DEMAND REPEAL.

New York Chamber of Commerce Speaks.

HAS NO USE FOR SILVER.

Merchants of Gotham Hold the Sherman Law Accountable for the Present Commercial Depression.

Special to THE MORNING CALL.

NEW YORK, July 6.—The business men of the metropolis met to-day and considered the financial and commercial situation by which they are surrounded.

The occasion was the gathering of the Chamber of Commerce, in response to a call issued by the leading members, who therein declared: "The present disturbed condition of the finances of the country calls for public expression of opinion by business men as to the remedy to be applied for the restoration of confidence."

Vice-President Orr presided. John Claflin arose and said they did not need to be told that the strain business men are suffering from is a severe one.

He did not believe the nation is on the verge of a commercial panic; it is through one. There have been many causes, he said, which have contributed to the present trouble.

Most of them would right themselves in the natural course of business, but there is one, the chief cause, which is not included in the category, and that is the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman law.

It has caused the distinct and widespread weakening of us, while it has strengthened Europe. The speaker did not see how any sensible man could oppose the repeal of the law.

Any laws that might take its place should only be enacted after wise and lengthy deliberation. Claflin concluded by offering for adoption resolutions which recited that the country had often suffered from hasty and ill-considered legislation.

An amendment providing for a committee of seven to go to Washington and work for the repeal of the Sherman law was offered by Louis Windmiller and a lengthy discussion followed.

The refusal of the treasury to accept silver bullion at the prices offered yesterday weakened silver at the Stock Exchange to-day, and a decline of 7 1/2 per cent was registered.

Commercial bar sold at 73 to 74, Mexican dollars 58 to 59 and the bullion value of the American silver dollar 57 1/2 to 57 3/4.

Money was easy at 6 to 8 on call. The demand for stock exchange purposes was light, in the loans 6. Sterling exchange was quiet and firm.

The Commercial Advertiser's Washington special says: When Speaker Crisp left here some weeks ago he was charged with the President's rejection of his wishes regarding certain offices.

play a part in the selection of the Speaker.

The announcement that there is a possibility that Bland may be replaced as chairman of the Committee of Coinage, Weights and Measures has stirred them to renewed efforts.

Stories of an attempted combination between the free silver advocates and the Populists to place a candidate for the speakership in the field unless they have an assurance from Crisp that Bland will be retained at the head of the committee are floating about, but are not generally credited.

Among the more conservative the impression is that Bland will lead the committee. This would not, however, indicate that the entire committee will remain. It is known that Crisp has made absolutely no pledges one way or the other.

Senator Harris, President pro tem of the Senate, says he will be filibustering in the Senate against the bill to repeal the Sherman law.

Special to THE MORNING CALL.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The indications are that only one or two, if any, of the members of the Locke faction, recently convicted of murder in connection with the Choctaw troubles, will be executed.

Some months ago, when the Jones and Locke factions were on the point of meeting in battle, a careful investigation was made to determine who were the duly constituted authorities of the tribe.

The conclusion was reached that Governor Faison was undoubtedly entitled to recognition, and Inspector Faison went to the scene of the threatened trouble with instructions to support Governor Jones as a representative of the national Government.

Colonel Lamont said to-night that the President's condition remained about the same. The President was able to go on the piazza for a short time during the afternoon.

Many telegrams have been received inquiring as to the seriousness of his illness. It is not of a serious character, but Surgeon-General Bryant says the President must have absolute rest and quiet.

The President will remain through July. A representative of the Associated Press had the following interview with Dr. Bryant:

"Doctor, you would confer a great favor by making some part of the medical statement regarding the President's condition."

"The President is all right," said the doctor emphatically. "From what is he suffering?"

"He is suffering from rheumatism, just as reported this afternoon. Those reports were correct."

"Then, doctor, the report that he is suffering from a malignant or cancerous growth on the mouth, and that an operation has been found necessary, and has been performed to relieve him, is not correct?"

"He is suffering from his teeth, that's all," answered the doctor. "Has any operation been performed?"

"That's all," said the doctor again.

A STRICKEN ISLE.

Earthquake Shocks on San Nicolas.

GALES AND TIDAL WAVES.

Terrible Experience of Fishermen Off the Coast of Southern California.

Special to THE MORNING CALL.

SAN DIEGO, July 6.—The steam-schooner Jennie Griffin arrived this morning from San Nicolas Island. Captain Mullett and crew tell of strange and wonderful meteorological disturbances on the island.

The schooner is engaged in the crawfish business for the Pacific Coast Fishing and Packing Company of this city, and a couple of weeks ago left a gang of eight men on San Nicolas to prosecute the work.

The Jennie Griffin arrived there last Sunday to load the catch for this port, but received news instead which astounded the whole party, and caused Captain Mullett to take on the gang from shore and leave the island as quickly as he could.

The men reported that the island had been visited by a tremendous gale of wind which raised the sea in the nature of a tidal wave, completely filling with sand the only harbor of the island, which is marked "Coral harbor" on the Government charts.

Captain Mullett was dumfounded to find a stretch of sand where two weeks ago he rode at anchor in his schooner. A big crawfish car holding about five tons of fish, which was moored in the bay, was half-covered with sand and the fish were lost.

The foreman on shore kept a logbook, which was seen by THE CALL correspondent. In it is recorded everything occurring from the date of the arrival of the men until July 2. The weather for several days was most remarkable.

Everything seemed to foretell disaster. Seabirds on other living things acted strangely. On June 26 at 11 a. m. a heavy earthquake was experienced on the island.

The oscillation was from east to west, the shocks being of several seconds' duration. The Kanakas and one negro in a separate camp were scared almost to death and became almost crazy, running up and down in terror.

The weather was then very foggy with stifling heat. A peculiar light covered the sea in spite of the fog, adding a weird aspect to the scene.

So far as the men could tell the fog centered about the island. Next day a tremendous wind-storm arose, causing great damage. No attempt was made by the men to work. All expected the island to sink in the sea at any moment.

On June earthquake was heavy over the island. The men observed a few years of transparency of the sea for quite a distance, and Captain Mullett thinks the steamer's compasses were affected by the strange occurrences and the accompanying electrical disturbance.

The Jennie Griffin was in the neighborhood in the fog and her two compasses would not work together while near the island. The men could not make out the name of the steamer, which finally stood away from the island.

Still another distinct shock of earthquake was felt at noon on June 30, the vibrations being from east to west. This completed the demoralization of the camp, and the logbook says the men became howling savages.

A remarkable incident connected with the phenomena is that crawfish and other fish died from some unknown cause, probably electricity, as the men remembered afterward seeing lights on the water at night.

When the Jennie Griffin hove in sight the men waded out to meet the small boats, refusing to return to the land. Captain Mullett refused to believe their story, but was finally compelled to accept the foreman's word. All the men were taken on board the schooner, which hastily sailed away.

San Nicolas is the most westerly of the group known as the Santa Barbara Islands and is about 150 miles from San Diego. Twenty-five years ago it was covered with grass, which afforded pasture for thousands of sheep, whose owner lived there in a fine residence.

A strange transformation has been going on since then. It is now a windy, barren, sandy waste, where but a few hundred sheep without a shepherd eke out a miserable existence.

It is but eight miles long and four wide, but wherever one digs can be found human bones and skulls. In the distant past it must have been rather densely populated, or may have been the site of a burial-ground or a battle-field.

Some fifty years ago the last inhabitant was found in the person of a woman. A Santa Barbara otter-hunter named Nidever found her and took her to his home, where she died shortly after without being able to make any one understand her language.

She was found in a cave, subsisting on fish caught with hooks made of abalone shells. Her discovery caused considerable interest in the scientific world at the time.

Blood Poisoning

"Twelve years ago my wife was picking raspberries when she scratched herself on a briar, the wound from which soon developed into a running sore, between her knee and ankle. We tried medical skill on every side, with no effect. About a year ago she read of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to try it herself, and while taking the first bottle she felt better and continued with it until to-day she is entirely cured, and better than ever. The sore was healed up in seven weeks. Her limb is perfectly sound." J. N. AUGENBAUGH, ETERS, York Co., Pa.
