

THE OPERATIC STAGE.

Honors and Eccentricities of Tenors and Prima Donnas. Giulini's Whims—Morgani and the Tailor. Nilsson and the Shah—A Tenor and His Town Waiter.

A writer recently undertook to show that what is called genius is merely a phase of insanity, or the intellect warped into a particular direction. Perhaps there is nothing akin to genius in opera singers, except that in vocal music they are supreme, and as high as the sky above the earth where other talents are confined.

Intellectual endowment, in fact, plays but a small part in the success of a tenor or a prima donna. Numbers of our greatest singers, whose listeners alude to as divine, are singularly deficient in mental capacities. They know a language or two and they sing, and that is all. They do not understand the gifts they have, and, as a result, do not develop them to their full extent.

A COAT NOT PERFECT. or to refine the fact that she is not as brilliant mentally as Harriet Martineau, or even as a high-school graduate. For the most part, the opera singer is a creature of habit, and he or she reads the love letters addressed to him or her in others to read the love letters addressed to her naturally desirous, and not in melodious Italian. Luscious as it may be, the opera singer is much more of a creature than a great thinker.

DEATH TO HIM! of selections given by Mapleson's company, which at that time included Tietens and Nilsson. There was a little of each of these grand ladies should appear first, but the latter learned that his Majesty would only be present for a short time, and he insisted on singing first. She came upon the stage in "Traviata," attired in a gorgeous dress, with a shawl around her neck, and a crown on her head. The dog was not to be seen until she had finished her song, and he was to be seen on the stage in "Favorita." The Prince of Wales sang to Mapleson, and he received a rapturous reception. The ruffled susceptibilities of Nilsson if introduced her to the Shah in the royal box. She had a little of each of these grand ladies should appear first, but the latter learned that his Majesty would only be present for a short time, and he insisted on singing first.

One amiable quality is seldom found in the prima donna—underrated scorn for money. It was found in the case of Mme. Marguerite Chapoy, a young French singer of rare talent, who sang through two seasons delightfully, but visibly pined away. She was in love with a French aristocrat, and she was determined to marry him. She was a very young girl, and she was very beautiful. She was a very young girl, and she was very beautiful. She was a very young girl, and she was very beautiful.

THE TENOR'S WAITCOAT AND APOLOGIES. open for her, but she never availed herself of it. She was contented with her children as an audience. The story is too trivial to be worth recording. It is a story of a tenor and a prima donna, and it is a story of a tenor and a prima donna. It is a story of a tenor and a prima donna, and it is a story of a tenor and a prima donna.

This good lady arrived on the night of the performance, and although forbidden the theater to be seen, she was in the box, and she was in the box. She was in the box, and she was in the box. She was in the box, and she was in the box. She was in the box, and she was in the box.

FOR GIRLS WHO WORK.

An Organization Designed to Look After Their Welfare. Working Woman in San Francisco—The Dangers That Lurk in Her Path. Something about the Life of the Homeless.

The entrance of women into the business life of our great cities has now become so general as to excite comment. It is not only the women who desire to see them flocking to the scenes of their daily toil, they come in groups, fresh-faced girls, chatting cheerily with each other on subjects which interest them most, and they are not at all bashful. They are not at all bashful. They are not at all bashful. They are not at all bashful.

WHERE SHALL THE GIRLS LIVE? A question that is beginning to press itself seriously upon the minds of the thoughtful and philanthropic members of our community. THE COLLEGE-BRED WOMAN. A Plea for a University Education for the Working Sex. The sending of our daughters to college to make them practical is an idea that it may take a long time to implant in the average parent's mind. The dreamy girl graduate, with her hand in the stars and her feet stumbling over the difficulties of everyday life is as much out of fashion as the delicate, sentimental woman of the Byronic type.

WHAT MY LOVER SAID. By the merest chance, in the twilight glow on the orchard path he met me. And he took my hand, and he kissed my cheek, and he said to me, "I love you." And he took my hand, and he kissed my cheek, and he said to me, "I love you." And he took my hand, and he kissed my cheek, and he said to me, "I love you."

THE OLDEST EX-SPEAKER. Robert C. Winthrop Hale and Henry at Eighty-Three. Robert C. Winthrop of Boston, Mass., the oldest living ex-speaker of Congress, was 83 years old on May 12. He was born in 1809, and he was born in 1809. He was born in 1809, and he was born in 1809. He was born in 1809, and he was born in 1809.

PROFICIENT RELIEF. For biliousness, diarrhoea, nausea, and dizziness, take Ayer's Pills. The lucky Waltonians who landed the new arrivals from that stream were fishing with clubs for large trout. THE WORLD OF SPORT.

Streams That Have Been Stocked with Eastern Trout. Lawn Tennis at the Olympic Grounds—Rifles Shooting Over the Bay—Swimming Contests at Alameda—Kang and Coasting.

A NOTABLE WEDDING. Count Herbert Bismarck to marry Countess Margarete Hoyos. As previously announced, says the New York World, the marriage of Count Herbert Bismarck to the Countess Margarete Hoyos will take place on the 23d of July.

THE KENNEL. The Cocker Spaniel as a Field Dog—Salt Lake City. Although pointers and setters are in great demand, it appears very much like a run will soon be had on cocker spaniels. For upland shooting especially in many parts of this State, where the grounds are bounded over and over again by a sea of brush, the cocker spaniel is the best.
