Undue Intimacy.

Things are getting pretty bad when a bartender calls you by your first name.—Atchison Globe

In Kansas.

A Bar association has been organized in Hiawatha. Heretofore a prescription case has answered all purposes.—Robinson Index.

Don't Worry.

Don't worry over the revenue law. You will not be compelled to pay taxes on anything you do not possess.—Humboldt Leader.

Paramount Issue.

The gold standard democrats want the tariff question for an issue and the republicans are all of them willing they should make it the real thing.—Blue Springs Sentinel.

Hard Luck.

The Russian officers are complaining that they have so many men that it is simply impossible to conduct an orderly retreat.—Washington Post.

Too Early.

As soon as a republican is dead the democrats claim the corpse. If there is any difference between dying and joining the democratic party, it is in favor of the former.—York Times.

A Pert Paragraph.

Colonel Watterson says he would vote for Cleveland in preference to Roosevelt because "Cleveland is older and might die sooner." We must confess that this is one of the pertest paragraphs that has come to our notice in many a long day.—Kansas City Journal.

Confusion.

The government at Washington has ordered a big squadron of our battleships to notify the sublime porte that he must whack up for the American outrages at once or take a few iron pills, with fuses attached. If he still refuses fuses may touch the spot.—Fremont Tribune.

We kill all our own meats, therefore we can supply you with the best the market affords.—Coupe & Thornton,

FACTS AND FANCIES.

BY ALLAN D. MAY.

When troubles o'erwhelm you and sorrows befall,
And the skies are so black overhead;

When your fears are so great and your hopes are so small
It would seem a relief to be dead;

Don't curse in your anger the day you were born,
Or go jump in the deep Nemaha—

There's relief for the weary, the sad and forlorn
In cussing the revenue law.

When your cows have all died with the colic and croup
And bugs eateth the cucumber vine;

When your chickens have turned up their toes in the coop
And the cholera destroyeth your swine,

Don't say that this world is a snare and a fake
And the dingdest old earth you ere saw—

There's relief for the heart that is ready to break
In cussing the revenue law.

No matter what happens to fill you with woe,
Though your house by the lightning be struck,

Hard luck comes to all in this valley below
And it's foolish to swear at your luck.

When you feel you must swear or you surely will bust
Take the biggest deep breath you can draw—

Don't waste any words on a poor little trust—
But cuss the new revenue law.

A little lightning sometimes makes a big thunder.

An ounce of immunity is worth a pound of prevention.

If riches have wings, why is it that they always use them in flying away from you and never toward you?

In a neighboring town, a young man who had been sued for breach of promise three times, died recently and in the obituary the local paper referred to him as a very promising young man.

The other day we saw a picture of the gavel used by the presiding officer at the formal opening of the St. Louis exposition. The design, as near as we can describe it, is an Anheuser Busch eagle rampant on a beer keg dormant on the end of a bung-starter.

Did you ever have a social engagement for the evening and go home late to supper and get dressed in a hurry only to discover that you had forgotten to get shaved? And then as you scraped the whiskers off with the carving knife or a can-opener, have you refrained from all harsh and unseemly language?

A woman had gone bragging through the neighborhood that she had gotten one more jar of strawberries out of a case of fruit than any of the other women. The matter came up for discussion at the sewing circle the next week and it developed that she had one jar left from last season and she had counted that one.

Here is a story that we don't believe: It is said that a man went forth to fish. Presently he came to a lake and from the waters thereof, great fish leapt up as though defying him to catch them. The man had forgotten his bait and although he searched diligently he could find neither worm nor frog, nor crawfish or other bait with which to tempt those big fishes. But the man was a true sport. He took out his trusty jack knife and whittled off his little finger and with it baited his hook. He caught one of those big fish, but it wiggled off just as he was about to land it. But the man was a true sport. He came up town and told that he had caught ten big fish and sold them to some campers.

Triumphs of Modern Surgery.

Wonderful things are done for the human body by surgery. Organs are taken out and scraped and polished and put back, or they may be removed entirely; bones are spliced, pipes take the place of diseased sections of veins antiseptic dressings are applied to wounds, bruises, burns and like injuries before inflammation sets in, which causes them to heal without maturation and in one-third the time required by the old treatment. Chamberlains Pain Balm acts on the same principle. It is an antiseptic and when applied to such injuries, causes them to heal very quickly. It also allays the pain and soreness. Keep a bottle of Pain Balm in your home and it will save you time and money, not to mention the inconvenience and suffering which such injuries entail. For sale by A. G. Wanner.
