

ALL IN REVENGE.

Smith's Betrayal of the Emerald Ring.

HIS STORY RELATED IN COURT

Miller's Confession Will Be Ready To-day.

MORE ARRESTS WILL BE MADE.

The Mariners Mutinied Against Lockhart Because He Heard Spirits Rapping.

Judge Morrow's courtroom in the Appraisers' building never held a larger audience than that which assembled there yesterday morning to hear the trial of the Emerald smugglers, United States officers were present in knots and groups. Several tanned mariners and Government hawk-shaws were there, and there was one woman, a little creature dressed in black, who appeared to take an extraordinary interest in the case. The most important witness of the day was A. J. Smith of 1601 Hyde street. He it was who revealed the names of the members of the ring and told of their operations to the Government; and he did it, or says he did it, not because they had "done him up." Not being of that class who turn the left cheek after the right has been smitten he wanted to get even with them. Smith told his story like a schoolboy repeating a well-covered lesson. He rattled off dates and incidents at a rate that appalled the stenographer, and when his tale was ended and George A. Knight, who represented defendant Wichman, had asked him embarrassing questions about his past, the twelve men in the box had a fairly good idea of the Government's case against the smugglers. After Smith the most important witness in the case was Miller, a cook, whose confession will be read to the jury this afternoon. Wichman, Thomas, Mensing and Greenwald were present. The other members of the ring whose names are known are Voss, Svenson and Josley. They are safe on the other side of the Canadian boundary. The four defendants paid little attention to Smith's testimony and confessor Miller heard none of it, for he spent the day in the Marshal's office. Smith told the jury that he was a native son and that he was employed for fifteen years by Goodall, Perkins & Co. While he was working for the firm in July, 1891, he was introduced to William A. Whaley by Curtin, the purser of the Umattila, who told him that Whaley was going to Bering Sea to catch seals and was trying to obtain money to fit up the Italeyon for the voyage. "I agreed to put in $2500," said Smith, "and Wichman, Thomas and Greenwald also put in some money. I had become acquainted with them some time before I met Whaley. The Italeyon sailed, and three months later I met Curtin, who told me that she had been seized at Yokohama and that a lot of opium was on board. I then understood that she was in the smuggling business, and as I had not money to have any hand in that I told Curtin to get me the money I had put up for the trip and gave him the receipt. The money had been sent to McLean, one of the gang at Victoria. The next morning Curtin was found dead in his room. There was a bullet hole in his head and there was a pistol near him. I believe he was murdered, but the case was never properly investigated, and my receipt was noted. "Whaley obtained the release of the Haleyon from the Japanese Government and proceeded to Honolulu in the cargo of opium, and Wichman, Greenwald and I found him there in the following year. He said that he could not sell the drug, but I learned that he did sell it, and that he subsequently was in the city and is living there now. I believe that Wichman, Thomas and Greenwald received their shares and that Thomas pocketed mine. He is the man I am most anxious to get even with. Smith said that on his return from Honolulu the Emerald ring was organized in Greenwald's room on Powell street. He knew what was going on, and joined them in order that he might buy them, as he was confident that they had combined with Whaley to swindle him out of the money he contributed toward the fitting out of the Haleyon. McLean was the chief of the ring, and he thought they had better confine their operations to the landing of Chinese and opium in San Francisco, as he had influence with the customs officials here. He had influence with the Chinese and opium at Victoria, and Greenwald was chosen to attend to the landing of the cargoes. Wichman and Thomas were to provide the money needed and a vessel, and they agreed that Smith should be master, and Miller and Svenson as crew. The profits were to be divided between the members of the ring, and the crew were to be paid much higher wages than they had ever received before.

It was found necessary to get rid of Lockhart before the little boat sailed on her first voyage. He is a spiritualist, and told his little crew that he could tell when a storm was coming from the warnings given him in his shadowy world. He induced his spectral acquaintances to do some rapping in the presence of the crew, just to show that they were around and ready to perform any service for which they might be required. This ended Lockhart's career as master. The crew heard the rappings, and mutinied, declaring that they would not sail with a "hoodoo" captain.

Voss was engaged to take his place, and sailed to the Emerald. He returned with 1000 pounds of opium and eight Chinese. The cargo was landed near the foot of Laguna street, and the proceeds of the sale amounting to $2100 was divided among the smugglers. "On July 14, the Emerald left the wharf," Smith testified. "According to McLean's calculations it would take the vessel twelve days to go to Victoria, and I decided to go to Victoria, and I returned. We were to go to Clallam Bay on the American side, and there get Chinese and opium, but the plan was changed, and the vessel went instead to Sook Bay on the British side, as it was safer there.

"I decided to capture the Emerald on her return. On August 8, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, I saw the Emerald sailing from the wharf. She had on board fifty yards of Meigs wharf. I saw Wichman that night and told him the vessel was in. Captain Voss found us and said he had brought 1000 pounds of opium and eight Chinese, which he called him away from me. He had successfully landed everything that was on board. "All the conspirators were around about that time and were quite jubilant over the fact that they had succeeded in landing the gang until late in October, and when I met McLean he told me that the Emerald was then long overdue and he feared she was lost. She had gone up to Victoria for the cargo, but ten days later he told me that Captain Voss had returned from the north and had run away with the stuff. Voss and Svenson were arrested at Sacramento.

"After they had been arrested they jumped their bail. McLean thought that Voss had made away with all the earnings of the voyage. The gang was dissatisfied and asked for an accounting. Josley, who was in charge of the cargo, which was paid for the Chinese and opium, and the rest lost the money that was paid to get Voss and Svenson out on bail. Voss took the proceeds of the voyage with him, and he wrote a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, giving him all my information about the smuggling business, and waited a month, but got no reply. I then saw Phenix, the special agent of the treasury, and told him that I had given up. Subsequently I swore to a complaint against the ring. "I think Wichman put $800 and Thomas $900 into the business. McLean put up no money. He agreed to go north and get the opium and Chinese, and Greenwald agreed to attend to the landing of the stuff. "What was your motive (in going into the transaction)? Attorney Knight asked. "My only motive was to get even with them," said Smith. "Is it not a fact," asked Mr. Knight, "that you were once employed by Goodall, Perkins & Co. and embezzled $6000 from them, was arrested and became a walf on the street?"

Smith was not allowed to answer the question. "Were you short in your accounts with Goodall, Perkins & Co.?" "I was short $1000," said Smith. "Were you short $5 or $5000?" "I can't remember." "Who were the original conspirators?" "McLean, Greenwald, Thomas and Wichman." "Was it never your intention to go to Victoria with the Emerald?" "No, it was not." "You put six months' provisions on board the Emerald, and you do not know where they are?" "I did it so that I could take the stuff out again and use it myself. I did that so as to injure the gang as much as possible." "Do you know of your own knowledge that there was ever a pound of opium or a Chinese landed from the Emerald?" "I do not know." "You are now employed by the Government, is that not so?" "Yes, temporarily." "What do you get?" "Three dollars a day and expenses." "Orin S. Henderson of Stockton followed Smith. He owned the yacht Emerald for two years and had it insured for $1225, of which $750 was paid in cash and the balance in notes. Smith told him that Wichman would sign one of the notes. The balance of the purchase price was paid to Smith by the bank in the form of a check in favor of Wichman Bros. and part in the form of a note signed by Smith and Wichman. "Did Smith tell you that he was going to do with the yacht?" Knight asked. "He said that he was going to fit her up for racing."

Mark Lane, a notary, testified that he remembered saying and acknowledging the bill of sale of the yacht, which was given in his presence from Henderson to Smith. John Wilson, a waterman employed by Goodall, Perkins & Co., stated that he had introduced Smith to the Emerald in 1893. He did not know who paid for the yacht. F. Wild, dealer in ship supplies, testified that he sold lamps to the Emerald on the order of Captain Lockhart. He was introduced to Smith by Henderson. On another occasion Voss ordered provisions for the Emerald, and Smith was present when the groceries were paid for, and Voss said that the vessel was going on a pleasure trip to San Diego. Malcolm Patterson, a sailmaker, testified that he made and repaired sails for the Emerald on Smith's order. Captain Lockhart was then in charge of the vessel.

Miss Nellie Smith, A. J. Smith's sister, testified that Thomas called at her house in July, 1893, and in a conversation with her said that he had got a good amount of take the Emerald out on a trial trip. Thomas told her that Wichman, McLean, Greenwald, a lady, the captain and two sailors were on board. Smith, in reply to question by Knight, said that she knew nothing about the Emerald until Thomas spoke of her. She had known him about two years, but he had never been in her house before that time, and she could not remember that he had ever been introduced to her. "Didn't you think it rather strange that a man that you hardly knew should come to your house and talk to you about these things?" "Well, yes, but I wanted to be polite." Late in the afternoon warrants were issued for the arrest of two men who were connected with the ring and whose names have not yet appeared.

OFFICERS CHOSEN

Third Day's Session of Odd Fellows.

J. H. Simpson of San Francisco Is Elected Grand Master by the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows resumed its session at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. J. H. Simpson of this city, the deputy grand master, was chosen as the grand master. He was the only candidate for the office, being elected unanimously. The other officers elected were: P. F. Gosbey of San Jose, deputy grand master; J. W. Warboys of Santa Rosa, grand warden; George T. Shaw of San Francisco, grand secretary; Moses Greenbaum of San Francisco, grand treasurer (Grand Treasurer Lemont having declined reelection); J. F. Thompson of Eureka, representative to S. G. L. C. O. Burton, V. S. Northey, C. W. Moulthrop, grand trustees. J. H. Simpson, the new grand master, was born in the city of San Francisco, and is 38 years of age. For the past ten years he has taken an active interest in the order, serving as district deputy, upon committees, etc., until two years ago, when he was elected grand warden. Last year he was advanced to the chair of deputy grand master, and at this session unanimously chosen chief executive. Mr. Simpson was formerly foreman of the Bulletin composition room.

There were a number of prominent gentlemen for the office of grand secretary, made vacant by the death of the lamented Walter B. Lyon last November. The choice fell upon George T. Shaw, who was appointed to fill the vacancy. He is a native of San Francisco, and is a graduate of the law, ritual, custom and usage, fully qualified for the responsible position, and his business experience and knowledge of accounts will render him an able and enthusiastic officer of the order. Mr. Warboys is also a comparatively young man, but his experience in the order is regarded as eminently fitting him for the position. The following committee on jubilee week was appointed: W. S. Dryden, M. J. Platshok, J. M. Coffman and Robert Nixon. The contract for printing the journal was awarded to the Joseph Winterburn Company. In the evening Fred J. Moll Sr. of Los Angeles was elected trustee for five years. The entire session was consumed in calling the rolls and notes upon the compensation of officers, and the election of a grand secretary was fixed at $2700; that of the grand secretary's assistant at $1200.

SCHOOL EXAMINATIONS.

Preparations to Be Made to Celebrate Parents' Day.

Superintendent Swett of the public schools has sent a communication to the various schools giving some important information as to what should be done in regard to examination days and percentages required for promotion. The circular says: Pupils of the eighth grade will be graduated from the grammar schools, as usual, on the judgment of the principal and the class teacher. Only pupils that are recommended by the principal and the class teacher as fitted to enter the high school will be admitted to those schools without examination. Graduates of the grammar schools not recommended to go to high school will be required to pass an examination at the school of their desire to enter on Monday, May 21, and Tuesday, May 22, examinations to begin at 9 A. M. Only graduates of grammar schools will be admitted to this examination. The subjects for examination will be arithmetic, grammar, spelling, word analysis, reading and history of the United States. Examinees must take their Third Readers to the examination. Pupils that fall below 50 per cent will be rejected; those that obtain from 50 per cent to 65 per cent will be admitted on trial; and those that obtain 65 per cent or over will be admitted without examination. Principals will instruct graduates "not recommended" to go for examination to whichever of the following schools they desire to enter: Boys' High School, Girls' High School and the Commercial High School. Examinations will be held on Monday morning, May 21, at 9 o'clock. Principals of primary schools that have pupils to be promoted to grammar grade will be instructed to make out a list of pupils to be examined, and to have the list of pupils to be examined made up and delivered to pupils on Thursday, May 24, and the pupils must be sent to their respective schools in a body on Friday, May 25. By authorization of the committee on classification, Friday is designated as Parents' visiting day" in all the public schools. You are requested to give notice to pupils and ask them to invite their parents. This will not be a school exhibition day, but is designed to afford parents an opportunity to visit class rooms and see the children at work. Class exercises will be given every day. Short oral lessons in arithmetic, reading lessons and drill spelling matches should be included in the program. The list of pupils to be examined should be made up and delivered to pupils on Thursday, May 24, and the pupils must be sent to their respective schools in a body on Friday, May 25. The celebration of Parents' day is one of the most interesting days of the year in the public schools.

NEW PUMPING PLANT.

Successful Test of the Spring Valley Company's Machinery.

The Spring Valley Water Company had a very successful trial of its new pumping plant at Black Point yesterday afternoon. The plant was designed and planned by Hermann Schlusser, the company's chief engineer. The builders were the Fulton Engineering and Ship-building Company. The pumps are designed to deliver 3,000,000 gallons of water to a height of 400 feet. The directors of the Spring Valley Water Works were all present, with several invited guests. Steam was turned on by Charles Mayne, who has been connected with the company for many years and vice-president for over thirty years. After the pumps were started a luncheon was served. Toasts were proposed to Mr. Schlusser, Mr. Howard, the directors and Mr. Spier's of the Fulton Engineering and Ship-building Company.

A Missing Syrian.

Chief Crowley received a letter yesterday from Thomas R. Gibson, United States Consul at Beirut, Syria, asking for information about Jacob Wortking, whose brother is a wealthy physician in Beirut. The brother had not been heard from him since 1854, and at that time he was in San Francisco and wrote that he might go to Benicia. His brother is anxious to know whether he is dead or alive.

Richmond Sewer Outlet.

The contractors having the contract in hand to build the long-needed outlet to the Richmond sewer began work yesterday after obtaining the line and grade of the outlet from Surveyor Fitzhugh, who has been especially energetic in pushing the job. Contractor W. L. Prater thinks the work can be completed in ninety days.
