

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

APPRECIATION.

Dear Sir and Madam:
This is a short, old fashioned lecture on the interesting theme, "How to Be Happy Though Married."
You, sir, first:
Do you ever think how monotonous and bleak and tiresome is the round of your wife's daily tasks? Cooking, cleaning, sewing, mending, cleaning, cooking—duties as dull as the dishwasher she uses three times a day.
"Can't be helped," you say.
Perhaps not. Somebody must do the blank, weary service of the household. And so far as the work is concerned she does not mind that. She undergoes privation and sacrifice willingly. She gives her body a living sacrifice to her family.
But do you know what hurts? Do you know what makes her humdrum life dull and spiritless? Just one thing—Lack of appreciation.
Let me tell you an open secret: A woman will work her fingers to the bone and count herself happy in the service of those she loves—if somebody cares.
Try this: Put your arm around her and tell her she is worth a dozen young girls, touch the worn hands some times with your lips, tell her how much you appreciate her helpmate, and the dull world of duties will grow beautiful to her.
And you, madam:
Do you know that in these days of competition your husband must use every ounce of his energy and utilize every dollar he can make and scrape to make a good living for his family? You do, of course, but do you appreciate his service and sacrifice? And do you tell him so?
How many times have you told him he is the bravest and finest husband in the world?
He puts in the best ticks that are in him and begrudges his family nothing he can afford. Only, though he may not realize it fully, he sometimes grows disheartened because you begrudge so pitiful a thing as a word of praise.
You see, a great, strong man may have a heart just as tender and as sensitive as a woman.
And you, both of you:
Are you going on steadily, but hopelessly, your married life a threatened failure, when you could change it all by the one thing that makes life worth while—appreciation?

HE WILL EARN $250,000.

The late John W. Gates, American multimillionaire, who recently died in Paris, was worth $250,000.

Among those remembered in his will is Henry W. Baker, a nephew, who is to receive a quarter of a million dollars provided he does—and does not do—certain things.

For brevity's sake the "dos" and "don'ts" are stated as follows:

- "DOS."
Go through college.
Box and be strong.
Study hard and earn a degree.
Keep clean in mind and body.
Obey your parents.
Get the respect of your friends.
Be kind toward all animals.
Make your parents proud of you.
- "DON'TS."
Don't marry until educated.
Don't play football.
Don't monkey with Wall street.
Don't drink or gamble.
Don't be dishonest.
Don't be a quitter in any game.
Don't be disrespectful.
Don't be ashamed of honest work.

In explanation it is stated young Baker became tired of school two years ago and quit and that he is engaged to be married.

Further, that Mr. Gates was prejudiced against football and believed that boxing is the best exercise; also, knowing the peril of the Wall street game, he warned against it.

Now, supposing you did not want to go to school, were in love with a pretty girl and obliged to obey the "dos" and "don'ts," give up your plans and ask the girl to wait, would you do all that for $250,000?

Young Baker says he will.

The "Wall street plunger" has laid down a set of rules which if followed will make a man of the nephew.

A boy who will go through college and study hard, care for his body, keep a clean mind, obey his parents, neither drink nor gamble, be honest, kind and respectful, persevere and be proud of any honest task—why, such a boy has established a character worth many times a quarter of a million dollars.
