THURSDAY, APRIL 14, 1881. GEN. M. W. GARY.

The whole State mourns the death of a brave, true and gifted son. The sad intelligence comes from Edgefield of the sudden death on Saturday of Gen. M. W. Gary from congestion of the brain.

We first remember Gary as a gallant soldier. At the first sound of the bugle of war, although as frail as a flower from a naturally delicate constitution, he rushed to the defence of his State, undertaking all the hardships and dangers of the field for the love he held for what he believed to be right; and in all the battles of this long and unhappy conflict, the plume of Gary was always found in the van.

Ever watchful to the wants of his men, and concerned for their safety, he won the admiration of his whole command. After the war, he resumed the practice of law at Edgefield, taking no part in public affairs, until the memorable campaign of 1876, when, in opposition to the sentiment of the whole State, he inaugurated the straightout movement which resulted in the overthrow of Radicalism and the placing of Wade Hampton in the gubernatorial chair of South Carolina.

Had it not been for Gen. Gary, assisted by Gen. Butler and the Charleston Journal of Commerce, edited by N. Barnwell Rhett Jr., Chamberlain would have been acquiesced in by the Democrats as the nominee for Governor, and the carpet-bagger would have continued his grasp upon our government for an unlimited period.

The memorable day when Gens. Gary and Butler rode up at the head of the Edgefield red-shirts and divided tim with Chamberlain, and converted Judge T. J. Mackay, was the turning point in the political current of the State. As one of the results of this campaign, Gen. Gary was elected to the State Senate from Edgefield.

Here, while there were many of his positions that we could not endorse, there was much good done by him which is little realized by the people. He was the father of the usury laws which are now in full and harmonious operation.

In this, as in many other deeds, he has received the appellation of the "poor man's friend." In 1878, Gen. Gary was brought into collision with Gen. Hampton, his former friend, for whom he had worked so zealously and unselfishly, and in this issue we do not think that he received a fair and unprejudiced public judgment.

During the campaign of this year he was prominently spoken of for Governor, and in the canvass which ensued, a terrific warfare was waged against him, under which he was swept from the field. But Gen. Gary bore himself as grandly in defeat as in victory. Surrounded in the State convention by a host of opposing delegates, he calmly and defiantly, and in the very soul of his classic eloquence, reiterated his political views, refusing to bow "to the yoke of any party autocrat," or to recede one step from what he believed to be right.

Gen. Gary had his faults, but he had also his virtues. His political opinions in many essential features were not ours. In many of these we conscientiously opposed him. But his manliness, his honesty and his independence, must always be admired and it is upon these traits of his character that we love to linger.

When a man begins to go down hill he finds everything greased for the occasion, said a philosopher, who might have added that when he tries to climb up he finds everything greased for the occasion too.

WHEN WILL IT END!

The deadlock in Congress continues with little chances of breaking, except from absenteeism which seems at present to be the only chance for the end. The latest dispatches show that so great has been the falling off in the attendance that a quorum is scarcely secured. Both parties seem to be determined to stand firm. Senator Vest on the Democratic side said to the Republicans in his speech on Saturday that the Democrats rather than submit would stay "until the snows of December covered the hills in their winding sheets." The Republicans also say the same. In the mean time we would ask how the people like this interference with the business interests of the country, and this reckless expenditure of their money? Does it pay to be spending so much for a mere sentiment—for the empty luxury of a party victory? We would also ask, which party is responsible for all this? These are questions which the people are considering, and there is no escaping the verdict when it comes.

SUNDAY COCKTAILS.

In obedience to a call, numerously signed by the most influential citizens of Charleston, a large concourse of people assembled at Hibernian Hall on Monday night for the purpose of obtaining an expression of public opinion on the subject of temperance, and of enforcing the laws on the statute books of the city for the prohibition of Sunday cocktails. The practice of selling drinks on Sunday had been going on for a long time and to a fearful extent in the city. The News and Courier undertook the unmasking of these violators of law and order and a list of the Sabbath-breakers was regularly published in that paper. Even one of the Aldermen of the city whose duty it is to enforce the laws was found by the reporters in the list of the violators. The News and Courier pressed the subject with great vigor, and the result was the public meeting on Monday night. The meeting was largely attended and enthusiastic. Speeches were made by Hon. A. G. Magrath, Maj. Edward McCrady, Dr. Junkin, and Mr. L. B. Haynes, and resolutions were adopted calling upon the city and State authorities to enforce the laws on the statute books.

A SAD COINCIDENCE.

The aged mother of Gen. Gary who has been lying ill at Cokesbury for some time, and who was daily expecting the arrival of her son Gen. Gary on a visit, died a few hours after his burial in the same town, knowing nothing either of his sickness or death.
