The Mormons of Utah are taking a course that is liable to bring down upon them the wrath of Uncle Sam in a way that will teach them a good lesson. On Saturday morning, July 4, when the Gentiles cast their eyes about they found the American flag at half-mast on all the public buildings under Mormon control. An effort was made by the U. S. marshal and others to have the flag run up to its proper position, but the owners of the buildings refused to listen to the request and the police, all of whom are "saints" proved apathetic and inclined to interfere. The insult was evidently the result of a preconcerted arrangement, as such a thing as a dozen or more flags at half mast could scarcely have occurred through accident. The country is getting about tired of this nonsense. In 1861 there was an attempt made to haul down the American flag and it took five years of war to fix it back in its position, but it is at the mast head now, and is there to stay. There are probably some of the men who tried to keep it down during the civil war who would enjoy whipping the Mormons into a sense of their situation and the duties they owe the American government. In fact two of the parties who went to the city hall to find out the reason for the flag being half-masted are ex-confederates. When the demand was made that the flag be raised on the city hall it was met by a flat refusal, and on the party attempting to raise it about a dozen policemen made a rush for them and there came near being a riot on the spot. The police officers said that any man who attempted to raise the flag would be shot. Finally some of the flags were run up, but the rest remained down. Such an outrage should not be permitted to occur again, but the polygamists must be taught that it will not be submitted to and that an attempted repetition of it will cause a tempest which will wipe the Mormon hierarchy out of existence as a political factor within the limits of the United States. These fellows have not the slightest particle of patriotism in their composition, but may be taught some before they are many years older.—Kansas City Evening Star.

"Most men are monkeys," some one has said, and this example of the imitative propensities of the race gives great prominence to the asserted resemblance:

WILSON, N. C., July 4.—Willie Sams, a 6 year old son of a farmer living near here, murdered his infant brother, of whom he had been given charge, yesterday. Some time ago he was taken to a child's funeral and manifested great interest in its burial which he did not seem to understand. He has frequently prattled about it and asked many questions as to how the child was got into the coffin and when it would come out. Yesterday, the child took his little brother to the grave which was near his father's home, and after scooping out a grave in the sand by the side of a small brook placed the infant in a box which he had previously placed there, screwed on the top and buried it, going through the form of delivering a prayer and singing a hymn. After he had filled the tiny grave he stamped on it and slowly went back home and told his mother of his deed, of which he seemed very proud. He said it was just like Mrs. Arthur's little baby's funeral. The terrified mother hastened to the spot and the grave was reopened and the infant found dead, with its right arm broken and its skull crushed.

An Ohio man drank twelve barrels of cider last winter. His name got into the newspapers, and everybody said, "Just see the luck of these Ohio fellers." He is now dead. It is not known whether he died from the effects of the twelve barrels of cider or because he was an Ohio man. But he passed away during the beautiful days of June and mercifully escaped the Fourth of July and the heat of summer. Luck seems to cling to an Ohio man even in death.—Topics.

A SMALL boy with a shining pail went daily singing down the dale, to where the cow with a brindle tail on sweet clover did regale. A bumble-bee did daily sail over the soft and shadowy vale, to where the boy with a shining pail, was milking the cow with the brindle tail. The bee lit on the cow's left ear, her heels flew through the atmosphere—and through the leaves of the walnut tree the boy soared into eternity.

In the celebrated race which occurred at Cleveland, July 4th, between Phyllis and Maxey Cobb for $5,000, Phyllis won in three straight heats, best time being 2:14. Maxey Cobb was formerly owned by Lincoln parties.
