CHARLESTON SEES COUNTRY'S BEST

Thousands of Sailors and Soldiers March.

SPECTACULAR EVENT OF FLEET WEEK

Seven Thousand Soldiers and Sailors March in Line and are Viewed by Admiring Thousands of City Folks and "Countrymen". Greatest Parade in Charleston's History.

Charleston, Nov. 21.—With stirring martial music by many bands, flags flying, the glitter of the gold and brass of the uniforms and accoutrements of many commands, made to show in sharper contrast with the less showy service dress, the largest and most spectacular military parade, which has ever marched the streets of Charleston marked the great land and naval parade today, one of the special features of Fleet-Fair week. In the parade were represented the entire fighting force of the nation, in the battalion of four companies of the United States artillery corps, the marine and the blue jackets from the three divisions of the Atlantic fleet, two regiments of national guard of South Carolina, three divisions of the South Carolina battalion of the naval militia and the reserved military commands of the city of Charleston, making up a splendid military pageant which was reviewed by the ranking officers of the navy, Mayor Grace and other specially invited people of distinction at Marion square, as the procession moved up King street.

A Great Parade.

It was a great parade. Nothing like it has ever been seen in Charleston, and thousands of people lined the route of march, assembling an hour before the time of passing of the troops, in seeking vantage position to see the procession. It was an enthusiastic crowd which saw the soldiers and the seamen march by and frequently along the route, the pent up admiration of the crowd gave vent to its enthusiasm with loud applause, drowning the stirring music and the steady tread of the soldiers as they moved with precision through the crowded streets.

It would seem a difficult task to marshal into marching order more than 7,000 men, but to the military men, it was a comparatively easy task. The various organizations were assigned position in advance, of the time fixed for the parade to move off and when Brig. Gen. Wylie Jones ordered "Forward, March," the whole procession moved as one man, with the organizations turning into position and following the marching order at prescribed paces.

The landing of the several thousand men from the ships for participation in the parade was of itself an interesting sight and gave to those who observed the operation an insight into the readiness with which large numbers of men can be landed from naval vessels. The vessels put out several launches with big tows and hundreds of men were moved from each ship in a few minutes. The officers came with the men and as quickly as the boat loads were landed at pier 11, the men formed in marching order and moved off to their places of assembly on east Battery. Rear Admiral Winslow, who had been tendered the command of the whole parade, as grand marshal, preferred to command simply the naval brigade, with Maj. Catlin in command of the marine regiment. A company of marines was furnished by each ship to this regiment.

The procession moved off with the United States artillery leading the column, then coming the naval brigade, cadets of the Citadel and of the Porter Military academy, the provisional regiment of National Guard, commanded by Col. Lipscomb, made up of the Columbia, Chesterfield, Bennettsville, Sumter, Darlington, Camden, Elleree, Timmonsville, Union, Orangeburg and Winnsboro companies, Third South Carolina regiment, South Carolina naval battalion, the German artillery and the Charleston Light Dragoons. The line of march was from the Battery through Meeting to Broad, to King, Columbus and Meeting street, being dismissed at its return to Broad street. The foot troops marched with a front of 12 files, the battery in columns of sections, and the cavalry in columns of four.

The Line of March.

At the head of the procession rode Chief of Police Cantwell and Lieutenants Rhode and Whaley. Then came Gen. Jones, the grand marshal, riding with Adjutant General Moore and Col. J. E. Cogswell, chief of staff. Riding behind these officers was the staff of Gen. Moore. Then Rear Admiral Winslow and his adjutant, Lieutenant Commander Smith, Governor Biase, as commander in chief of the national

GIRL POISONED.

Little Daughter of Mr. D. R. Lavender Ate Jimson Weed Wednesday.

The following from the Gaffney Ledger will be read with much regret by the many friends here of Mr. D. R. Lavender, the popular moving picture man. All will be glad to hear, however, that the little girl has greatly improved within the past few days.

Madge Lavender, the little three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Lavender is critically ill at the home of her parents, on Rutledge avenue, suffering from being poisoned. The little girl, while out playing with several children on Wednesday morning, ate some of the berries from Jimson weed. Not until noon did she manifest any signs of illness when her condition grew critical and about 3 o'clock in the afternoon she lost consciousness and has remained in that state. At press time of the Ledger yesterday afternoon, the attending physician, Dr. J. N. Nesbitt, stated that some improvement was noted in the little lady's condition, her temperature being almost normal.

For rheumatic pains or neuralgia, rub the parts affected with DARBY'S PROPHYLACTIC FLUID. It penetrates the flesh and relieves pain. For sore throat, gargle with the fluid diluted with water. For fresh wounds, burns, scalds, or sores, apply it direct to the wound. It heals quickly. For a cramp, colic or dysentery take it internally in water. It quickly corrects the trouble. Price 50 cents per bottle. Sold by Laurens Drug Co.
