THE DEVIL WILL NOT COME WEST

That Wilson as President has become a huge and monumental joke is evident. That the foreign policy of our government in Mexico has long been the subject of ridicule and burlesque in the seats of all foreign governments, is well known.

Now that same spineless policy has been let loose on the labor question.

Watchful waiting—though uncertain for a time what the word watchful meant, it is now known that the watch was simply to find out when the favorable moment had come to run.

Watch, wait, wabble and withdraw.

Fifty years from now would it not be a circus to attend an old soldiers reunion, and hear the reminiscences of the veterans of the late war in Mexico? Their remembrances of heroic exploits would partake something of the character of those of one veteran of the Civil War. He was called upon to give his experience in the killing of the enemy, and while many of his comrades were able to give an account of some engagement in which they had killed from one to a dozen of the enemy, this particular veteran failed to find, stored up in the treasury of his memory an occasion, where he was absolutely sure that he had killed even one. But at the first Bull Run he said, there was a rebel after him and he never found out whether his pursuer had died from exhaustion or not.

We must now give up the mottoes that we were taught to honor in our school-boy days. Instead of using the phrase that "a live coward is better than two dead heroes" in derision, we must now observe it as a rule of action. To contend to the contrary, in my opinion a live coward is of no use either as a decoration or for example. A whole army of them would lose the fight.

A hero that has died in a good cause achieves the honor of not having lived in vain, and his example will live and flourish in the memory of mankind.

This halting vacillating policy in Mexico, has even changed the meaning of words. We have been taught by Webster's dictionary that war was where soldiers of one country were shot at by the enemy. Our soldiers have been slaughtered in Mexico in greater numbers than in the Spanish war. Still in this new dictionary to be made by the distinguished lexicographer, Wilson, such a condition has been wrongly named war, and it is really peace. A bloody peace!

Webster is a back number.

It has been lately found out that seeing the campaign going against them in New York a representative of Tammany Hall sought to engage his royal majesty, the Devil to come to the support of the Democratic ticket in the country, thinking that his work had already been sufficient in New York City. It was thought safer to put some questions to find out whether the Devil could support the whole Wilson programme.

Question One: How do you stand on the Adamson law, giving ten hours pay for eight hours work?

Devil: Since this law is only for a very few of the many thousand workmen I am for it. I knew the father of this man Adamson personally. It was he who disobeyed God and ate the forbidden fruit. He then made me his friend by laying the blame upon Eve. Many a woman has been brought into my service by reason of this. The author of this law, son of A—(Adam) that he is, is worthy of his father.

ZIEGLER BROS.

The law may not be constitutional but it will get the votes. What they do with it after election can't hurt us.

Question two: How do you stand on Woman Suffrage?

Devil: In states where they have it, I am for it, but in states where they have it not, I am against it—leaving it to the states to decide doing what I can against it.

Question three: How do you stand on the Phillipine Islands' government?

Devil: I am in favor of letting them govern themselves. When the control of the United States is withdrawn it will not be long before they will come to me.

Question four: How do you stand on the subject of preparedness?

Devil: I believe in favoring it in speeches and on paper, but not by law.

Tamany representative: Mr. Devil I consider your answers so far to be in accordance with good democracy and now before asking you the last question I want to know how much you would expect me to pay for your aid during the short time remaining before election?

Devil: Although the winter is coming on the expense of keeping warm in my country is no greater in winter than in summer. It is hot enough there all the time. There is no occasion for overcoats. All I want is for your party to favor me in the future as it has in the past.

Question five: What are the policies of Woodrow Wilson?

Devil: Looking bewildered and dumfounded he curled his tail between his hind legs and ran as fast as his legs could carry him towards his own country.
