

THE SILVER POOL.

Continuation of the House Committee's Inquiry.

Boynton Testifies to a Conversation Between Dingley and Payne.

Why It Was Desired to Hold Back Vest's Testimony—Dockey Makes an Explanation.

Special to THE MORNING CALL.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—General Boynton testified in the silver pool investigation today that he sent a message to Dummell of the New York Times, on which the dispatch was based, stating that Dingley and Payne, members of the committee, had said they would not have gone into the investigation if they had supposed such a revelation regarding Senator Cameron would be made. The gentleman who informed him (Boynton) had been in the room and heard the conversation between Dingley and Payne. Each was explaining, apparently, that he had no knowledge of the fact that any such testimony would come out, expressing surprise at the testimony, and practically apologizing to each other that it had come out in the investigation.

Dingley said it was entirely possible that he might have said he recalled exceedingly well the conversation between Dingley and Payne, but that he did not recall the exact words which were said. He said that he was very different from the statement that the committee would have kept the testimony out or purposely delayed it. This was totally untrue.

General Boynton said the day before the investigation Stevens, the correspondent of the Globe-Democrat, received a message that it was the desire of the committee he (Stevens) should either let the next day or postpone his testimony. The purpose of the committee was to adjourn immediately after the conclusion of his testimony until the next Wednesday, as it was understood that Vest would not give his testimony in reference to Cameron until after the following Tuesday. Witness had heard the same thing before, and taking all this together, he thought the conclusions reached were very reasonable. Boynton said that a good deal of information might be got out of Mr. Tanner and Representative Taylor; also from telegrams sent by Litterer, Tanner and others.

W. B. Stearns, the Globe-Democrat correspondent, was recalled and said he was the person who gave General Boynton the information in respect to the delay of his testimony. Turning to Dingley, he said: "You began talking in a whisper, but became more earnest and raised your voice and were talking loudly and clearly through. I heard Dingley say something to this effect: 'It was an entire surprise to me. (Meaning Vest's testimony.) I did not know he was going to testify to anything such as you (turning to Payne) said: 'I had no idea what he was going to say.' It struck me," he said.

It was then that Dingley and Payne were taken by surprise and trying to explain it to each other. There seemed to be expressions of the circumstances under which the testimony was given, but it was very peculiar, and that you regretted the time at which it was brought out."

Dingley and Payne interpreted to say that while they may have said that they were surprised, they had no purpose except to get all the information as promptly as possible. Dockey, who was called to the stand, also desired to delay Vest's testimony, that he would make no comment now, that he did not want to bring out the testimony concerning Senator Cameron until Wednesday. The committee's resolution was pending before the committee, but Dockey's testimony before the committee, he (Dockey) formed the belief that there were parties who might desire to have the testimony delayed. He was informed by a Senator that another gentleman had suggested that the testimony be delayed until the day after the Senator replied that he could not afford to do that. The gentleman responded that he would not delay the testimony, but understood that some of the "boys" had bought silver, and the impression the Senator got was that they were not clerical clerks. A corrected list, made public by the committee, showed that the two Representatives, J. C. McLaughlin and J. B. McLaughlin, had been given to me, said Dockey, "and there were other names, but I will not state them. I believe influences were being brought to bear on the committee, and to be connected with the silver speculation, to make him vote for the Force Bill, and so wanted to delay the testimony, and I had no assurance whatever, and merely went on the rumor that the committee would be doubtful. No, sir, I did not see any exposure at that time which enhanced his prospects."

KING'S DAUGHTERS MAKE A HIT.

Sultans and Fair Damsels, Music and Novelty Attract a Large Assemblage—Wonders of a Glance into an Enchanted Period. Names of the Charitable Workers—The Quaint Booths.

THE ENTERTAINMENT.

When the large audience was comfortably seated, Mr. George T. Bromley came on the stage, and after extending a hearty welcome to the company, expressed his fervent hope that everybody would leave the hall with lighter hearts and nerves. He briefly sketched the object of the King's Daughters' organization and their present attempt at raising a home for incurables through the sale of the Sultan's robes.

After the Sultan's robes were sold, the Sultan and his attendants were introduced. The Sultan, a man of noble bearing, was dressed in a magnificent costume of gold and silver, and was surrounded by his attendants, who were also dressed in rich and costly garments.

The Sultan's robes were sold for a large sum of money, and the proceeds were given to the King's Daughters' organization. The Sultan and his attendants were then introduced to the audience, and they were all well received.

TO RISE NO MORE.

Three Sailors Drowned in the Bay Last Night.

The Crew of the Ship Rescue Swamped in the Sailors' Home Boat—Gallant Rescue by Men From the Albatross.

Shortly before 11 o'clock last night an accident occurred on the bay which resulted in the drowning of three sailors and the narrow escape of six other seamen and the runner for a sailor boarding-house.

THE RESCUE.

Lieutenant Holcombe of the Albatross immediately caused a boat to be manned and lowered, and proceeding in the direction whence came the cries for aid, he discovered seven men clinging to the bottom of a capsized Whitehall.

ALMOST EXHAUSTED.

The unfortunate, three of whom were almost exhausted and about to let go their hold of the boat's keel, were taken into the rescuing boat and quickly transferred to the Albatross. The other four were given every attention and care, being furnished warm blankets and stimulants and placed on the deck of the Albatross.

THE STORY OF THE ACCIDENT.

The story of the accident as told by the rescued men is substantially as follows: The Albatross, commanded by Lieutenant Holcombe, Captain Graham, just arrived from Philadelphia. They were anchored off Vallejo street, and the boat of the Sailors' Home was being towed to the Albatross by a tug.

NINE SAILORS AND THEIR BAGGAGE.

Nine sailors got into the boat with their baggage and were being pulled toward shore. The tug, however, suddenly a wave swept in over the stern of the boat partially filled her.

THEY WERE SWAMPED.

While they were at work throwing their chests overboard another wave swept over the craft and she was immediately swamped. All the men were struggling in the water, and six of them succeeded in gaining the bottom of the boat as she keeled over.

THREE DROWNED.

Three of the men, however, were not again seen by their companions after the boat was swamped, and it is believed that they sank ever to rise again, or if they did come to the surface, it was at some distance from the Albatross, and they could not be seen by reason of the darkness.

THE MISSING.

The names of the drowned men as given by their companions are: WILLIAM MURRAY, WILLIAM H. H. STEPHEN TYDE. The rescued are: JOHN RYDHOLM, CHARLES PATRICK, DENNIS O'TOOLE, PATRICK McELROY, CARL BRAPPE, CHARLES STEINBERG.

THE RESCUED.

The gallant men from the Albatross, who under the leadership of Lieutenant Holcombe rescued the six sailors, were Jacobson (coxswain), Quartermaster Hogan and Mingo and a bilharz reported.

SEARCHING IN VAIN.

The Albatross kept a flat boat out in the bay in the hope of finding the three missing sailors, but up to midnight no success had awarded their efforts.
