

AN EVENING PA. The Chief Executive With His Old Army Comrades

Grand Reunion of the First Brigade of the Twentieth Corps. An Impressive Parade of Veterans and School Children—Eloquent Speeches by the President.

GALESBURG (Ill.), Oct. 8.—President Harrison rose early this morning, but he was not early enough to escape the thousands of eager Peorians who had assembled around the hotel at which he stopped in that city.

At 7 o'clock a band serenaded the President, and a few minutes later the Mayor and City Council, accompanied by the G. A. R. post and a company of the Illinois National Guard, escorted the party to the train.

At the depot over 3000 people were assembled, and the President, being introduced by Mayor Starr, spoke as follows: "My fellow-citizens, it is not possible that I should introduce this morning any serious theme. I have greatly enjoyed this trip through my own State and yours—these important officers. It is the great thought of our country that men shall be governed as little as possible—that full liberty shall be given to individuals, and that the restraints of law should be reserved for the protection of the community.

of the love of the flag has died out. I believe there is not one in whose heart it is not a glowing passion. I think a great deal of the interest in the flag we see most of these days is because you have taught them what it means.

THE DISBANDMENT OF THE ARMY. The President spoke eloquently of that modern marvel, the disbandment of the great army at the close of the war.

THE SONS OF VETERANS. The President referred to the recent visit to Boston of the Grand Army Encampment, and the interest which he had taken in the veterans following the Grand Army, and said: "I never was so impressed with the little things as to how things are to go on."

LOVE FOR THE FLAG. "How slow it was in the procession to-day to see them bearing in their infant hands the flag of our country, which they carried amid the shock of battle and dying men."

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS. The President in responding to the Mayor's welcome said: "My fellow-citizens: The magnitude of this great assemblage to-day is not only a tribute to the patriotism of the people, but it is also a tribute to the wisdom of the nation."

THE REUNION OF VETERANS. The party then went to the hotel for dinner, and the President, in the presence of the First Brigade, the President's old command, and the Officers of the Twentieth Corps, made a speech.

THE COMPOSITION OF THE ARMY. The President said he should not have been so personal in his remarks, but he felt that the pleasure of meeting the men of his old brigade, he could not recall the names of the men who were with him in the field.
