

READY TO BATTLE.

Fierce Highbinders Are Checked by Police.

GUNS AND COATS OF MAIL.

Walking Armies of the Sam Up and On Yek Tongs Prevented From Fighting on the Streets.

There can be no mistake about the intentions of the furious fighting factions of the rival highbinders...

War is on in Chinatown in dead earnest. The fierce hatred of the opposing societies of blackmailing, murderous Mongols can only be wiped out in two ways--in bloodshed and by the interference of an overwhelming force of police...

His slayer was a young man in the old 10. Six-year Tom. The two "whites" who were with him at the time of the assassination have escaped.

All attempts on the part of the Chinatown detectives, Cox and Glennon, to discover their place of concealment have been without avail.

It would appear to be the same with Wong Yek, the blood-thirsty member of the On Yek, who shot down the two "whites" on the morning of the early Saturday morning.

He has not been near his room on Pacific street since, and so carefully is he hidden by his fellow-murders that the police and the Society that the officers are, of course, unable to find him.

As stated in THE CALL yesterday, the cause of the fatal feud between the Sam Up and the On Yek tongs is a division of the revenue from the numerous houses of ill-repute in the city.

Their secret and recently established meeting place in Sullivan alley was there for a scene of great activity Saturday night.

THE BICYCLE-BOAT.

Its Modest Inventor May Be Proud of It.

HE RECITES ITS HISTORY.

Although So Successful, It Is Only a Toy Compared to Something From the Same Source.

"Thompson is not a salmon-keeper, although you find him at his bar," said the modest inventor of the bicycle-boat...

On that day, as related in THE CALL, Colin Thompson successfully launched his invention and brought it safely through the breakers from the Cliff House to Fort Point...

"Yes," said Mr. Thompson yesterday at his residence on Forty-third avenue, "the boat exceeded my expectations, but it is nothing to what I expect to make of it."

"Here is where it was made by me and my boy Thomas, 16 years of age. We were about nine months on it, working in our workshop."

"The boat is something on the catamaran build of surf-survivors used in South America. It is a horse and a bicycle wheel on a single axle."

"At present the one I used on Saturday will only carry two people when the ballast is out, but I am going to make a boat that will carry twenty people."

"The launching was largely a family affair. It was on the morning of the 10th, and the boat was towed down the Cliff House pier, and there Charles Carlsen went out in the surf to see that I got control, while Thomas Morton, the members of the life-saving station and others were around to bid me 'bon voyage.'"

"Of course there was some risk, seeing that I capsize a few days before, but I had taken precautions, and here I am, all right, baring a little stiffness of limb."

CHINESE MASHERS.

Raided by the Police on Stockton Street.

FOR OGGLING MISSION GIRLS.

Officers Knudsen and Adams Give Imitators of the American Dude a Warm Reception.

The referee's whistle blew, Palmer winning by two goals, or 4 points to 3. Captain Palmer has written to the captain of the Port Costa team...

The work of leveling the grounds is being pushed on rapidly, and even now it can be seen how great a change will be effected when it is completed.

The masher, owing to the activity of the police, appeared to be on the road to extinction, but the calling has been revived recently in a new and improved form.

The scene where the Chinese have lately been practicing the art of enticing the fair ones on Stockton street, between Clay and Washington.

On this street is situated the Chinese Church, and in the Chinese Christian women, many of whom are wives of Chinese stockpilers, and the inmates of the Chinese boarding houses.

The morning Sabbath service is the one which the Chinese masher frequents, and the scene of their operations. Every Sunday morning the masher goes to the church.

At the conclusion of the game Wren and Rogers, the French team, challenged Jones to play a triple handicap for $100 a side.

The success with which Ryan has met the masher has led to the management of the city making a number of improvements.

THE NATIONAL SINS.

Rev. Dr. Hamma's Fifth Special Sermon to the Young.

The fifth of a course of Sunday evening sermons to the young, based on the parable of the prodigal son, was delivered last night at the First Baptist church.

The subject of the discourse was "The Eder Brother's Inheritance," and the preacher held forth in a most impressive manner.
