which have no compulsory education law," writes Mr. Frost, "and they are all Southern—South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Mississippi and Texas. These States are in the rear of the procession as to compulsory education. They are the van of the procession of illiterate States. Compulsory education is only a little way off in Georgia. One could wish that parents could see their duty so plainly that no law requiring them to place their children in school might be necessary. As a matter of fact many fathers and mothers do not recognize their paramount obligation in the promise."

Winter received its regular official recognition in Atlanta yesterday, citizens "seeing their breath" early in the frosty morning and digging their overcoats out of the cedar chests. Clothing dealers filled their windows with heavy garments and the Georgia railway and Power Company turned on the strap heat.

Atlanta has a central heating system not enjoyed by many Southern cities. Steam from the big-city plant of the electric company is piped all over the business section of the city and supplied to customers by motor, just like gas or water. Comparatively few business houses bother with having their own furnaces, preferring to purchase steam heat by the pound. The turning of the central steam every fall is considered official recognition of the arrival of cold weather.

A farmer named S. Ruggs from South Georgia reports the killing of a queer spotted snake as big around as his leg and twenty-two feet long. A rope was thrown around the reptile's neck and it was choked to death. None of the neighbors could tell what kind of snake the monster was but it may have escaped from a circus.

Being attorney on both sides of a case and hardly being able to tell whether he won or lost it is the queer experience of Charles J. Graham an Atlanta lawyer this week. Mr. Graham was defending Will Leroy, charged with assault and battery, in the court of Judge Andy Calhoun, and Solicitor Lowry Arnold was prosecuting the case.

Mr. Graham had made his eloquent address in behalf of the prisoner and then his partner, Attorney Winchester, rose to add his eloquence to the defense. Mr. Winchester spoke at length, and a little bit more. Judge Calhoun retired to his private chambers and still the lawyers spoke. Finally Solicitor Arnold looked at his watch and remembered an engagement.

"I've got to go," he said. "Some of you lawyers sum up for me? Say, Graham, you do it."

"Why, I'm for the defense," said Graham.

"That doesn't matter," returned Arnold. "Say something, anyway."

So when Mr. Winchester ran out of words and breath Mr. Graham got up, this time acting for the State, and said:

"May it please your absent honor, speaking for the State, I admit that the State hasn't proved its case and therefore, on behalf of the State, I ask that you let the defendant go."

Then the jury went out and came back with a verdict of—GUILTY."

Dalton, Ga., has two hunters, R. H. Sapp and Sam Berry, who brag that their hound is the wisest and most valuable hunting dog in Georgia. His name is Caesar, and his specialty consists in rounding up all the game in a patch of woods and running it up one tree, thereby saving his owners the trouble of climbing or cutting several pieces of timber.

Caesar was given a try-out several nights ago by skeptical persons, and he chased four coons up one tree. When these had been killed the hunters beat the woods thoroughly, but Caesar had left nary a possum at large.

The question of permitting Georgia convicts pick cotton in the present crisis is being considered by several counties. At first glance it looks like an excellent idea, but the plan might bring on some animated discussion as to whose cotton would be picked first, and a pull with the powers that be, might prove of value.

In Toombs county, the Lyons Progress says:

"The people must have their cotton picked before they can pay taxes and they have thousands of bales rotting in the fields. The convicts can help the people right now, and we can't see why they should not be paid to pick cotton when the county can get thousands of dollars for the work."

Possum hungry Georgians must wait until the first frost before the game attains its full flavor, but so far as game laws are concerned the lid went off on October 1, and so the season is well under way.

Already possum parties are in vogue in Atlanta. They consist of young men, girls and a supper at the club. The party goes to the woods, where several possums have carefully been tied in certain trees the afternoon before, catch the game amid great excitement and return to the club for supper, the animals being cooped up until the next hunt. But the girls think they were in at the real thing.

Last year the "hunting set" gave a nutting party and found many bushels of fine hickory nuts under a big tree. It happened that a real country bred girl was in the party and discovered that every tree in a hundred yards was either oak or pine.

CHARLESTON MEETING WAS VERY INSPIRING

ANDERSON MAN REPRESENTED CITY

LARGE GATHERING

Annual Meeting of Charleston Chamber of Commerce and Also National Body.

Porter A. Whaley, secretary of the Anderson Chamber of Commerce, returned last night from Charleston, where he attended the Annual Meeting of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce and also the meeting of the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Mr. Whaley represented Anderson at both meetings. Twenty-five other South Carolina cities were represented.

He stated the meeting of the directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce was the most inspiring meeting he ever attended, such men as Chas. K. Ferguson, president of the Newport News Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Co., A. H. Fahey of Washington & Crosby, flour manufacturers, Minneapolis; Judson Patfield, president, York Machinery Co., York, Pa.; and other leading business men of the United States being present. These directors are on a special tour of the South, and after leaving Charleston went to Savannah, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile, having previously visited Richmond, Baltimore and Norfolk, Virginia and Raleigh and Wilmington in North Carolina. From Florida the party will visit New Orleans, Lake Charles, Beaumont, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Shreveport, Little Rock, Pine Bluff, Memphis, Greenville, Miss., Nashville, Louisville, Rome, Atlanta, Chattanooga and Knoxville in the order named.

When the party arrives in Atlanta, about three weeks hence, it is proposed to take a party of Anderson business men there, to meet these directors, and take part in such exercises there to be held.

WAR.

O'er glories gone, the invaders march,
Weeps triumph o'er each leveled arch;
Freedom, such as God hath given
Unto all beneath his heaven.
With their breath and from their birth,
Though 'till it would sweep it from the earth,
With a fierce and lavish hand,
Scattering nations' wealth like sand,
Pouring nations' blood like water
In imperial seas of slaughter:

But the heart and the mind,
And the voice of mankind
Shall arise in communion—
And who shall resist that proud union?
The time is past when awards subdued—
Men may die, the soul's renewed;
Even in this low world of care
Freedom's power shall want an heir.
Millions breathe, but to inherit
Her forever bounding spirit—
When once more her hosts assemble
Tyrants shall believe and tremble.
—Lord Byron.

SIX AND TWENTY

WILLIAMSTON, Oct. 17.—The recent heavy rains has interfered somewhat with grain sowing, but it is hoped not for long. As soon as weather conditions will permit everything will be busy again, and our farmers will be satisfied with nothing short of a sufficient crop of wheat and oats to fill their every want with some to spare.

B. F. Whittaker states that unless there is a great change in change in the price of foodstuff and cotton that he will plant no cotton at all in 1915.

The many friends of Mrs. Ida Pickens, who has been sick for some days wish for her a speedy restoration to health.

Several of the farmers of this section are going to try to arrange with the dairy department of Clemson for the sale of their surplus cream. There are a number of fine milk cows in this section and with the fine pastures on Three and Twenty and Six and Twenty creeks, it could be made a paying proposition.

We understand that the promoters of the automobile truck here from Anderson to Liberty have decided to build an electric railroad instead. We hope this last proposition will go through as it will give the children of the Lebanon and McElinoyle sections a chance to take in the excellent advantages that are to be offered by the coming session of Milton school. The trustees of this school propose to make it second to none in the county.

James Addison, of Pelzer, was a visitor here this week.

The largest crop of rabbits and partridges has been raised this year that has been known in several years. Doves are also plentiful.

Ed. Kay and family spent one day this week with the family of his father near McElinoyle.

J. N. Evatt has requested us to announce that he will certainly be a candidate for supervisor in 1916. He says this section has not been getting the work on our roads that we are entitled to, and as soon as he gets into the office he proposes to move everything into this section and keep it here until every road is worked to his entire satisfaction. He says he will tell on every stump in the county just how this section has been treated for the last ten years in the way of road working.

A large number of our people will go to Belton next Tuesday for the Fair.

A. W. Pickens says that it is his intention to take in the State Fair at Columbia.

G. B. Cobb will go to Hartwell, Ga., early in November on a visit to relatives and also to take in the Hart county fair. Providence permitting he will be accompanied by the writer.

Chas. Murphy and George Mullikin were business visitors to Anderson Friday.

So far we know only five bales of cotton has been sold from this community this fall, and very little will be sold as long as the price remains down.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

A three minute glass (the kind used in the kitchen when cooking) will be found an excellent timepiece when doing long distance telephoning, as it allows three minutes only.

Vinegar placed in a bottle of dried up glue will moisten and make it liquid again.

Blankets which are not in use should have small pieces of thoroughly dried yellow soap scattered in the folds when they are put away. This keeps moths out.

Stale breadcrumbs mixed with a trifle of washing blue can be used for cleaning embossed velvet. A piece of white flannel should be used for applying the breadcrumbs, which will finally require brushing off with a clean, soft whisk.

To store silver place in a cardboard box a layer of ordinary flour, then lay the forks and spoons upon it and cover thickly with flour. They will remain quite bright for any length of time.

Always rub leather chairs over from time to time with a very little fresh milk applied with a soft, clean linen rag, rubbing the milk off lightly at once. This prevents the surface from drying and cracking. Should the surface be rubbed off apply a good leather restorer.

KRESS

5-10 AND 25 CENT STORE

Kress', the Meeting Place

"Meet me at Kress'" are now the parting words of those who part to meet again. Can it be otherwise, with such a store in which to meet?

The modern store is more than a trading place—and ought to be. Buying and selling has helped to make the American Nation what it is, and the development of the modern store methods has been of great assistance.

The new Kress store, with broad aisles, roomy departments, high ceiling with special adjustment of ventilators and a system of fans makes the new Kress store a cool delightful meeting place even on warmest days, while on the coldest days of Winter, Kress store, with its perfect heating plant, and scientific arrangement of heat distribution, will make it possible for the temperature to be just right at all times.

"WATCH KRESS' WINDOWS"

Democratic leaders, it is by no means certain.

Washington Letter.

National Prohibition?

Mr. Garfield puts the question squarely up to the audiences that he addresses. He tells them that if they want to drink liquor, they should vote for Mr. Cox; if they don't want to drink liquor, they should vote for him (Garfield); if they don't know what they want, they should vote for Mr. Willis, the Republican candidate.

Many experienced observers declare that the Ohio campaign this year is one of the most important in the history of the prohibition, may win, it is quite probable that the combined vote of the two prohibition candidates, Garfield and Willis, will be considerably larger than the vote of Mr. Cox. If Ohio, say impartial judges, with its big cities of Cincinnati, Columbus, Cleveland, Toledo, etc., shall cast a majority vote against liquor, it will mean the greatest impetus ever given to the already strong movement to have a national prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States submitted and ratified.

It looks as if the Democratic candidate for governor, Mr. Cox, had everything in his favor, and his election is confidently expected. But there are side issues that are interesting—rather, there is a chief issue which lends most interest to the campaign, and that issue is liquor. Mr. Garfield, the Progressive candidate for governor, has come out flatly for prohibition, and hundreds of "temperance Republicans" have indicated that they will support him for this reason. The Republican candidate for governor, Mr. Willis, has come out personally for prohibition, but declares that he does not speak for his party. The Democratic candidate, Mr. Cox, has not espoused the temperance cause, and is therefore classed as anti-prohibition.

The fact that Garfield and Willis will divide, to some extent, the prohibition vote and the Republican vote would indicate that Mr. Cox should win easily; and while this is confidently expected by the
