

RAILROAD RATES.

Native Sons Fail to Secure a Further Reduction.

Eighteen Dances to Be Put on the Grand Ball Programme—All Organizations of the City Will Be Invited.

Yesterday was a very unlucky one for the Native Sons and their friends. Pushed by the demands of the interior parlors and local pressure, the Transportation Committee has spent several days trying to induce the Southern Pacific Company to agree on a half-rate for this city during the celebration, and several visits have been paid to Fourth and Townsend streets for that purpose.

First Vice-President Crocker was absent and the company did not wish to give an answer. Last Saturday another official was absent. Monday was named as a day when a final answer would be given. Then the committee was told to wait another twenty-four hours for the answer.

Yesterday morning Chairman W. H. Chamberlain and E. W. Williams, Chairman of the Transportation Committee, called on the officials who had the matter of a reduced rate under consideration, and were astounded to receive a strong, firm negative in reply to their request for half rates.

Chairman Chamberlain and his associates immediately returned to the headquarters to tell the result to their fellow-members. They were considerably chagrined and regretted that they were the chief expression on their faces all day.

A TWO-THIRD RATE. The two-third rate which was conceded to the Native Sons, and which was to be in force in effect, and an extension of time will be granted to parties distant from the city.

Colonel Chamberlain said last evening: "I am sure of the refusal on the part of the Southern Pacific Railroad to grant the concession, the committee is trying to arrange for the transportation of our members and guests by the water route, as they are most advised by the water route as to bring them up to special service."

The day of celebration might have been held in the times of heavy and hard work. The Native Sons recognize this to be an important matter, and they have appointed a committee, composed of Thomas D. Dole, J. J. Kennedy, L. K. Hagston, John H. Dwyer, J. E. P. Kennedy, Frank Vassit and John Burns to take charge of the affair.

THE SHIP RATES. The Pacific Coast Steamship Company from all points on their line in California, north and south, will sell tickets to and from San Francisco at full fare to San Francisco and half fare back in other words, the round trip, good from September 15 to 15th. The extension of time will also be granted to Native Sons, Daughters and their families. The company will make arrangements, if necessary, for the transportation of the public to this city.

The committee on Carriages are about making their final contracts. It appears that the larger companies have given a very fair rate, but some of the smaller concerns are looking for a better rate. It is very likely to take advantage of a press in the demand.

The committee has been enabled to obtain from these companies unusually good rates for all kinds of vehicles, and to have transportation to and from the theaters, but it will be necessary that the carriage be furnished by the company, and an opportunity to take advantage of a press in the demand.

The committee has been enabled to obtain from these companies unusually good rates for all kinds of vehicles, and to have transportation to and from the theaters, but it will be necessary that the carriage be furnished by the company, and an opportunity to take advantage of a press in the demand.

BASE-BALL. Colonel Tom Ross, Secretary of the California Base-ball League, called on Eugene F. Bert, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee, yesterday, and tendered the free use of the grounds for the Championship Base-ball Tournament to be held at the Golden Gate Hotel. The grounds will be at the Native Sons' disposal from 9 o'clock Thursday morning until 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon of the holiday week.

Valley Park has secured headquarters at Hackmerr's Hotel on Eddy street for the celebration.

Students of the State University have signified their willingness to parade on the night of the 20th, and will be invited to do so. The parade committee, which met last evening, decided to invite every organization in the city, except those of a political nature, to take part in the parade. It is expected that nearly all of the invitations will be accepted.

The committee on Grand Hall has decided to have eighteen dances, including two on the programme.

The trial of Frank La Rue, accused of killing Henry McBride in a prize-fight at the Golden Gate Athletic Club, consumed the whole day in Judge Shafter's court yesterday.

Dr. Rogers, one of the physicians present at the autopsy, said that McBride's brain showed signs of the disease which he had. His lungs were diseased and he was troubled with Bright's disease of the kidneys. He might have died without the blow, for he was in a bad condition physically.

Dr. Estes said he believed that McBride's death was directly caused by contusion of the brain, the result of the blow. He admitted the poor condition of the deceased, but he thought that he might have lived for years had not the blow been received.

For the defense, several witnesses, all tending to prove that it was a friendly contest, for no object whatever beyond mutual amusement, and that the testimony of special interest was given by La Rue himself. He said that McBride and himself were together on the night previous to the fight, viewing some photographs of boxers, when they conceived the funny notion of having a boxing match between themselves. They accordingly went down to the Golden Gate Athletic Club, and made arrangements with the instructor. After the match had progressed a few rounds they began to realize that it was not so funny a thing as they had imagined it would be, and so returned to each other. McBride was the first to speak of it. La Rue at once coincided and agreed to quit if McBride would. They were both young men, and were being made game for the crowd.

The inclination to quit was overcome by the spectators, however, who urged them to keep on, and in a few minutes more McBride fell to the floor and died. La Rue declared there was no wound or injury inflicted on the affair at all.

Many sports and reporters who witnessed the event testified that neither combatant hit a good square blow during the entire contest.

The case will go to the jury to-day.

THOSE P. AND O. STEAMERS. A Traveler from Japan Says They Are Regarded as "A. P. and O. Steamship Line is assured," said W. C. Veezie, who was here on a visit from Los Angeles a few days ago. Mr. Veezie is well known in San Diego, where he has spent a great deal of time in the past two or three years. He took a run to Japan, and returned to Los Angeles last week. He was accompanied by a steamer connection with Japan, he said that in Yokohama he frequently conversed with the Pacific and Orient Steamship agent in that city, by whom he was assured that the steamers would be run to San Diego beginning in August, 1891. It was not made any particular secret at the steamer agency, Mr. Veezie said, but was regarded as a fact by the local agents. He returned from California to Yokohama, and thence to San Diego and returned to San Diego, Aug. 18th.

TRIBUTE FOR INCORPORATION. The Rectory, Wardens and Vestry of Trinity Church and Parish of San Francisco is the name of a new corporation formed by Trinity Parish. Its directors are the following: Charles W. H. Jones, President; C. V. S. Gibbs, Treasurer; W. E. Dean, W. H. Taylor, W. B. Bourne, Sampson Tamm, W. B. Hooper, J. A. Abbott, Jr., S. P. Talway.

Fighting Over a Policy. Bianca Grieser sued the Petaluma Mutual Relief Association and J. J. McGary some time ago to recover $200, and yesterday the case was on trial before Judge Boardman. Bianca Grieser was the beneficiary named by Mrs. Annie Waite in the certificate issued by the defendant company. Before Mrs. Waite died she became very

WITH THE BRIGADE.

The National Guard Encampment at Santa Cruz.

Military and Social Jottings—Popularity of the Soldiers—A Water Famine—Notes From the Front.

CAMP WATERMAN (Santa Cruz), Aug. 19, 1890.—Since the beginning of the brigade encampment last Saturday, the bustle of military life in Santa Cruz has been more pronounced than at any time this summer, though large numbers of the soldier boys have been pitching their tents here since the season opened. The primary cause of this is the greater numerical strength of the brigade over that of a single battalion, and the further fact that all arms of the service are represented in it. From morning to midnight the streets are crowded in all directions by guardsmen, in- tended on finding old friends or capturing new ones, and as a rule, their search is seldom unsuccessful. This may be ascribed to the uniform good conduct of the men, without which their popularity would be fleeting, indeed, notwithstanding the glamour of their gait buttons and military trappings. In this connection it must be said that the men of the brigade are particularly fortunate in having been preceded by such estimable and well-beloved brother soldiers as the members of the Sixth Infantry and First Artillery, who have left behind them a weather has been gradually growing cooler since Sunday, and the hard work of drilling is not as trying as it was feared, from the first day's experience, it would be. Of the 1500 men who went into camp none have been reported sick, up to date, and a very few have reported minor ailments, from which the majority of the cavalry are suffering. A little arnica and leave of absence has done the trick in the usual description in these cases. It may be added that this complaint is not unknown to certain members of the Brigade Staff, but as the names of these officers are not recorded at the ambulance information regarding their present state of health is unobtainable. Rumor also has it that the disease prevailed for many years among the staff of the First Infantry, and that of late these officers have been suffering from the same ailment. Whether or not such is the truth could not be ascertained up to the time of sending this dispatch, but it is a fact that the staff have eschewed all horseback exercise since coming to Camp Waterman.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

THE NATIONAL GUARD ENCAMPMENT AT SANTA CRUZ.

Military and Social Jottings—Popularity of the Soldiers—A Water Famine—Notes From the Front.

CAMP WATERMAN (Santa Cruz), Aug. 19, 1890.—Since the beginning of the brigade encampment last Saturday, the bustle of military life in Santa Cruz has been more pronounced than at any time this summer, though large numbers of the soldier boys have been pitching their tents here since the season opened. The primary cause of this is the greater numerical strength of the brigade over that of a single battalion, and the further fact that all arms of the service are represented in it. From morning to midnight the streets are crowded in all directions by guardsmen, intended on finding old friends or capturing new ones, and as a rule, their search is seldom unsuccessful. This may be ascribed to the uniform good conduct of the men, without which their popularity would be fleeting, indeed, notwithstanding the glamour of their gait buttons and military trappings. In this connection it must be said that the men of the brigade are particularly fortunate in having been preceded by such estimable and well-beloved brother soldiers as the members of the Sixth Infantry and First Artillery, who have left behind them a weather has been gradually growing cooler since Sunday, and the hard work of drilling is not as trying as it was feared, from the first day's experience, it would be. Of the 1500 men who went into camp none have been reported sick, up to date, and a very few have reported minor ailments, from which the majority of the cavalry are suffering. A little arnica and leave of absence has done the trick in the usual description in these cases. It may be added that this complaint is not unknown to certain members of the Brigade Staff, but as the names of these officers are not recorded at the ambulance information regarding their present state of health is unobtainable. Rumor also has it that the disease prevailed for many years among the staff of the First Infantry, and that of late these officers have been suffering from the same ailment. Whether or not such is the truth could not be ascertained up to the time of sending this dispatch, but it is a fact that the staff have eschewed all horseback exercise since coming to Camp Waterman.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

THE NATIONAL GUARD ENCAMPMENT AT SANTA CRUZ.

Military and Social Jottings—Popularity of the Soldiers—A Water Famine—Notes From the Front.

CAMP WATERMAN (Santa Cruz), Aug. 19, 1890.—Since the beginning of the brigade encampment last Saturday, the bustle of military life in Santa Cruz has been more pronounced than at any time this summer, though large numbers of the soldier boys have been pitching their tents here since the season opened. The primary cause of this is the greater numerical strength of the brigade over that of a single battalion, and the further fact that all arms of the service are represented in it. From morning to midnight the streets are crowded in all directions by guardsmen, intended on finding old friends or capturing new ones, and as a rule, their search is seldom unsuccessful. This may be ascribed to the uniform good conduct of the men, without which their popularity would be fleeting, indeed, notwithstanding the glamour of their gait buttons and military trappings. In this connection it must be said that the men of the brigade are particularly fortunate in having been preceded by such estimable and well-beloved brother soldiers as the members of the Sixth Infantry and First Artillery, who have left behind them a weather has been gradually growing cooler since Sunday, and the hard work of drilling is not as trying as it was feared, from the first day's experience, it would be. Of the 1500 men who went into camp none have been reported sick, up to date, and a very few have reported minor ailments, from which the majority of the cavalry are suffering. A little arnica and leave of absence has done the trick in the usual description in these cases. It may be added that this complaint is not unknown to certain members of the Brigade Staff, but as the names of these officers are not recorded at the ambulance information regarding their present state of health is unobtainable. Rumor also has it that the disease prevailed for many years among the staff of the First Infantry, and that of late these officers have been suffering from the same ailment. Whether or not such is the truth could not be ascertained up to the time of sending this dispatch, but it is a fact that the staff have eschewed all horseback exercise since coming to Camp Waterman.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will continue till the close of the season. The pipes are too small to supply such a large body of men, and one-half the camp are dependent upon the

riding parties, on horseback or in carriages, to fill the big pipes and other points of interest.

After dark the bivouac fires are set aglow, and the electric lights brighten every part of the camp. Invited guests then pour in and are right royally entertained. Banjos, guitars and other instruments are brought into requisition, and the men are brought to another till today brings the evening to a close. So has it been for the past two evenings, and so it will continue till the camp is broken.

There has been a very large number of camp life, and so it will