Democracy Has Just Three Days Now to Secure the Passage of Its Measure.

ROSINA VOKES DEAD.

One of the Most Popular of High Class Comedians.

She Worked Hard and Success Followed Her Labors, but at the Cost of Life.

LONDON, Jan. 29.—Rosina Vokes, one of the famous Vokes family, is dead. Miss Vokes was 40 years old. She went on the stage at the age of six months. In 1877 she married Cecil Clay and retired from the stage for a time, but returned to it again. She had been suffering from over-work in the United States, when she closed her tour there, and sailed for England the middle of last December.

Rosina Vokes.

The Vokes family was the foremost of four children, the others being Frederick, Jessie and Victoria. Their first appearance in the style of comedy which afterward made them famous in many parts of the world was in "The Belles of the Kitchen," at Drury Lane Theatre in London in 1870. Rosina was then a beautiful girl with a most attractive figure. She had a baby face, with big, inquisitive blue eyes and a shock of golden curls. Soon she became the rage in London and the heroine of every British schoolboy.

The Vokes family was reared within the sound of Bow Bells, Vokes père and mère keeping a theatrical costume shop in the neighborhood of Covent Garden. It was therefore quite natural that the children should acquire a taste for the stage. Mrs. Field, an aunt, wrote "The Belles of the Kitchen" for the children and successfully launched them upon their career.

In 1877 Rosina married Cecil Clay, a London barrister, and her success on the stage was transferred to the social world. She retired from the public stage, but in 1884, when the income of the Clays grew smaller, Rosina determined to retrieve their losses by returning to the stage. She decided to leave England, the scene of her social triumphs, and came to this country with a company. She was always a conscientious worker, and there never was anything in her performances that would dispense the most fastidious. Her health became gradually undermined, and during her last appearance in this city last year she frequently performed against the advice of her physicians. When she sailed from New York for her home she was a total wreck, and her condition became gradually worse until death put an end to her sufferings.

The inmates tumbled out as fast as possible and retreated up into town. When Cole tired of his fun he disappeared. Officers went down to Shingle Springs to-day in search of him.

THEIR MAD RUSH.

Descent of the Meagher Relatives.

VISIT THE VICTIMS' HOUSE.

Impudent Demand Made for All the Property.

DRIVEN AWAY BY OFFICERS.

Disgraceful Attempt of Heirs of the Murdered Woman to Bluff the Wounded Husband.

PETALUMA, Jan. 29.—One sensation follows another, and to-day this city was filled with excitement by the report that the heirs of the late Nancy Meagher had last night endeavored to force forcible possession of the disputed Meagher property in the face of the fact that Frank Meagher, the wounded husband, is lying ill and helpless from the effects of his wounds on the place, and also with the consciousness of the fact stating them in the face that their murdered relative has scarcely been laid in the grave. Trouble certainly was expected by the citizens, and a long, bitter fight for the property will, no doubt, ensue and furnish food for gossip for months to come, but it was thought that after the feeling which had prevailed in this vicinity against the relatives of the murdered woman they would at least try to divert the channels of public opinion and keep their peace until after the body of their relative had at any rate become cold in the grave.

Bank of Rich Deposit Found on a Folsom Ranch.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 29.—The Bee's Folsom correspondent sends the following: David Blower, a rancher who resides about two miles from Folsom, came into town to-day and displayed samples of wonderfully rich gold-bearing soil. He claims to have found a deposit of ten feet in height, which assays the same throughout. The samples literally sparkle with gold. Rough estimates place the value of the deposit at $100,000. It is located on the land of John Cardwell, which is protected by an agricultural fence and is about 100 feet from the road. It is stated that for the sum of $500 down or $1000 in advance, Mr. Blower will sell the deposit in bulk, or write articles promising to pay such a sum. WOULD LO LITTLE.

Wilson Made Small Concessions to the Californians.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The great fight which the California Democrats in Congress promised to put up against certain provisions of the Wilson tariff bill is over with as far as the House of Representatives is concerned. No amount of argument or persuasion can induce Chairman Wilson to make any further changes. The Californians wanted an increase in the tariff on wine, raisins, prunes, Zante currants, borax and quicksilver, and free scrap iron, petroleum and grain bars. Mr. Wilson and his colleagues refused any of these changes with the exception of making petroleum free. Scrap iron pays a 10 per cent duty, a reduction, and he puts a duty of 3 cents a pound on Zante currants. The wine men here from California and New York all now turn their attention to the Senate, and they are hopeful that something may be accomplished at that end of the Capitol.
