BISBEE, ARIZ., OCT. 16, 1900.

The Republican local ticket is in the field, and the campaign promises to be a lively one. The candidates are all good honest representative men and will conduct their canvass straightforwardly and without trick or treachery.

The subscription list for Galveston does not increase at a rate commensurate with the importance of the occasion. The population and wealth of Bisbee are such as to warrant an expectation of the gift of a considerable sum, at least as much as Clifton gave which camp is not as large or as rich as Bisbee. It would be advisable, perhaps, to form a committee and canvass the town. A gift of ever so small a sum, an amount that could not be missed, would, considering the number of people, amount up to a substantial amount.

The appearance together of Mark Smith and Col. Wilson on the stage at Jerome during the great meeting there on the 13th was a most gratifying incident, and one that the democrats advance as a proof of the real unity of the party. It proves, too, that Wilson is a brave and honorable foe, and a true friend. He may have listened for a time to the wrongful advice, or hasty council of his friends, but his unwavering loyalty to his party asserted itself, in a hall packed full of enthusiastic citizens, he asked every man to vote for Mark Smith, and pleaded in a strong voice for the man who was once his rival, but then his friend and fellow democrat.

MODERN TALL BUILDINGS.

They Are Not Now Regarded with So Much Wonder as at First.

Those who have occasion to travel about in the neighborhood of business Chicago must have observed that fewer people nowadays stop to gaze up at the tall buildings. When the first of these were under erection, says the Inter Ocean, the city dwellers halted on the sidewalk opposite, from time to time, to watch the towering giants, and for a long time visitors were accustomed to stand and look up at the completed buildings with frank admiration and wonder. They do this now to some extent, but not so much as they did. The buildings are more familiar, and in cities other than the greatest they put up nowadays some pretty tall buildings; so that the modern skyscraper, wonderful as it still is if one stops to think about it, has lost the edge of novelty.

When the first tall buildings were erected visitors and tenants were permitted to go up to the roof for the view, but as the buildings filled up and settled into their regular business life it was found impracticable to permit this without serious inconvenience, and there are now few, if any, of the tall modern business buildings to whose roofs visitors have access. At one tall building it was said that the number of applicants for such permission was much smaller than formerly, and it was thought that this might be due to the fact that to people generally the modern tall building had now become familiar. At another tall building it was said that the requests for permission to visit the roof had fallen off but little. At other buildings it was said that it had not fallen off at all.

LADY CHO ON ETIQUETTE.

China's Polite Code Was Written 2,700 Years Ago by a Learned Woman.

The standard book of etiquette in China was written by Lady Cho 2,700 years ago. Lady Cho was the widow of a distinguished literary man of north China and after his death was faithful to his memory. Her husband's brother was historian of that dynasty, but when his work was half completed he lost his sight. The emperor sent a messenger to him asking him who could finish his book, and the reply was returned that only his brother's wife was capable of doing it. The emperor sent for Lady Cho and she was conducted in the greatest of state to the emperor's palace. There she completed her brother-in-law's work so satisfactorily that it is impossible to tell where the man left off and the woman began. Lady Cho afterward wrote "Instruction for Women and Girls," which has even yet no rival. In the book she gave the duty of women from birth to death.

There are chapters on "Instruction of Children by Mothers," "Duty of Daughters to Parents," "Duty of Children to Teachers," "Filial Piety," "Hospitality and How to Receive Women Guests," and directions for caring for clothing, how to put it away at various seasons, how to prepare their husbands' food, reverencing their husbands and reverencing their mothers-in-law.

KING IS A COIN COLLECTOR.

Victor Emmanuel, Italy's New Monarch, Has a Great Liking for Numismatics.

Numismatists will be interested to learn that the prince who has succeeded King Humbert on the throne of Italy is one of their guild. A private collector says that Victor Emmanuel began two or three years ago the compilation of a monograph entitled "Census Numorum Italianorum," containing an account, with illustrations, of the coinage of his native country from the beginning of history to the present era. As there have been at least 280 different mints in operation at various times in the little states and principalities into which Italy has been divided, and the number of separate issues have been roughly estimated at 60,000, this is an undertaking which might well appall even an enthusiast and expert. It is understood that the prince himself had collected for his cabinet some 15,000 coins of all dates and descriptions, which had come to him from all parts of the world. He had attracted to cooperation with him a large number of private collectors and many who were not willing to part with their treasures permanently have consented to lend them to him till they could be properly classified in his work or have sent him complete descriptions and photographs of them.

Habits of Carrier Pigeons.

The carrier pigeon when traveling never feeds. If the distance be long, it flies on without stopping to take nutriment and at last arrives thin, exhausted and almost dying. If corn be presented to it, it refuses to eat, contenting itself with drinking a little water and then sleeping. Two or three hours later it begins to eat with great moderation and sleeps again immediately afterward. If its flight has been very prolonged the pigeon will proceed in this manner for 48 hours before recovering its normal mode of feeding.

IMMUNE TO SNAKE POISON.

Father and Son in Georgia Who Think Nothing of Being Stung by Reptiles.

A gentleman from northern Georgia, whose statements cannot be doubted, told a story of a family, at least father and son, almost incredible. They live near the Durham mines on the Sand mountain and are named Wilson. The remarkable thing connected with them is an entire absence of fear of snakes, even of the most venomous, and their immunity from any evil effects from the bites of the deadliest reptile, says the Chattanooga News.

The father and son came to the mines not many days ago, according to the statement of this gentleman, the son with a large copperhead, one of the deadliest of Georgia's many deadly snakes, coiled in his cap on top of his head. The father had a large rattlesnake about five feet long, in his bosom next to his skin. They seemed no more afraid of them than if they were pet mice, and after putting these strange pets upon the ground this extraordinary pair, in order to prove their lack of fear, provoked the snakes until each was bitten in the arms and legs a number of times. No ill effects whatever were manifested, and the man told the narrator that no snake bite had the slightest effect on him. He and his son can take up the most deadly snakes, such as the copperhead, rattlesnake and moccasins, without any thought of possible snake bites, other than the slight pain naturally experienced.

The man had no explanation to offer, saying that he has been that way since he can remember. Physicians try to explain it by saying that they have become proof by continuous bites and inoculation, somewhat in the same way that inoculation with smallpox virus or vaccination protects against contracting smallpox. But this can hardly be true, if the man is to be believed, since he states that he has enjoyed immunity since his earliest childhood, and the son, a small boy, is also immune and has been all his life.

The case is one which might be profitably investigated by physicians and scientific men. A few such cases have been told of before, but vaguely and indefinitely, but this is vouched for by such undeniably good and reliable authority that there can be no possible doubt of its truth.

The informer is positive that the poison fangs of the snakes exhibited had not been extracted, and he is, equally positive that there was no deception practiced. After submitting to the bites the man and the boy both showed their hands and legs, and the small punctures with the blood exuding therefrom were seen by dozens of people.

Whatever the power possessed by this abnormal pair, there is no question as to the poisonous character of the snakes, nor of the fact that they bite their keepers, and that the bites were absolutely innocuous.

Cost of Letters in China. China has still the old-fashioned system of private letter carrying. Letter shops are to be found in every town. If he has a letter to send the Chinaman goes to a letter shop and bargains with the keeper thereof. He pays two-thirds of the cost, leaving the receiver to pay the rest on delivery.

WOMAN'S MODEL VILLAGE.

A Small Maryland Town Which Work of the Fair Sex Has Rendered Beautiful.

Camden, a village in Maryland, takes on pardonable pride in the activities of its women's organizations. The population is about 2,500. Public improvements, philanthropies of various kinds and patriotic movements have been carried on for a number of years, until today the village is a model in beauty, public spirit and freedom from vexed questions, says an eastern exchange. The united organizations about three years ago undertook to improve Forest park, the wooded retreat to which all flock in the warm weather. A broad avenue was laid out and improved, running the entire length. A rustic pavilion, adapted admirably to its surroundings, was built and liberally equipped with benches and tables. Next an artistic band stand was built, where now the village band may be seen and better heard than formerly. In 1890 a village library was organized by Mrs. W. J. Frisbie. Forty ladies pledged themselves to pay $1 a year as a membership fee, and the first year they fees then subscribed started the movement. To-day there is a circulating library of over 2,100 volumes in the village, managed and maintained by the women, and the sum of $1,700 is in bank as a nucleus for a building fund. In addition to this the club women gave a further stimulus to the intellectual life of the village by providing each winter a course of lectures on topics of interest, delivered by well-known authorities.

Comparatively few freezing caves are known as yet west of the Mississippi, but there is no doubt that many will be discovered in time, as freezing caverns are not an uncommon phenomenon, says an exchange. Some of these freezing caverns—incorrectly termed ice caves—are very large. In the one at Dobson, Hungary, there is a mass of ice about 110 yards long, 65 yards wide and at least 15 yards deep.

The formation and retention of subterranean ice always seems mysterious at first, but it is in reality a simple matter. In freezing caves the entrance is always above the body of the hollow and the cold air of winter sinks down into the hollow, and on account of its weight is not easily displaced by the lighter warm air of spring or summer. The cold of winter thus permeates the hollow, and when thawing snows or spring rains supply drip water to the cave the cold within freezes the drip into a mass of ice, in some cases large enough to last through the following summer. There are at least four other theories in regard to the formation of underground ice, but they do not stand the test of observations.
