ALL HOPE GONE.

None of the Fishermen Picked Up by the Lark Mine.

Gallant Effort at Rescue by a Crew from the Pilot-Boat—Two of the Drowned Identified.

It is now certain that the three unfortunate fishermen whose boats were swamped by the heavy gale on Monday are dead. It was hoped that at least one of the poor fellows had been rescued by the crew of the pilot-boat Lady Mine, but that hope was shattered when she arrived in port yesterday and none of the missing were on board.

Those on board the pilot-boat saw the disaster that had overtaken the fishing-boats, and went to the aid of the drowning fishermen. The Lady Mine was some distance to leeward of where the boats were, and she was unable to reach them.

The bodies of the two fishermen were recovered from the wreckage of the boats. They were identified as John Smith and James Brown. The third body was not recovered.

HE LED THE CHARGE.

His Horse Ran Away in the Battle at the Turkish Conspirators.

What I relate are facts which actually befell me. The greatest cavalry battle ever fought on the American continent took place at Brandy Station on the 9th of June, 1862. At that time the Federal army guard crossed the Rappahannock and charged our outposts with such vigor that they entered our camp at their heels.

My horse bolted at the evening before, so that not more than fifty of us were prepared to mount. Our reveille was the crack of the pistol and carbine of the foe. These fifty men were quickly mounted, formed and ordered to charge. A moment later the Federal army was upon us, and we were driven back to our artillery camp.

I was the unfortunate possessor of an untrained horse, and he was a real rider on an untrained horse. I had experienced this on three former occasions. But what could I do? I was a cavalryman, and I was a cavalryman. I was a cavalryman, and I was a cavalryman.

My horse bolted at the evening before, so that not more than fifty of us were prepared to mount. Our reveille was the crack of the pistol and carbine of the foe. These fifty men were quickly mounted, formed and ordered to charge.
