charleston for the piece of ordnance. By special request of the company, he brought back three gallons of rum. It required three weeks to make the trip.

Upon the arrival of the gun at the old Howard muster ground, there was much patriotism and enthusiasm shown. The old brass cannon figured in many musters and reviews. When it was first received, an appropriate salute was fired, solid shot being used. These shots were fired from the muster ground at old Yarmouth into the hill at Greenlee, and it is said that some of these shot, fired 100 years ago, may yet be found.

The "Old Reformer" has been a citizen of Anderson county for 100 years. There was a shed built for it and a proper mounting on the old Howard field near Starr. In 1860 the gun was brought to Anderson where on December 20th it pealed forth the announcement that the Ordinance of Secession had been signed. The occasion was one of great joy. The members of the Secession convention from Anderson county were B. F. Mauldin, Judge Whitner, Judge J. P. Reed and others.

The gun was returned to its shed on the muster grounds where it remained until after the war of Secession. At that time there was no iron in the county and no money with which to buy farm implements. The old shed was falling down, so the people used the iron from the cannon's support to make plow shares.

Mr. Jno. V. Moore, conceived the idea of rescuing the old gun from its lowly state and Mr. Reed went after it. He found the gun half covered with dirt, out in an old field, and he brought it to Anderson, where it has remained in public place except for a short time when it was in a private yard and the Daughters of the Confederacy paid $25 to get it back.

In 1876 the old gun did yeoman service and then it received his name, "Old Reformer," from Col. Hoyt and Gen. S. M. Phelps. It was carried by the Red Shirt Club of Anderson to meetings at Greenville, Abbeville, Pendleton and other places and its loud detonations and reverberating reports struck terror to the hearts of the radicals.

Mr. Reed thinks the old gun is entitled to a conspicuous place in the city. It has done good service, in many ways, to encourage patriotism. If it is to be hidden away, he thinks it just as well to cast it as old metal, for then it would bring about $30. The old soldiers wish to see it given the best place of all, next to the monument.

C. & W. C. Railway Announces That It Will Attempt To Regulate Trains For Anderson

Listening to a persistent plea from Anderson people that some action be taken in regard to certain schedules announced a few days ago by the C. & W. C. railway, the railroad officials have announced that additional changes will become effective on next Monday, September 28.

Uncle Dave's Letter

The current proverb of the world is, "Look out for Number One." There is a sense in which it is absolutely essential that one look to his own interests. There are vastly important things which one must do for himself if they are done at all. The care of one's body must be almost wholly left to each individual. Children, the sick, or aged, the sole exceptions to this rule.

That is one another way of saying that each for himself must acquire an education. Others may help, but the development of the mind must be carried on by each one for himself. Each must do his own thinking. It is equally true in the realm of a man's own spiritual nature. The possibility of such a soul in its relation to its fellows is in its God, is upon itself. Even God Himself does not obtrude Himself into the sanctity of a human soul.

Each decide for himself the character of his spiritual nature and what his moral conduct shall be. Each man must live his own life in his own way and render his own last account to God. Others may help or hinder us, but in the last analysis there are vast areas in each human life where no one else may enter. Hence, "Take heed to thyself."

But this would be a hard world to live in if that law only obtained. We are so constituted that we must be related to our fellow men. No man liveth to himself. Then follows that other scriptural injunction: "Bear ye one another's burdens." As a corollary to that "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." The man who would live his own life apart from other men must conclude to live a hermit. There can be no such a civilization where men refuse to cooperate. The Negroite, with his bow and arrow, may live his savage life in the forest and gain a scanty livelihood, but there can never be any such thing as we call society among such a people. Our success in life will be measured by our ability rightly to relate ourselves in friendly cooperation with others.

This is the law of life, of every sort. Every living creature must maintain a proper relation to his own environment. When that ceases, death ensues inevitably. I am attempting in this letter to emphasize the importance of this law. No one can hope to succeed in any laudable way who does not learn how to articulate aright with his fellows. It is a question of right relations. I have always contended that even in matters purely worldly and temporal, no man can expect to succeed who does not understand, acquire, and exercise what I am pleased to term the art of human approach. There are at least seven things which each must do if he would obey the spirit of my letter.

In the first place, we must meet people on a sympathetic spirit. This sort of spirit creates an atmosphere which one carries with him. You have met people who at once chilled you, even before they spoke. You felt the critical or prejudiced condition of their mind. You have at once felt repelled rather than attracted. You instinctively feel that you have little or nothing in common with such a person. When you enter into a conversation with such a person you feel yourself incapacitated to speak your own best thought. But you recall how, when meeting one with kindly sympathies and open heart, you have really been a surprise to yourself because of the clearness of your thought, the readiness of your utterance, the keenness of your wit. The best in you has gone out to meet the kindly receptivity of a friendly personality.

Heart will echo heart, hand to hand. Swear at the distant mountain side and profanity will echo back. Approach your fellow man in a kindly and sympathetic way and note how readily he will respond to your kindnesses.

In the second place, we should seek to discover the good in each. For each has some good. It is a rare but worthy art to discover even in the most unlovely and unattractive, some commendable virtue. He has the most friends who discovers the most points of possible contact with his fellows. The foremost American citizen today is a man who is capable of getting on friendly terms with men of all classes and in all walks of life. He himself seems to be the composite American, having in his own personality something which responds to all multiplied characteristics in all kinds of men.

The secret of all this is simply an honest desire to find the good, instead of the evil, in other folks. In the thrifty of life is ever alert against doing or saying the thing that stings and hurts.

I once knew a person—in this case she just happened to be a woman—who never addressed anyone without arousing antagonism. She always "rubbed the salt in the wound" of the fur. Some said she was only awkward. But those who knew her best knew it was because she was utterly indifferent to the effect of her words. She simply did not care; hence she was constantly wounding even the few of her own kind. She prided herself in being a very honest and outspoken woman. Her was "no hypocrisy."

She spoke her honest mind, and so she goes through life ranging and hurting everybody who cannot escape her society. She was a poor, criminal woman in jail, was asked what was the nature of that woman's crime. She replied, "I never asked. We have all come here. The friendless ones in this friendless world are often account for their loneliness in the fact that they have not made any friends over their tongue, that unkind member."

Many a brilliant woman has remained unmarried because no man has dared live with her tongue. I do not hesitate to say that a strong element of success in relating ourselves aright to our fellows is in a cordial handshake. I have shaken a hand that had a push in it. My hand was grasped, but at the same time was shoved towards me, as much as to say: "Get away from me!" You and I have shaken hands with those who when they grasped our hands in friendly converse have hooked our hearts to theirs as with hoops of steel.

There is the revelation of character in a handshake. Jesus laid down in His Golden Rule the law which, if observed, will surely join unnumbered friends. It is always the violation of that law which makes an enemy. Many folks are eagerly perusing the pages of some "blue book" or some "red book" which deals with the rules and regulations of polite society, so as to know how to carry one's self before the world. But the one all-comprehensive rule which will insure against all boorishness is the rule found in "the good book": "Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you."

Keep that law and you will be a lady or a gentleman. We must ever remember that every man's rights end where his neighbor's rights begin.

One final element I must mention as an essential element to success in making friends. It is this: Do not regard yourself as better than others. The air of superiority is always resented by self-respecting people.

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS, USE SALTS

IF YOUR BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS, DRINK LOTS OF WATER

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared a bit and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; tastes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.
