A Back Number

—soap. Formerly used, even by persons of good judgment, in washing clothes and cleaning house. It was hard work, but they had nothing better. Now there's Pearline—that is better. There's less work and less wear. There isn't the runous rub, rub, rub, that made all the trouble. It's washing made easy—and millions of women are thankful for it. Back numbers ought to be cheaper, but they're not, in this case. Nothing that's safe to use costs less than Pearline.

Peelings and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as new." FALSE—Pearline is never peddled. If you grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—and it's back.

CASTLES IN THE AIR. With freedom and costly effort, with tapestries and gold and silver, I have furnished a noble hall—castles in the air.

Put it from the balls that glitter, and spruce with every gem, For the feast that you give, I have made in the hall, Who is to be the host?

A MARVELOUS CURE

Old Gulchermere was that day. Said alone before the fire, he was waiting for the morning sun to warm him toward the little boat that led to his house. "No one," he murmured sadly, shaking his head. For fifty years Gulchermere had been the healthiest of the village of Saint-Leon. Although not very learned, he was an honest man, and had treated his patients successfully, and being the only doctor in the village, he had a reputation for his skill. He had never fallen upon evil days. First a druggist had established himself in Saint-Leon, thereby depriving the health officer of the right of dispensing his medicines. The druggist, not stopping short at pecuniary injury, had lowered the health officer in the eyes of the people by sneering at his prescriptions, pronouncing them to be unscientific, and recommending them to be used with caution.

To add to his misfortunes a young doctor had established himself in Saint-Leon and had taken the place of the old doctor. Gulchermere would gladly have been cured by a doctor who from his study of the science of medicine had learned the simple remedies of Gulchermere. Indeed, the poor health officer was unable to cure the ailments of the village. His only faithful patients even abandoned him one by one, and he saw poverty and starvation in the faces of his patients. That winter day Gulchermere's sadness was mortal. Among the few patients who remained to him was a young man whose son Robert had been ill for the last four days. Four days, and the health officer had not yet called for a prescription for him.

HEALING BY MUSIC.

One of the Most Pleasant of Therapeutic Agents. That music will some day become a acknowledged therapeutic agent, I think is not a great thing to say. It is the emotional life, or the force consequent upon overwrought emotion, lies at the root of much of the illness which our young men and women are subjected to. No one who has tried to soothe and to recreate by calling into action other and unused faculties of the mind, will be surprised to find that music exercises during the entire day. For music is a health-giving power there is yet an almost untold field to be cultivated. Music will do more for the body with their eyes and ears open, may read what they run the hints of music's future as a health-giving agent. ASKED A LITTLE TOO MUCH.

Why Typewriters Did Not Write to Answer His Ad. He came into the office and left an advertisement, which read: Ten lady typewriters wanted; state ages. Apply by letter to A. B. & Co. When he went out, and four days later he came back.

Hawthorne's Daughter.

At 20 Ross Hawthorne married, her husband being George Parsons Lathrop, editor of the Atlantic City "Home Journal," a man of exquisite literary finish, a poet and a critic, writes Lillie Hamilton French in the February Ladies' Home Journal. The marriage took place in England. The bride was a young girl, and she returned to this country and Mrs. Lathrop began to become an American. Everything about her life had changed. Her husband had become her heritable home, and the longing for his verdure when once more she would be in the presence of her father and mother. She gave place only after considerable time with the growth of many new interests to a place that other one for the garden and the life of her husband, and later of her children.

ONE OF THE BEECHERS.

Centric in Some of His Ways, but Decidedly Charitable. The Rev. Thomas K. Beecher of Elmira is not a great man as his last noted brother, the pastor of the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, but he has many of his eccentric traits, including a boundless generosity. His motto is, "Give all thou hast to the poor." When he assumed charge of the Elmira church, he was thirty years ago he caused some scandal among the "holier-than-thou" people by raking the slums for opportunities to do good, but they have since been quiet.

NATIONAL GUARD.

Orders for the Legislative Inspection Issued.

Next Saturday Night's Tour of the Armories—Third Infantry Staff Appointments Announced.

The proposed visit to this city of the military committee of the Senate and Assembly on Saturday evening next is engaging the attention of the various companies of the Second Brigade. The captains are bestirring themselves to secure full uniforms for that evening and to make the best possible showing. An evening paper did an injustice to the National Guard in making the charge that closets were being ransacked to find the shabbiest, oldest and most worn uniforms to be worn by the companies on legislative inspection. An intimation is thus intended that the companies will resort to deception to impress the visitors more strongly than they really are. There is absolutely no foundation for the charge. On the contrary, a disposition is manifested to make the tour of the armories as impressive as possible. The companies are therefore compelled to utilize every article of clothing on hand, whether new or old, and to make the best possible showing.
