

COULD NOT AGREE

Nellie Horton's Fate Yet Undecided.

HOW THE JURY BALLOTTED.

Stood Ten Against Two For Acquittal.

HEYNEMANN IS NOW JUBILANT.

He Will Ask That Nellie's Bail Be Reduced and He Be One of the Sureties.

Nellie Horton's fate is as yet undecided, for twelve men intimated to Judge Wallace yesterday that they had been unable to agree as to whether or not the defendant should be punished for the killing of Charles R. Hagans at 207 Eddy street on July 9 last.

When Judge Wallace ordered the jury into the custody of two deputy sheriffs on the previous night he did so remarking that the evidence in the case was so voluminous that it was not likely that any conclusion would be reached in haste. The judge, therefore, had all the accommodations necessary provided for them. They were escorted to dinner, after which they returned to deliberate. At 10 o'clock they were taken down to the Baldwin Hotel and put to bed, returning to the jury-room yesterday morning about 8 o'clock.

From quite an early hour an eager throng gathered around the closed doors of Department 6 of the Superior Court waiting to witness the conclusion of one of the most sensational trials on record. At about 10 o'clock Nellie Horton arrived in court in charge of a Deputy Sheriff, and, taking her accustomed seat beside her counsel, A. Heynemann, released into her wanted state of apparent apathy. Her sister, Mrs. Cummings, entered the courtroom soon after seeming very anxious, and the two sat silent and motionless while the murmuring crowd around them discoursed in whispers of the division in opinion among the jurors.

Judge Wallace came into court soon after 10 o'clock and went on with the usual business of the day without mentioning the Horton case. It was then intimated that the judge had decided not to interfere with the jury in any way, but to wait patiently until it decided to come into court.

It was about twenty minutes past 10 when the bell connecting the jury-room with the court rang, announcing that the jury had something to communicate to the court. Judge Wallace dispatched his bailiff at once to bring the jury in, while a breathless silence took possession of the courtroom. The defendant alone looked as apathetic as ever, and did not even glance up as the jurors filed into court and took their seats.

The roll was called and the jurors were asked if they had agreed upon a verdict. "We have not," replied Sydney M. Smith, foreman of the jury. "We have argued this case carefully among ourselves, and we are satisfied that there is no prospect of an agreement. Our ballots have been unaltered from the first, and we know that it will be impossible for us to find a verdict."

Judge Wallace said that it would be useless to keep the jury out any longer under the circumstances, and that the jurors should be discharged. He then ordered that the jury be discharged, and that the trial be continued until the next day.

"Isn't it splendid?" said Attorney Heynemann, rubbing his hands with glee. "I sell that a virtual acquittal. It's a glorious victory. I am afraid that there was a strong prejudice against the girl that I never felt comfortable at any stage of the proceedings; but now I feel confident that her next trial will set her free."

"Am I going to remain in the case? Yes, sir. I said I would never again undertake a criminal trial, but in this case I must change my mind. First of all, I am going to make an appeal to the court to have my client's bail reduced from $5000 to $2500. If my application is successful I am prepared to go on the bond myself."

With that Mr. Heynemann turned to console his client on what he called her disappointment at not being actually acquitted.

A juror said after the trial that although numerous ballots were taken during the jury's long deliberation, the division always remained the same. "We stood ten to two from the start," he said, "in favor of acquittal. We worked hard, but we couldn't pull the other two over."

From subsequent information received it is understood that the jury was divided as follows: For acquittal—E. W. Bushnell, Abner Doble, S. J. Hendy, H. C. George, William R. Kulech, William Leizer, David Dodge, George T. Bowman, A. Haskett and James Dunn. For conviction—Sydney M. Smith and A. K. Durrow. Deputy Sheriff Curtis received a vote of thanks for the consideration he displayed while the jury were under his charge.

COUNSELOR CLARKE.

Remanded by Judge Coffey, He Is Released by Judge Trout.

Counselor Alfred Clarke appeared before Judge Coffey on Monday evening and asked to be allowed to go home to sleep. He seemed very humble, and as he was moved to tears while making his piteous appeal, Judge Coffey softened, and allowed him to go upon his own recognizances until yesterday morning, the understanding being that the counselor was to use his leisure time in securing an attorney to represent him in his numerous contests.

Yesterday morning the counselor appeared before Judge Coffey and stated that he had not yet secured the services of an attorney, but he hoped soon to do so. He asked to be again released or admitted to bail pending his appeal to the Federal courts from the order of Judge Murphy of Del Norte, committing him to jail for contempt of court in refusing to obey an order of the court directing him to file the schedule of his assets and liabilities for the benefit of his creditors.

Judge Coffey refused to be won over in like manner twice, and was proof against Clarke's blandishments, consequently the counselor was remanded into the custody of Deputy Sheriff Dwyer. Before returning to jail, however, Clarke dragged the deputy of Judge Trout's court, where he made an application for another writ of habeas corpus. He told the old story over again, and Judge Trout was so completely subjected by the counselor's quaint remarks that he allowed Clarke to go upon his own recognizances until this morning, when he will again appear before Judge Trout.

Stole Some Grapes. Joseph Reynolds, a 15-year-old colored boy, was arrested yesterday on a warrant at the instance of Thomas McCabe, charging him with burglary. The boy came from Chicago a few days ago and tried to get work on the racetrack, but failed.

As he was hungry and had no money he stole a bunch of grapes on Monday from a Southern Pacific boxcar. Reynolds said yesterday that the boxcar was open when he took the grapes, so that he is really guilty only of petty larceny.

BOTH HARD SWEARERS.

The Jury Decided to Believe Neither Side.

The jury in Judge Wallace's court was unable to decide yesterday as to the merits of the case of John Miller, alias Kelly, who was being tried for an assault with intent to commit murder upon J. F. Upson. Upson said that one night he entered his room in a Howard-street lodging-house and found Miller concealed beneath the bed. Miller started to shoot and there was a scuffle, which was stopped by the police. Upson was shot twice. He testified that he did not know Miller from Adam, but he took him for a burglar.

On the other hand Miller said Upson was an old acquaintance, and that he had gone to the room on Upson's invitation. Three witnesses testified in the case who were accused by counsel on either side of being jail birds. Miller's reputation was of the most admirably shady description, and Upson has been accused of several charges to be found on the Police Court calendar.

Judge Wallace in charging the jury dwelt a short time on the evidence, and finally told his hearers to make what they could of it. The jury did so, but were so hopelessly divided in opinion that later in the afternoon they were discharged. "That's a sensible jury," remarked Judge Wallace later. "They didn't know which side to believe, so they believed neither. And I think, perhaps, they are right."

PRESBYTERIANS.

The Fifty Ministers Who Will Meet To-Day.

San Franciscans Attach but Little Importance to the Council to Assemble in Cleveland.

The telegraphic announcement that a church council of fifty prominent Presbyterian ministers will meet in Cleveland to-day to decide upon a policy for the future was read with no little surprise by the clergymen of that denomination in this city.

The call, which was issued by the committee of the New York synod appointed after the disposal of the Briggs case, contains several statements which reflect rather unfavorably though indirectly upon the action taken by the General Assembly in regard to certain church matters.

Several of the Presbyterian clergy were seen yesterday, and while regretting that any of their brethren had felt called upon to take such a step united in the belief that the movement would not amount to anything.

Dr. Robert Mackenzie declared that the matter was not worth discussion or consideration, as there is nothing in it of any importance to the church. Fifty self-delegated ministers, he said, amounted to very little in comparison with the 600 church delegates who compose the General Assembly, and whatever they may decide upon in their council will have little or no effect upon the church as a whole.

Dr. John H. Hill said that in his judgment the council's proceeding would not have force enough to produce a ripple upon the surface of a calm sea.

"For years," he continued, "prophets of evil have been prophesying that there is to be a split in the Presbyterian church, but the split has not come."

"The great synod of New York refused to take action even indirectly condemning the proceedings of the last General Assembly in the Briggs case, and to me this was and is most significant of the real mind of our church."

"We Presbyterians are a fighting folk proverbially, but we are also a loyal folk. When there is any judgment pronounced by those in authority, even though it be not to our liking we submit in silence. The movement in Cleveland will amount to nothing, and it will affect us on this coast not at all. The Briggs controversy, which seemed almost to threaten a church upheaval in the East, practically never crossed the Rockies."

"Our church is governed exactly as our commonwealth is governed. There is first the church session, composed of the pastor and the elders of his church; second, the presbytery, consisting of all the ministers in a certain locality, and one member from each congregation; next higher in authority comes the synod, which generally comprises all the presbyteries in a State, but when such a gathering would be too large, is composed of delegates from the presbyteries instead of all the members thereof. Highest of all is the General Assembly, comprising representatives from every presbytery in the country. This is the supreme court of the church, from the judgment of which there is no appeal. Any movement which embodies a dissatisfaction with the working of the General Assembly is a disloyal one, and should meet with no countenance."

A DAY SET

For the Sale of the Oregon Pacific Railroad.

December 14 has been set by the courts of Oregon as the date for the sale of the Oregon Pacific Railroad system. The purchaser will be required to deposit $200,000 in cash or certified check.

No news has been received lately as to who will be the possible purchasers of the road, but Milloinville Blair is still in the field with the Southern Pacific a close second.

"After the road is sold all outstanding accounts will be settled," said General Agent Vaughn yesterday.

The affairs of the road have not been interfered with, and a ticket office has been opened up on Market street. Freight business with Southern Oregon has already increased in spite of the rumor that the road is about to change hands.

A Girl Assaulted.

A warrant was issued yesterday afternoon from Judge Joachimsen's court for the arrest of "John Doe," a contractor on the Howard street cable, in the charge of criminally assaulting a 13-year-old girl who lives with her parents on Twenty-second street.

HOME OF PEACE.

Healing Without Doctors at Beulah.

DEDICATORY CEREMONIES.

The Determining Reasons for the Enterprise.

LASTING CURES BY FAITH.

A Beautiful Spot Among the Hills Where the Sick and Despondent May Find Rest.

A new kind of establishment for the healing of the sick in body and mind was opened at Beulah, Alameda County, yesterday. It is the work of Mrs. Carrie J. Montgomery, assisted by her husband, George S. Montgomery.

At 2:30 P. M. the dedicatory exercises commenced. After the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," had been sung and Rev. E. Brown had made the introductory prayer, Mrs. Mamie P. Ferguson said that amid the storms of life through which she had passed she had learned the blessedness of peace—the sweet rest among the hills for the tired children of God. As a rule we do not give the prominence to peace which we ought. After his work God rested on the seventh day, and the time before Christ's ascension in the New Testament stories were wrapped round to the sweet breath of peace. God looks for gifts from us—gifts which are the fruit of our hands—like the meat offerings that come after the sin offering and the burnt offerings. It was a great thing to have such a home as this started, and a covenant should be made with God that he shall keep his eyes on this spot.

Mrs. Gertrude Hinman then sang the "River of Peace," after which Mrs. Montgomery said that for two years and two months in her early life she had gradually neared death from spinal disease and consumption, but by the prayer of faith, after her doctor had given her up, had been completely cured. Up to that time her life had been an unsatisfactory one, but the cure was spiritual as well as physical, and peace came and dwelt in her heart. She was young then, 21 years of age, and she gave herself up as a sacrifice to do anything for God.

By degrees, working in the slums of a city, in prisons and in penitentiaries and preaching, she ascertained that the days of miracles were by no means past. She learned of the enormous armies of the sick, of the tired, of the worn out and despondent, and requests were sent to her for prayers. Often at the hour of prayer the people at a distance were healed, and that, too, of almost every kind of disease. At Brooklyn, N. Y., she opened a little cottage at which were healed a great number who now are working zealously in home and in foreign missions. The motto in Buffalo was "Jesus in the Midst"; it will be the motto here.

For money and work she was then, she hope, and he never failed. One day just before the rent—$30—was due, her father, a good man, but not perfect in faith, asked where she would get it. The answer was that she knew of no one who would help her there came from Georgia $50, which carried them through. She did not expect to be married, but God was preparing her husband for his work, and he, too, by faith was cured of diabetes. At Chicago, at a camp-meeting, they discovered their lives were to be one, and as her life would have to be passed in California, she wrote to the contributors to a fund to build a home of rest, with the rest of the world by 10 cents until it reached a moderate amount, and with a single exception, all agreed that the money might be used for the same purpose in California. The name of the Home of Peace was chosen because one day when her husband was directing the building a white dove came, and after hovering over the place for awhile, it had flown away as quietly and silently as it had come. In its work she claimed independence, though her husband had and might aid as much as he was led to do.

George S. Montgomery offered up the dedicatory prayer, Mrs. Lindow, the matron of the home, Rev. Mr. Lindow, who will train Japanese for missionary work, made a few remarks, Mrs. Mills of Mills Seminary testified her interest in the work and her gladness that such a worthy enterprise should be started. An old lady, who was addressed as Grandma Mead, said she was glad that there was at last a place where one could get rest and be healed without doctors, a thing she had been trying to get for twenty years with the only result that she was deemed crazy.

After a few words from Rev. Edward Brown and Rev. G. P. Ferguson, Rev. Mr. Shepherd asked the blessing, and the ceremonies were over.

The Home of Peace is intended as a refuge for those sick people may seek for one or two weeks without cost and go for healing by prayer. No longer stay will as a rule, be permitted, the time mentioned being deemed ample for cure.

The Home of Peace stands on a high elevation in a valley shut off, except in two places, from the rest of the world by hills and its name befits its appearance. The building is renaissance, of three stories. The first floor has two sitting-rooms, a library, a dining-room and a fine kitchen; the second floor has twelve and the third seventeen rooms, all fitted up neatly and tastily. The cost, apart from the ground and the furnishing, was over $6000 and the structure took about four months to build.

As the train drew out of the valley and the hills grew purple in the waning sunlight that shone on the windows and made them look like burnished silver, the building looked impressively calm and restful and well suited in its name, "The Home of Peace."

Anti-Chinese Meeting. The Law and Order League held another open-air meeting at the corner of Hayes and Gough streets, in the Thirty-seventh Assembly District, last night. Ex-Senator Lenihan presided. Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, G. W. Fox and Denis Kearney were the speakers. They referred to the action of the Election Commission calling for the election of fifteen fresholders to frame a charter, and intimated that the league would nominate candidates to frame a charter and fight for their election at the polls. The Chinese and their supporters received most of the attention of the speakers. Another meeting will be held to-night at the corner of California and Fillmore streets.

SPORTING NEWS.

A Big Rifle Shoot Arranged—A Football From Old Ireland.

Arrangements have been completed between Company C of the First Infantry of this city and Company F, Eighth Infantry, of Oroville for a rifle contest. The match will be shot by teams of thirty men each from Company C and Company F at Sacramento on December 17. The contest will be allowed each team. The marksmen of this city who will take part are now practicing for this big shoot.

The Acme Club of Oakland is making great preparations for its field day games at the Oakland Trotting Park on the 30th inst. The club will have a parade in the forenoon, and in the afternoon the wheelmen will contest in several racing events, for which valuable prizes will be given.

The Bay City Wheelmen propose to hold a minstrel entertainment in the near future in one of the local halls.

The following is the schedule of association football games that will take place at Central Park: November 12, Pastimes vs. Rangers; November 19, Thistles vs. Wanderers; November 26, Fort Mason vs. Pastimes; December 3, Rangers vs. Wanderers.

A meeting of the Geraldine Football Club was held in Irish-American Hall last night.

The report of the committee on games was received and filed. The committee on uniforms proposed for further time to complete their labors. The committee's chairman, Captain J. R. Kelly, stated that negotiations were pending for the purchase of fifty handsome blue jerseys and knickerbockers for the club members.

The committee on games was authorized to arrange a match with the Farnell Football Team for Sunday next in Golden Gate Park.

John Roach and Pierce Towers were initiated to membership. Jerry Breslin was elected financial secretary for the ensuing term. Mr. Breslin tendered the use of a handsome and commodious clubroom at his residence, 7 Harrison avenue, to the club, which was accepted by the members, who will move into their new quarters at the next meeting.

From a private letter received by Theodore Luch from a friend in Ireland, the football donated by J. M. Sullivan as a trophy for the initial football tournament of the Geraldines and the Emmets or Farnell is completed, and is on its way to this city. The writer states that it is a beautiful specimen of handiwork—a regular association Gaelic ball, the cover being of the finest rhino leather, finished in every respect for richness and durability by the well-known manufacturers, Robert Day & Sons, of 136 Patrick street, Cork. The ball, with the donor's name and destination attached, has been on exhibition in the window of a leading jeweler in the Grand Arcade, a leading business thoroughfare of Cork, where it has excited much curiosity and admiration among local football enthusiasts and was viewed by thousands of people.
