

The Convention.
Of the 167 Delegates elected to the Convention 127 are for immediate State Action, about 40 for waiting for the co-operation of some of the other States, and about 10 submission. Those ten, poor fellows, we pity them. Lashed, degraded, and fleeced by the North, they are willing to give all up, and with necks bent, and backs bared, be yoked and driven along the dusty road of degradation. It cannot be that they will gain any recruits, unless they march under false colors, and we hope that when they come to mix with men who were not born to be slaves, and are determined to defend their rights and honor in the face of oppressive majorities, that they will remember they are Carolinians.

I entertain the opinion that when all reasonable hope shall cease, South Carolina ought to secede alone; believing as I sincerely do, that (saying nothing of "tarnished honor or violated rights") she could not place herself in a more perilous situation than that of remaining in the so called Union. Whatever may be the hazard of secession, the dangers from the Union are vastly greater.

We know of nothing more concisely true than the above. What hazard could be great enough to cause Carolinians to submit to "tarnished honor and violated rights," and where is our refuge if we turn submission dastards, when the dangers from the Union are far greater than the hazards of secession. For our part, we consider the hazards of secession very few. The apparition of a Charleston blockade embodies them all, and even then, we see nothing formidable about that—and we feel equally sure that an attempt at a blockade would never be made.

Concealed Villainy.
It is said that Mercantile Associations in New York have agents in every District in the State, in order to inform them of the standing of every merchant and man of business. We understand too, that this Association has an agent in Camden to keep a watch over the business of our merchants, and inform them who to trust and who not, when they go to New York to buy goods.—Thus a system of surveillance is kept up, and some concealed villains scattered over our State to watch us and report to our Yankee overseers. This is all true. Lawyers in this town have told us they have been applied to by this same Association to act as their agents, but they have refused. Now, imagine what power these villain reporters have over the affairs of the people here. They, through personal enmity to some, however solvent merchant, report him as insolvent. His goods, if bought, are stopped in transit—if not purchased, he cannot get credit, and thus his business is effectually broken up. How long shall we fear of gaining the ill will of these mercenary hiring reporters prevent us from searching them out? How long will our merchants patronize Yankee overseers?

DIED—In California at the residence of A. L. Kline, on Yuba River, ROBERT S. CARPENTER, in his 22d year Dec. 16th 1850. How solemn is this announcement! In the bloom of youth; at the age of manhood! We feel unable to set any bounds to our grief for the loss of so noble a youth. What breast among us, where glows one spark of generous manhood but swells with a deep tide of mournful feelings at the untimely fate of the deceased. Of great manliness of character, of strong courage, a youth long known amongst us, and worthy of all honor for his filial piety, his practice of virtue, his love of modesty and undisguised naked truth.—What but the pious desire, prompted by the enthusiasm of an unselfish soul, of largely contributing to the comforts and of relieving the cares and daily toil of an affectionate and gentle mother, could have urged him into an enterprise in which the sacrifice of things dearer than the finest jewels of gold were risked—the sweet intercourse and confiding friendship of a brother; and the participation with that brother in the deep, abiding love and blessed smiles of a fond and devoted mother. May He who has called this pure being to his mansions above, send down the blessed influences of his Holy Spirit to bind up the bruised and broken hearts of those whose sighs alone, still break the silence of their lonely dwelling.

The following is from the New York Evening Mirror, May 27, 1849.
WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY.—Among all the Panaceas advertised for the cure of human ailments there is none in which we have more confidence than "Wistar's Balm of Wild Cherry." We regard it as one of Nature's own preparations—simple, safe, pleasant to take, and almost certain to cure all bilious and pulmonary affections. We have witnessed its wonderful efficacy, in cases that were regarded as hopelessly desperate, and we can conscientiously recommend it as one of the best medicines in the world.
