MAIL TRAINS AND PULLMAN CARS. Some thousands of men usually employed on the Southern Pacific Railroad system have in a lawful way stopped work. There are no reports of a resort to force on the part of the men who have voluntarily taken a vacation to keep other men from taking their places.

a falling out between Pullman and his men, the Pullman car service on the Southern Pacific system would be suspended for a time, and that passengers would have to content themselves with ordinary cars. Or he might have bought out Pullman's one-fourth interest in the so-called Pullman cars and deprived the strikers of any excuse for boycotting them. He, and his associates, say that this would have been surrendering a principle. But men of business are all the time surrendering principles for the sake of peace and harmony. Mr. Huntington never signed a pooling contract with his competitors in business that did not involve some surrender of principle. There is hardly a law passed by Congress or the State Legislature which is not carried by the votes of men who sacrifice their views on some minor point for the sake of the main object. Human society holds together by constant surrenders of non-essentials.

PARALLEL CASES. The Southern Pacific Company reiterates through Mr. H. E. Huntington that the maintenance of the right to run Pullman cars is based on a principle. In Mr. Huntington's first letter he presented several so-called parallel cases showing how the company yielded on the Pullman car issue it would be compelled to yield in other and more important matters. But the cases which Mr. Huntington called parallel were only similar. A correspondent of the Bulletin has pointed out the difference between the Pullman car case and a Baldwin locomotive case. The Pullman car is a source of revenue only when it is running, while the locomotive becomes the abstract property of the company purchasing it, and is not, therefore, a source of revenue to the builders. As the object of the strikers was to cut off the revenue derived from the Pullman cars by the Pullman Car Company, this one difference is fatal to Mr. Huntington's series of parallel cases. It was not the car itself the Railway union wanted, but the car as a source of revenue to the Pullman Company. And yet it is with such hair-trigger arguments as this that the local manager defended the railroad policy which has temporarily paralyzed the industries of this State. Whatever may be the outcome of the present contest, the Southern Pacific Company has demonstrated its willingness to perform the service of common carrier, except, possibly, in its competition with a competing system under public control.

FIGHTING OVER MARRIAGES. It is curious what things people will fight about. European dispatches announce that the clergy of the Catholic Church in Hungary have been averted by the passage after a struggle which has lasted twenty-five years of the civil marriage bill. To understand the importance attached to the measure it must be remembered that Hungary is peopled by 9,000,000 Catholics, 3,000,000 Protestants and about 3,000,000 Jews, Serbs, Rumanians and other Slavs. Eight hundred thousand are in force which abound in strange and contradictory provisions. Catholics and members of the Greek church consider engagements as binding as marriages; among Protestants engagements carry no legal weight. In the Greek church candidates for matrimony must show written authority from their parents. No such requirement is exacted by Catholic priests. A son of one church married according to the rites of another is not married at all. In a suit for divorce, if the defendant changes his or her faith, the suit is thrown out on demurrer. When a Jew becomes a Catholic, his first marriage is annulled, and he may marry again. But if his first wife turns Catholic, his second marriage becomes null, and the second wife is no wife at all. Each of the eight matrimonial codes gives to some one church exclusive control of marriage among the members of its faith, and in actions arising out of marriage or divorce the courts are bound to decide according to the canons of that church.

THE SPIRIT OF THE PRESS. It is indelicate to say that the Democrats in the Senate made a great mistake in deciding to put a duty on eggs? We understand that every hen in the Dominion is working on double time already. Now, there are reasons which we need not repeat, but which will occur to every thoughtful reader, why Senator who voted for the refund tariff bill should be eager not to have an overproduction of eggs and large accumulated stocks of them in the country next fall.—New York Sun.

KEEP COOL. The American Railway Union gained the sympathy of the people by the moderation of its methods. The order everywhere was abstain from violence. The members had a right to stop work and to persuade others to stop. They might also use their powers of persuasion on non-union men who were offered their places. But the justice of their cause does not warrant a resort to violence. The laws of the land must be respected. A collision with the authorities can have but one result. The men who stood by the union in their peaceful contest would turn against it if other than peaceful methods should be adopted. There is a point in contentions of this nature at which the merits of a cause are lost sight of.

PROGRESS IN PHILADELPHIA. The Philadelphia newspapers are much stirred up over a proposition to expend from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000 in the construction of a boulevard leading to the park. The Inquirer and the Press are for the boulevard, the Record and Ledger are against it. The boulevard proposition grew out of the discovery that the city could incur a debt equal to the amount of money in the sinking fund. For some years the city had gone along quietly putting money in the sinking fund in blissful ignorance of the fact that each dollar so invested helped to create a margin between what the city owed and what it might owe constitutionally. When a court decided that a new debt might be created to the amount of payments made on account of the old one, ardent friends of progress sprang to the front with various propositions of which the boulevard was one. The project is opposed on the ground that the money could be used for more useful purposes. It is advocated on the ground that it would attract visitors. A good many residents of that city seem to think that people go to New York because the latter city presents the greatest attractions. They do not seem to realize that the tide of travel sets into New York because merchants from all parts of the Union are compelled to visit that city to lay in stocks of goods. Without charging a system of undervaluation, it is admitted that goods can be imported at New York for less cost than at any other city in the Union.

RAILROAD MANAGEMENT. The Fresno Republican says: If Fresno had half a dozen lines of railroad the probabilities are that they would all be tied up, and that the business men and farmers would be subject to the same inconvenience and loss that they are now.

He was captured at the head of his regiment, the Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, on that day, captured a Confederate battery and killed in sword combat its commander, Captain Freeman of Huntville, Ala.
