WEATHER PREDICTIONS.

SIGNAL SERVICE, U. S. ARMY, DIVISION OF THE PACIFIC, SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 23, 1890—5 P. M.

Synopsis for the Past Twenty-four Hours.

The barometer has fallen in all districts, especially in Eastern California, Nevada and Eastern Washington. It is highest in Northern Nevada and lowest in Southern California. The cyclone of yesterday is apparently moving eastward over Vancouver Island. The winds on the North Pacific Coast have shifted to south and west, with rapidly decreasing velocity. A maximum velocity reported from Fort Canby during the day of 44 miles per hour. Rain has fallen in the south. The heaviest is in Eastern Washington, Eastern Oregon and Southeastern California; elsewhere has risen, especially in Northern California. Rain has fallen in Northwestern California, Oregon and Washington; elsewhere fair weather has prevailed. The following rainfalls have been reported in the past twenty-four hours: Fallbrook, .06; Los Angeles, .01; Portland, .04; Canby, .46; Baker City, .06; Walla Walla, .16; Spokane Falls, .08; Olympia, down.

Forecast till 8 P. M. Wednesday.

For Northern California—Fair weather; winds generally north to west; nearly stationary temperature, except cooler in the northern portion.

For Southern California—Fair weather; winds generally north to west; nearly stationary temperature.

For Oregon and Washington—Light rains, except fair weather in Southern Oregon and at Fort Canby; winds generally south to west; cooler except in the western portion; nearly stationary temperature in the eastern portion.

JOHN P. FINLEY,
Lieutenant Signal Corps (in charge).

WEDNESDAY.....DECEMBER 24, 1890

PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

A canvass undertaken by the Springfield (Mass.) Agricultural Press and aided by other journals devoted to the same interest indicate Blaine and Cleveland as the favorites of the 110,000 persons to whom cards were sent as the Presidential candidates of the national parties respectively. Mr. Cleveland is more decidedly the favorite among the Democrats than is Mr. Blaine among the Republicans. The former receives 71,887 votes in the several sections against 39,339 for the latter. President Harrison is closer to Blaine than Governor Hill is to Cleveland. One cause of the preference shown the two aspirants who have once suffered defeat may be found in the average man's desire for a rub. Blaine was defeated in 1884 and Cleveland in 1888. When Blaine was beaten a good many of his admirers nominated him for 1888. So when Cleveland was defeated in 1888 his especial friends determined that he should have another chance. Present indications are that 1892 is the last chance the old stagers will have. If there is not a new development of parties there will be of issues and men. When new issues take the place of old ones the rising men who have become identified with them will be recognized as leaders. This may happen in 1896, but hardly in 1892, for there is scarcely time between this date and the next election to concentrate public attention upon new men. So far as Mr. Blaine's candidacy is concerned his position is so clearly defined by conditions that another person may state it almost as clearly as himself. He certainly cannot seek a nomination at the hands of the Republican party. He can only accept such nomination if it comes to him as the unequivocally expressed will of the party. A Presidential aspirant may work for a nomination until he has been tried and defeated. After that the party must come to meet him, not he to meet the party. President Harrison received 31,013 votes from this canvass against 39,339 for Mr. Blaine. This shows that Harrison is strong enough to keep the nomination from Blaine, that is, to prevent the nomination from being tendered Mr. Blaine in the only way in which he can afford to receive it, and it is by no means certain that Harrison will be the strongest candidate. Mr. Cleveland is in much the same position as Mr. Blaine so far as seeking a nomination is concerned, both having been once defeated, but Mr. Cleveland has a preponderance of votes over his nearest competitor that in a measure warrants his remaining in the race. Events may happen within two years to indicate Mr. Blaine as the most likely Republican candidate to win, but at present there is no reason why any aspirant who thinks he can win should not join in the procession of Presidential candidates.

RAILROAD INVESTMENTS.

The railway industry employs so many people and such a vast amount of capital that the public have a right to concern itself about their management. There are at the present time nearly or quite eleven hundred millions of dollars distributed among employes. The number of millions invested therein is less easily arrived at, as there is not a railroad in the country whose capital stock bears any close relation to its capital. But leaving out fictitious capital, there are thousands of millions of actual money in the roads, and the people who have put it there expect dividends corresponding to the earnings of capital in other industries. The recent railroad combination is sought to be justified on the ground that the competition has been so sharp that, with here and there an exception, the railroads have not been paying property. The object of the combination was to establish rates that would in the future enable them to pay large profits. The people, who want reasonable rates, do not want to bankrupt the roads. Neither will they consent to restore the high tariff under which for a time profits were realized out of all proportion to the capital invested. If the combination imagines that it can charge rates now that were paid before competition had shown the actual cost of moving a ton of freight a distance of one mile, they will be undeceived by measures undertaken in the name of the people to place the roads out of their control. There are certain railroad wreckers who do not care what happens to others so that it does not happen to them. Men of this character will probably endeavor to put up rates beyond a reasonable paying point in the hope to sell out under the impulse of these increased profits. There may be no way to prevent men who have made tens of millions by railroad speculation from repeating their devices, but there are sharp eyes on these speculators now, and the power of an aroused people behind them.

A RISING MAN.

Governor Russell of Massachusetts received 500 votes in the canvass of 110,000 voters for their first choice for President. While the number of votes Governor Russell received is not comparatively large, it serves to place him among Presidential possibilities. Two years ago Mr. Russell was Mayor of the small city of Cambridge. A year ago in November he was defeated as the Democratic candidate for Governor, and last November he was elected. He appears to have pushed the old Democrat warhorses aside, and to have succeeded where they had failed. General Butler once defeated the Republican candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, but it has never been known whether Butler was a Republican or a Democrat that year. But the Republicans recovered the State the next year, and have held it until the present year. The Governor-elect is said to be only 33 years of age.

THE CASE OF HAWAII.

The real object of King Kalakaua's visit to the United States may now, perhaps, be coming to light. It will be partially disclosed to every one as soon as Minister Carter, who left this city for Washington on Monday, has laid his case before the President and the Department of State. Persons who are well informed make no secret of their opinion that the Hawaiian Government will draw the attention of the administration to the fact that the free sugar clauses of the McKinley tariff do away with the consideration which induced Hawaii to admit American goods free of duty into the islands, and that Mr. Carter will appeal to our Government for compensation.

The reciprocity treaty between the United States and the islands, which has now been some ten years in force, stipulated that the United States should admit Hawaiian sugar free, while levying a tax averaging about 2½ cents a pound on other foreign sugar, and that in return Hawaii should admit a large variety of American goods free. When the treaty was concluded, Great Britain protested, on the ground that its treaty with Hawaii contained the favored nation clause; but no heed was paid to the protest. The treaty went into effect, and it has been followed by yearly importations at San Francisco of about ten millions' worth of free Hawaiian sugar, and by yearly exportations from San Francisco to Honolulu of about $3,500,000 worth of free American goods. Under the McKinley tariff, Hawaiian sugar will stand on the same footing as the sugar of Cuba and Manila, although the island tariff continues to admit American goods free; it will come in free as heretofore, but so also will other foreign sugars, which have been paying an average duty of two and a half cents a pound. The King regards this as unfair, and he proposes to submit to the Government at Washington that compensation in some shape or other is due to the islands for the discrimination in his tariff in favor of American goods.

It is understood that the form of compensation which would suit him best would be a provision that Hawaiian sugar should receive from our Government the same bounty of 2 cents a pound that American sugar is hereafter to receive. It need hardly be observed that no such project as this would be likely to command serious consideration at Washington. Opinion is by no means unanimous in favor of the bounty on sugar, and the idea of granting a bounty to foreigners in a foreign land for producing sugar to be sold in our market would receive very little support indeed. Had the King's advisers, who have proved themselves shrewd enough in other matters, been better acquainted with the temper of the American people they would not have counseled so impracticable a scheme.

It may turn out that the demand for a bounty on Hawaiian sugar is designed to cloak a much more plausible enterprise. It is just possible that it may be intended as an entering wedge for an agitation for the transfer of the islands to American control. Mr. Carter will have no difficulty in demonstrating that the reciprocity treaty has in effect been nullified by the free-sugar provisions of the new tariff, and that something is due to Hawaii for the exclusive privileges which her tariff grants to Americans. Yet it is difficult to imagine what shape that "something" can take, so long as Hawaii remains an independent power. We can no more subsidize a foreign State than we can pay a bounty on its products. And still, it would be poor policy after we have obtained the Hawaiian markets to let them go again, and divide them with England and Germany.

The simplest solution of the problem would be the admission of the islands, on an affirmative vote of their people, as a Territory of the Union. There is no good reason, to-day, why England, France or Germany should object to our annexation, if the inhabitants of those islands ask for annexation, especially as they are themselves annexing other Pacific islands every year without protest from the United States. It is possible that this consummation was the real objective of King Kalakaua in coming here just now.

CANADIAN STEAMERS ON THE PACIFIC.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Occidental and Oriental Company had better look to their laurels. The three new steamships which the Canadian Pacific Company has built for the Asiatic trade are nearly completed, and will go to sea, at intervals of a month, in January, February and March next. They will be magnificent vessels, each 5700 tons gross, 485 feet long, and 51 feet beam. Of course, they do not compare with the monster steamships which ply between Liverpool and New York. The Teutonic is 9685 tons gross, 582 feet long and 57 feet beam. But they surpass the largest American-built vessel sailing out of this port, the City of Peking, which is only 5000 tons gross, 408 feet long and 47 feet beam. The contract under which they were built requires them to make 19 knots in a smooth sea, which is considerably more than any captain would get out of the Peking. It is reckoned that they will make the voyage from Vancouver to Yokohama, sailing in the circle of the forties, in something like twelve days.

Under the pressure of competition, the steamers which now sail out of this port for Asia will make better time than they do. But they will not, strive as they may, cross the ocean in as short a number of days and hours as the Canadian steamers, which follow the shorter sailing circles; and if merchandise and travelers do not take the shorter voyage in preference to the longer, it will be the first instance on record in which they have not done so. The danger that these new steamers will seriously interfere with the Asiatic trade of this port is real and imminent.

The energy with which the Canadians are stretching forth a long arm to grasp that trade is as noteworthy as the supineness with which their efforts are witnessed on this side of the line. Ten years ago it did not seem possible that British Columbia and its chief city (Victoria) could ever compete with California and San Francisco for the commerce of the Pacific Ocean. The British colony possessed none of the prerequisites for foreign trade. It had no surplus products to export, and no population that could consume foreign imports. It had no money, no banking facilities, hardly any people, and no connection with the Atlantic Coast. But all these drawbacks have been overcome. British Columbia has a railroad which carries passengers and tea as swiftly from the Pacific Coast to New York as they can be conveyed over our own lines. It is gaining population, and great English banks have established agencies and corresponding banks at Victoria. Now it is going to have a line of steamers faster and larger than those which sail out of this port. The struggle for traffic is going to be no child's play.

SENATOR VOORHEES' CONSPIRACY.

Some months ago a movement was contemplated to induce some of the colored population in the so-called black district of the South to emigrate to the Northern States. There has been no evidence presented that the movement was political in character. That certain politically doubtful States were indicated as suitable places of settlement is due to the fact that the States nearest the border and most convenient of access are doubtful States. California and Oregon might have been included, but the cost of transporting colored emigrants to the Pacific Coast would render the project impracticable. Senator Voorhees now charges that this movement was a conspiracy to secure Republican majorities in these doubtful States in 1892. He says proof of the conspiracy can be found in the New York World. The Senator should be aware that many things are found in the New York World that have no existence anywhere else. The World contained what it called proof that the census just taken was a conspiracy to inflate the population of Republican States and diminish that of Democratic States. It published columns of proof of the existence of a conspiracy of this nature which passed current among Democrats until Superintendent Porter's letter was published, showing that Republican States had suffered quite as much by the failure of the census to find all the people who had been estimated to exist as Democratic States. Mr. Voorhees should bring forward some other proof of his conspiracy than the World. It is probably possible for that journal to state a fact correctly, but its practice in that line of journalism is limited. Mr. Voorhees does not vouch for the existence of the conspiracy of his own knowledge. He rises in the Senate and makes the charge on the strength of an assertion in a notoriously sensational newspaper. Mr. Voorhees says it is painful to reflect that a man who knew President Harrison well should have felt warranted in submitting for his approval a corrupt project to secure Republican majorities in certain doubtful States. It is painful to reflect that a Senator of the United States should make this shameful charge without a shadow of proof that it had a grain of truth in it.

RESPECT THE KING.

It is best not to be too sanguine of the growth of liberal opinions in Europe. Americans, noting the failing importance of royal authority in such monarchies as Great Britain and Spain, and the imminent prospect of the establishment of a republic in Portugal, have imagined that kingly power and reverence for monarchs in the flesh were on the decline, and that pretty soon they would disappear altogether. But a decision of the Supreme Court of the German Empire sitting at Leipsic proves that this notion was erroneous. That court has just ruled that any one, foreigner or native, who fails to rise from his seat when the Emperor's health is proposed, is guilty of misprision or treason, and liable to imprisonment.

THE KEAN FAILURE.

The Kean failure is about the worst of which details have come to hand during the present crisis. It is not easy to draw any fine of distinction between banker Kean and men and women who obtain money in a small way on false pretenses. Receiving deposits up to the date of his failure, he appears to have pledged all his valuable securities with other banks to secure loans. He could not help knowing that he was insolvent when these deposits were received. Of course it is always best for people who are robbed in this way to seek redress through the courts: but there are people so constituted that they become angry when the courts fail to reach this class of criminals.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The friends and opponents of the Shipping Bill will find material for reflection in the announcement of the completion of the Canadian Pacific's steamships Empress of India, Empress of Japan and Empress of China at Barrow-in-Furness. When the British Government called for tenders for a mail service by first-class steamships between Vancouver and Japan and China a contract was made with the Canadian Pacific which stipulated that the speed of the vessels should be seventeen and a half knots on the measured mile and sixteen knots at sea, and that they should be specially constructed to carry troops and guns. The Naval Construction and Armament Company of Barrow-in-Furness, on undertaking the contract to build the steamers, guaranteed that they would make eighteen knots on the measured mile and sixteen and a half knots on a 400 miles sea trial. The tonnage of the new steamers is 5760 gross. They have engines of 10,000 horse-power and are propelled by twin screws. The vessels are lighted throughout by electricity and thoroughly ventilated by a series of electric fans. They can carry, in addition to their large complement of passengers, about 4000 tons of tea, and are specially fitted with side ports and side hatches for the speedy reception and delivery of cargo. The armament of the vessel, to be supplied by the Admiralty, will consist of four 7-inch guns, which will be taken from the Inconstant now being stored in readiness for an emergency. At the launching of the first vessel, the Empress of India, Lord Harrington declared that she had been constructed strictly in accordance with the Admiralty's requirements, so that she may be capable, in time of war, of being converted into a cruiser or a troop ship. The new steamships therefore would not only extensively assist in the development of the commerce and trade of the country in times of peace, but would be capable also of protecting their sister ships in case of necessity in time of war.
