REVIVAL PROMISES
GOOD RESULT HERE

WILL BEGIN MONDAY AT
BAPTIST CHURCH

DR. WHITE COMING

All Members of Baptist Church and Other Denominations As Well, Evincing Interest.

Not only members of the First Baptist Church, but members of all other churches in the city are much interested in the revival meeting which is to begin at the First Baptist church of Anderson today.

Rev. Dr. J. F. Vines, pastor of the Baptist church, said last night that he was much disappointed over the fact that Dr. Williamson could not come to Anderson but he felt that the people of Anderson and his church were very fortunate indeed in being able to secure the Rev. Dr. John E. White of Atlanta. He only asks that Anderson people hear Dr. White before they express any judgment.

Dr. John E. White of Atlanta, Ga.

The revival services are to start his morning when Rev. Dr. Vines will preach and he will also conduct the service tonight but Dr. and Mrs. White will arrive in the city tomorrow morning and during the remainder of the week the services will be in charge of the Atlanta preacher.

Dr. White has been to Anderson before and he is a great favorite with Anderson audiences. He is a splendid speaker, a deep thinker, and one of the ablest preachers in the South. Every service conducted by this very eminent divine promises to be interesting.

Services will be conducted during the coming week at 10 a. m. and again at 7:30 p. m. and a cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend all the meetings.

MILITARY COSTUMES.

Dashing Mantles and
Cape Suits a la Mode.

BLUE SERGE CAPE COSTUME.

What is new in fashions is the attempt to introduce a military style into feminine costumes. There is the military mantle now being worn, giving a martial look to more than one young woman when seen at a little distance, especially if she happens to be tall, which many Frenchwomen are at the present day.

The officer's cloak is worn well off the shoulders, having in this respect something of the effect of a manteau de cour. Beneath shows a corsage or fillet adorned with brandebourgs—a la hussard.

The military cape suit pictured here is of copenhagen blue serge, with a high turned over collar and front vest effect. Worn with it are a plaited tunic and a plain skirt. A wide rimmed hat of blue velvet, with a white flower drooping over the upturned side, accompanied it.

DAIRY WISDOM.

The pure bred cow carries a great possibility of reproduction of the qualities of her ancestors. In her the power of heredity predominates because she is bred for that particular line.

Every one who is interested in dairying is not necessarily a dairyman.

The folly of keeping low producing cows should be so apparent that such cows would be shunned as thieves and robbers.

The way to secure a good dairy herd is to breed it and produce it on the farm rather than to depend upon purchases every season.

The silo and dairying always go together. The silo, when rightly used, will help to make the cows more profitable.

WEED OUT LOAFERS FROM DAIRY HERD

(Prepared by dairy division, United States department of agriculture.)

The work of testing the dairy herd is most interesting, and produces many surprises. Many of the finest appearing cattle will be found to be the poorest producers, while some of the animals thought to be scrubs will be worthy of a place in the constructed herd. No time should be lost in disposing of the unproductive cows. A market can readily be had for those in good condition, while the money received for their sale can be most wisely expended by purchasing a sire and two or more dams of a dairy breed. These new animals should not be purchased without first knowing their record of production.

If the time, labor and expense of caring for the poor cows in the dairy herd were utilized in the care of the better animals the results would be wonderful and the profits manifold. Think of caring for half the number of cows in your herd and getting twice as much profit from their maintenance. Every cow should be given a thorough test under the most favorable conditions, and, if then found wanting, the sooner she is disposed of the better. No cow should be condemned before testing, for the animal that lacks quantity yielding may produce milk containing a high percentage of fat.

Many cows that once were great producers may now have passed their usefulness.

The Holstein cow is growing in favor wherever her qualities are known. As an economical producer of milk and butter she is in the front rank. Indeed, the admirers of the Holstein say she is unequalled in her specialty. The pure bred Holstein shown was bred and is owned by the University of Nevada. In a seven day test she gave 225.5 pounds of milk containing fourteen pounds of butter fat when but one year and eight months of age.

fulness. Generally the milk flow increases until the animals are seven years old. Then the yield remains almost the same until the twelfth year, when there is a decrease. Ordinarily a cow is at her best between the ages of six and ten years.

The winter season is now near, and it costs considerable more to maintain the herd than during the summer and fall months. The sooner the poor cows can be disposed of the better it will be for the dairyman. Look upon the poor cow as a liability and not as an asset, and the sooner she is got rid of the better.

Cost of Silos.

The initial cost of a silo is what stops a great many farmers when they are urged to consider the economy of the silage method of feeding the corn crop. From $200 to $1,000 may be spent on a silo, the stave silo to hold a hundred tons coming close to the smaller figure and the best types of monolithic silos of sixty feet heights costing the larger sum. Pit silos can be built for less than this, the main cost being chiefly labor, which the owner may contribute himself at some slack period.

Ration For a Dairy Bull.

A very good grain ration for a bull is a mixture of equal parts by weight of ground oats and bran, says Hoard's Dairyman. If the droppings of the animal seem somewhat dry, from a half to a pound of oilmeal may be fed daily. A bull weighing from 1,500 to 1,800 pounds in service will require from six to eight pounds of the grain mixture mentioned. In connection with this let the animal have all the alfalfa desired.

When to Feed Silage.

The silage may be fed just as soon as the silo is gied. It is not necessary to wait for it to ripen or to cure, but if there is an abundance of pasture you may wait as long as you wish. It is one of the most convenient and easily adaptable feeds that can be found anywhere.

Letter From the People.

Editor Intelligencer:—

If you will grant me space in your paper I will try in my feeble way to enter into the discussion of the present panic; or hard times as its called. Why do we have so much howling about it when it is a part of the business world, and is common and always has been, and we have always had times of plenty, and then times of scarcity. But times of scarcity is not always what makes a panic as we can see from experience. Panics are brought on by sudden changes in the speculation world from one article of commerce to another, and those articles must be the necessities of life to have any affect either on the producer or the consumer. And as we, of the South have depended on the one article, cotton, for a living and for the medium of exchange, while the North has to depend on articles of food for their main crop. The speculative world works on those two articles. Both being necessary to our lives. We of the South have failed to understand the science of speculation. Now to give you my idea of it, I will tell my experience while a boy going to school in the '60's. The teacher gave us the right to play marbles, or ball as it suited, and a few of us larger boys was the leaders in all the games. First, we went for marbles, and every boy wanted marbles and would give anything he had for them. So we older boys soon had them loaded up with marbles. Then we decided we had about all out of that game we could get. We then called out for ball. Of course we had gotten in a few balls to dispose of and marbles went dead. The same thing happened in the ball line. Every boy was after a ball and would give a pocket full of marbles for one ball, and so it went from one to the other. Every time a change in the game came, there was what we would call a panic in this day and time. And let me tell you from that day to this I have tried to keep my pockets full of both, so when the change came I would be in the swim. I hope your readers will catch the idea, and that is just what ails the people now, that is howling for help from the government, and asking it to become our guardian. Shame on a free and liberty loving people to seek again to be in bondage. Such as our fathers gave their lives to free us from.

All the extra sessions of our legislature, with all the laws they can pass will only prove a farce and will sink us deeper in the mire to the extent of the cost of their meeting, even if they do nothing. If they should legislate our liberty away as farmers the trouble will multiplied. Better do as Judge Prince says, give your cotton away on fines. Just a few plain drunks with a few fights, and we can get rid of all the distress cotton. That is the way the boys did their marbles when they went bad on them. They would give us older boys marbles to induce us not to report them to the teacher, 'til we soon had all the marbles again. Of course that is on the same principal of Judge Prince's plan. I do not doubt but he has played that same trick in school, and understands all about the cotton panic.

As for myself I have no distress cotton. What I do have is in peace as much as any I have ever had. I lived through one Civil War with no help, and I hope I have manhood enough left not to have unrighteous legislation to take away my liberty and freedom as a farmer to please the older boys when they get all the marbles. You well know the speculator will have in his possession all the cotton he can get before another crop is made. Then if he can scare the poor farmers who have let their cotton go for fines and other gifts out of making any more. Oh! won't he be in the swim though. There is hundreds of big farmers who make all cotton, those are the ones that it is hurting, when there is plenty of farmers over the country who make their own living at home with cotton as a surplus. Those people will not stand being legislated out of this freedom and liberty as independent farmers and citizens of a free country.
