have completely vindicated ourselves, and put to confusion the false pretenses of the Yankee; and by the Reform campaign we have done the same in reference to the negro, his equal, and probably superior.

We can, therefore, with clear consciences and light hearts, now apply ourselves to our own redemption, which is within our grasp. Will we do it? Or will we present to the world the sad spectacle of a people who have lost their virtue?

Such appeals may appear puerile in this degenerate age, when gold is God, and policy the watch-word; but we speak not to scalawags or deserters, (which are synonymous terms) but to those true hearts who followed the Confederate banners to the bitter end, and although acknowledging themselves the conquered subjects of the United States Government, are determined never to prove recreant to those principles of freedom, which overwhelming numbers alone prevented them from perpetuating.

Let us then go to work in earnest and determine that political equality, which the benign influence of Republicanism alone prevents, shall be established in South Carolina. But how is this to be accomplished?

It is evident, especially where two races exist, that the only just system of government is to be derived through cumulative voting or minority representation, which is fast gaining ground and being established in places where education and refinement are in an advanced state.

How then are we to obtain it? We answer most emphatically by increasing the white population. Herein lies our only salvation. If we turn our energies to its accomplishment, a bright future is yet in store for our State, but if we, through sordid parsimony or shortsighted views of interest, neglect it, we are a doomed and degraded people.

Taxes are going up every year to feed the robbers. Last year they were about 12 mills; this year they are to be 17 mills, and in the same proportion next year they will be 21 mills.

Why not pay one big tax at once and be done with it, by each farmer resolving that no matter what may be the cost, he will immediately settle one or more immigrants upon his land, according to the area of his farm, and give each forty or fifty acres in fee simple, as a permanent home.

By this means, before the next election we could at least double the white vote, and make the status 120,000 whites to 90,000 negroes.

The investment would not only pay the farmer back ultimately in reduction of taxes, but in the enhancement of real estate.

In order that organization may be had, let Immigration societies be formed in each County immediately, to collect subscriptions both of land and money, and as soon as the lists are complete, let proper agents be sent out for the immigrants.

Introduce them not as laborers, but as land owners like ourselves, our equals in every respect.

It is absurd to say they won't come. The effort has never been made, nor the inducement offered, to bring them.

But says some croaking foggy, who is afraid that the scheme might cost him five cents, when they come they will vote against us.

This is both unnatural, and contrary to precedent. If they come as hirelings it may be so; but if we bring them in as land owners, identity of interest, and identity of race, will be sure to bring identity of political feeling and action.

Besides, we have a large foreign element, both in the city of Charleston and in Oconee County, and in neither place do we hear of any such alienation; and if it is not so now, when it may be profitable to scalawag, why should it be so when there is a white majority?

But again, even looking at the darkest side of the picture, is it not infinitely safe to be in a state with a white majority, however it may be, than as we now are with a majority of 30,000 negroes, who with the Yankee, have pronounced themselves our enemies, and who never intend as long as they have the majority to give us the least voice in the government.

The fact is Republicanism and Democracy have nothing more to do with the subject before us, than they have to do with the Rings of Saturn. The terms are not understood. However it may be theoretically, practically in South Carolina to become Republican is to become negroized.

The issue is no longer party, but race, and the negro have made it so.

Let us then be deceived no longer, but viewing things as they are, work out our own redemption, not as a party, but as a race.

We can do it, if we will; and if we are unwilling then let us hear no more complaints of Radical oppression.

We speak plainly, because mincing words and catering to ignorant prejudices are no longer necessary. We have thrown aside all such restraints.

Our Columbia Letter.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. COLUMBIA, Nov. 18th, 1872.

Our city streets show an increase of population, faces familiar and new appear on the sidewalks of Main street. The new doubtless acolytes of the legislative arena, or mayhap aspirants for office, the reward of service in the tented field; the old veterans recognized in the pursuit of pillage and plunder. Gen. F. J. Moses, the Governor elect, holds forth at "Randall's," and is the recipient from "morn till dewy eve" of innumerable calls from the faithful, no doubt, for confirmation of the golden promises which he so lavishly showered before his followers: Moses has kept his counsel close, and as yet has not declared which way he leans in either of the two events which will be shortly decided, viz: The election of Senator, vice Sawyer discharged and that of Judge—Melton promoted.

R. B. Elliott, colored, in his own words, presents "integrity and principle (?) versus money in the claim of J. J. Patterson," honest John as he is termed—the sarcasm being so broad as to be intelligible to the most unsophisticated—considering that J. J. has been identified with almost every scheme of plunder entailed on the State.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. WASHINGTON, D. C., 15, 1872.

Two weeks from next Monday the second session of the Forty-fourth Congress will commence, when the butterfly of fashion, not meaning our law makers, who are generally plain folk, will begin to show evidence of vitality, and flutter their wings. This season promises to be the gayest in a number of years, and so it should, for here not our Radical friends a plentiful supply of that great force which in homely phrases is said to make the mare go and I have no doubt of the lavish expenditure of the force or the pace of the animal during the next four years.

OUR CHARLESTON LETTER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. CHARLESTON, Nov. 18, 1872.

After a season of amusements, political excitement and other worldly dissipation, our city has suddenly recollected itself and with an apparent effort, resumed its usual state of sleepy indolence and humdrum propriety. The election for President, following swiftly on the heels of that for State and County officers, stirred her up to an unwonted degree, and after giving Grant an overwhelming majority, the old lady has settled down with the consciousness of having done her whole duty, and confident of reaping the full reward of her labor in the many favors to flow hitherward from the Executive mansion at Washington.

Nay, is not the new custom house being rapidly pushed to completion? and report says the sphynx will shortly build a stable and keep a stud of horses on the battery; but the ravages of the epizootic forbid this to be true; and the honor is too splendid to be in reality conferred upon Charleston. She has not yet done enough to be so signalized by the hero of the stable mind.

The big fire in Boston, which, by the by, those ungodly descendants of the Pilgrims failed to look at in the same light as they did the burning of Columbia by their thieving hordes of barbarians, i. e. a visitation from Providence for the sins of the place on the Sodom and Gomorrah principle, seems to have driven all of the cold weather South, and yesterday and to-day were regular blue nose, ear burning, great coat weather.

The weather is bitterly cold, and we have the horse disease in our midst.

Lack of space and time prevents us from giving to our readers our full letters from our Federal and State capitols, and Charleston. We propose to give you the rest next week.

Remember that the Barnwell County Fair comes off on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, at which place there will be a lively time among the Turf men. Through the attention of "Sherwood" we are indebted for a review for which we have no space.

We understand that the dwelling of Mrs. John S. Jennings was totally destroyed last Sunday by fire. The building and clothes were saved, and furniture broken by being thrown out. The fire originated in the roof, probably from a spark.

An extra of the Medium tells us of a dreadful and most calamitous fire occurring recently in Abbeville. Our readers will remember that the unfortunate citizens of this enterprising little town were almost burnt out once before this within a year ago.

Trial Justice Browning yesterday held an inquest over the body of a colored man who was found dead the day previous, lying on Kennerly's Road, about 12 miles from our village. Dr. A. C. Dukes was consulting physician, and the verdict of the jury was that the man was "frozen to death." There were no signs of violence either upon or about the body, and he had upon his person an unemptied flask of whiskey, which led to the conclusion that from intoxication he had been unable to reach home, and thus came to his death. His name was Peters.

An attempt to break jail was made on last Saturday by one of the county boarders. It was, however, not successful. While Mr. Johnson was attending to some of their wants, one of the prisoners struck him two very severe blows on the head and ran down stairs. Here the hall way is in the form of a cross, at each end of which is an entrance. Only one of these exits is in constant use, and the prisoner running into a section where the door was locked, he was followed by Mrs. Johnson and her father; when in a few moments Mr. Johnson, the jailor, making his appearance, pistol in hand, the prisoner chose discretion and returned to a dungeon where he is now held in close confinement.
