He will be missed by his neighbors and friends, by his children, by the Methodist Church of which he was a member for more than fifty years, but no one can appreciate the loss to the wife who survives him, the partner of his sorrows and joys for the last fifty seven years. In her great affliction we tender our affectionate sympathy. He was the father of Dr. Jno. E. Mapp, Mr. Wm. E. Mapp, Mrs. B. W. Mears, Mrs. A. J. Mears and James B. Mapp, all of whom, but the last named, survive him.

NEIGHBORHOOD NOTES.

Chinoteague.

Our physicians state, it is distressingly healthy with us, at present.

Oysters are being shipped to market from this place and the returns have been satisfactory.

Two oyster shucking houses opened here last week, which are giving employment to quite a number of our citizens.

The largest amount, to wit: $405.48, ever paid at our office in one day for tickets, was paid by the crew of Despatch, on their way to Philadelphia.

The artist located here received $50 from the crew of the Despatch for photographs taken of them, and an equal amount from the citizens for work in same line.

Some twenty-five or more of the circus troupe, lately at Snow Hill, paid us a flying visit, and the large proportions of our town was to them a matter of great surprise.

Mr. G. H. Ross, of Modestown, has rented a dwelling here, which he, together with his family will occupy next week. He is a clever gentleman and will receive a cordial welcome.

Arrivals at Atlantic Hotel this week: J. H. Miller, New York; L. S. Askew, M. E. Selby, Wilmington; G. Shepard, Stockton; R. J. Dryden, Pocomoke City; W. J. Norman, Lewes, Del.; E. B. Davidson, Milford; W. S. Cowles, Commander U. S. Despatch, Lieut. B. T. Snelligan, S. L. Heap and servants, U. S. Despatch; Sam'l Crockett, G. H. Ross, W. K. Collins, Accomac.

W. S. Cowles, late commander of U. S. steamer Despatch, S. L. Heaps, paymaster, and Lieut. B. T. Mulligan, on their way home, made the Atlantic hotel their headquarters, and spoke of it in the most flattering terms. They said they did not think there was such a well kept hotel on Eastern Shore. They left Monday for Washington, in obedience to an order of Secretary Tracey.

Koskey, better known as the John-town Jew, is again in the county with headquarters at Temperanceville. He has with him a larger assortment than ever before of overcoats, pants, vests, suits, ladies' cloaks, etc., at prices ranging from $2.50 to 75 cents—and says, if these prices do not suit the lean pocket books due to the present hard times, he will allow purchasers to set their own prices.

Capt. R. E. Swift had a narrow escape from drowning on last Saturday. He and his wife started on that day in a skiff with a monitor in tow having on board a horse, wagon, etc., for Wisbert's point, and while abreast of our inlet, the monitor capsized, throwing him, horse, wagon, etc., underneath her. Happily for him some boatmen near at hand went to his rescue and arrived just in time to pull him out of water. His horse and wagon also were saved—harness and many other articles were lost.

Assassination.

Our people are sick at prices of potatoes.

The Queen Hive Mill Co. is over-run with orders for lumber.

Miss Lula Coleburn has charge of our public school. She is a popular young lady and a splendid teacher.

Miss Carrie C. Massey, one of Horn-town's most accomplished young ladies, and our popular merchant, Little-ton Corbin, were married at the M. E. Church, South, Horn-town, on Wednesday evening, 7 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Wallace officiating. The bridesmaids were Miss Lou Trader, Miss Laura Corbin and Miss Ina Selby. Hiram Brittingham acting as best man. After the ceremony the couple and a large number of friends repaired to the residence of the bride's mother where an elegant supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Corbin will take up their residence at their beautiful house at this place, with the best wishes of everyone.

Mr. George W. Noek, one of the best and kindest men in all this section, died suddenly at his home, Saturday, about 1 o'clock, of heart failure, aged 59 years. Uncle George, as he was familiarly known, will be very much missed not only by his grief stricken widow and his loving children, but by the citizens generally. He was always ready to assist the needy, and a more generous man never lived in our midst. One and all sympathize with the sorrowing family. Funeral services, conducted by Rev. Mr. Hayes, were held over him on Monday, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends. He was the last of a family of five brothers. His brother Samuel, held in high esteem by everyone in this community, died last November.

Death of a Former Countyman.

Mr. Albert Mott, chief consul of the Maryland division of the L. A. W., received a telegram Tuesday announcing the death on Monday, in Chicago, of Mr. E. F. LeCato, formerly of this city. Mr. LeCato had been sick but a short time and his illness was not considered dangerous until last Sunday. His death was caused by inflammation of the bowels. Mr. LeCato was about twenty-seven years of age, and unmarried. Early in the year he left Baltimore to accept the position of manager of the bicycle department in the athletic goods firm of A. G. Spaulding & Bro., in Chicago. Mr. LeCato had lived in Baltimore nearly all his life. For several years he was captain of the Maryland Bicycle Club of this city, and was very well known to wheelmen all over the State. Mr. LeCato's remains will arrive in Baltimore tomorrow (Thursday) morning, and will be taken for burial to Northampton county, Va., where his father lives.—Baltimore Sun.

He was well known and highly esteemed on the Eastern Shore for his many excellent traits of character. He is especially remembered for his polite and engaging manners, while in the employ of the Eastern Shore Steamboat Co. His untimely death is universally regretted. He was the son of Mr. L. Thos. LeCato, a well known citizen of Northampton, formerly of this county—the author of an article in this issue, forwarded to us for publication prior to his death.

To the Veteran Cavalry. The following circular has been received by us with request for publication of same: As it is impossible to record the deeds done by the Army of Northern Virginia without omitting the name of Stuart with its most brilliant achievements, or to think of Lee and Jackson without involuntarily calling upon the shade of this gallant commander of the Cavalry Corps, it seems but fitting that the soldier who, in his twenties, blazed the way for Jackson around the armies of McClellan and Hooker, should be made the subject of an enduring monument in this the capital city of the Confederacy. In whose successful defence he fell at its very gates.

Therefore it has been determined by many of his followers, for whom this committee acts, to call a meeting of the survivors of the Veteran Cavalry of the Army of Northern Virginia, to be held in the city of Richmond, at the Armory Hall, corner of Seventh and Marshall streets, at 8 o'clock, on the evening of October 28th, 1891, for the purpose of organizing a Veteran Cavalry Association, with the above object in view.

All cavalrymen and other admirers of Stuart are earnestly requested to attend.

Oct. 3d, '91. COMMITTEE.

Wreck at Hog Island. George W. Doughty, Keeper of the Hog Island Lighthouse, on the coast of Virginia, reports to Ensign Geo. R. French, United States Navy, in charge of the Branch Hydrographic office at Baltimore, the existence of a dangerous wreck in that vicinity, but does not give its exact location. The report states that a three-masted schooner sank on the 14th instant, southeast by east of Hog Island light in eight fathoms of water. Her masts are about seventy feet out of the water. The wreck lies in the track of coasting vessels and makes a dangerous obstacle to navigation. The name of the vessel is not given nor does the keeper say if the crew was saved or not. The captain of the life saving station there urges that she be blown up. Ensign French promptly forwarded the report to the Chief Hydrographer of the Navy at Washington.

Milinery. Mrs. L. H. Richardson, Locust-mount, has arrived from the city with a complete stock of millinery goods and is ready to meet the demands of her customers.

Miss Mary E. Grant has just opened a full line of fashionable millinery goods at Leenont, which she will dispose of at reasonable rates. She respectfully invites her lady friends to call and examine her stock.

The new millinery establishment, recently built at Parksley, for the occupancy of Mrs. M. L. Lewis and Mrs. E. C. Pate, is open and well stocked with a new line of millinery goods of all description at lowest prices, and in variety sufficient to meet the tastes of everyone.

Mrs. D. S. White and Miss Marcella Parks, have opened out an unusually large line of pretty and attractive millinery goods at their place of business at Parksley, and respectfully invite old and new customers to call and inspect the same. They will be sold at close margin of profit.

To Confederate Veterans. I have arranged for special rates for all veterans to go to Parksley, on the 28th, next Wednesday. The charges will be 25 cents per mile traveled. I invite all old Confederates who are unable to pay their way, to get the money and go to the meeting—and I will have it refunded to them at the meeting. A special train will leave Cape Charles at 7 a. m., on the 28th, and stop at all stations—the train will be just four hours ahead of the regular train.

ORRUS A. BROWNE, Committee.

The Sweet Potato—Some Reasons for its Decline in Value.

Mr. Editor.—In view of many conflicting opinions, I have thought that a retrospective consideration of the raising and shipping of the sweet potato crop might help us in our dilemma; and that for purpose this article is submitted to the farmers of the Eastern Shore.

From 1854 to the beginning of the war, the writer was interested in buying and shipping the crop, but directly after the war, he became especially connected and interested both in buying and selling, and continued to until recently, when he has been carting shats in the fall and all through the winter, putting out sprouts in the spring, hoeing grass through the hot days in June and getting poorly paid for his work.

At that time, 1854, and until 1873, sweet potatoes were sold in bulk; that is, carted in carts and wagons to the wharves, and measured or weighed out to the buyers. They were shipped in vessels in the same condition. They were sold in New York in competition with Jerseys, Delawares, and brought more money than any variety on the market.

They were known then as "Nansmonds," and later as "Deal's Islands"—a name applied to them by Capt. W. H. Parker who at that time was receiving cargoes from that section; and still later as "Eastern Shores." They had then, as now, the highest reputation for eating qualities.

In 1873, if my memory is correct, a New York vessel landed at Finney's wharf, now Wachapreague City, a load of empty barrels. The idea, originated with Mr. —, as an improvement on the old plan, and to give individual farmers the privilege of carting their potatoes, if they wished, instead of selling as before. But it proved to be a turning of the tide. In that business, that has been running ever since. And why? Because it did away with compulsory inspection. Under the previous system, farmers were compelled to call their potatoes or be subject to having them prided themselves on never having had a load of potatoes culled, and it was somewhat a reproach to undergo that ordeal.

Do the majority of our farmers today hold to the principle of shipping potatoes that need no culing?

Under the new system, many farmers prided themselves on their individual mark and do to this day. But it is true that hundreds of barrels of potatoes are shipped from the Eastern Shore under fictitious names, and many farmers boast of getting as much for culls as their neighbor who ships number one stock.

The man who shipped the culls for primes put the consumer's money in his pocket and accomplished himself on his sharpness; but his deception was part of a whole that stands today between his success, and that of his neighbor, in a crop upon which he relies, to a great extent, for his future livelihood.

Meanwhile the Jersey farmer, shipping his potatoes in open packages mostly, was compelled to call them, so while Virginia sweets were every year losing favor with the consumers, Jerseys were justly gaining in popularity.

With these facts before us it is plain to see that "Observer" was correct in his reasoning.

There is another factor that grew out of this new order of things.

Under the old management, that is prior to 1873, there were but six commission merchants who sold Eastern Shore produce. But on the arrival of this cargo of sweets in barrels those who had heretofore been buyers, learning from the marks on the barrels that they were shipped by individual shippers, flooded the county with their cards and stencils, and today there are likely fifty firms in New York contending for this trade. And this applies as well, in proportion, to other cities to which this business extends.

These merchants have devised all imaginable plans for precedence in this trade. The have catered to the demands, often unreasonable, made by the farmers, have reduced their rate of commission until it has become a mere nominal consideration, revolutionizing the whole business from a legitimate commission business to a buying and selling operation.

This is a rough synopsis of the Eastern Shore sweet potato trade from the year 1867, and if the farmers can learn from it to whom belong the errors and wrongs, if any have been made, or if in any way aids them in adopting some systematic plan tending to their general good, the writer will be well paid.

In conclusion, let me make one proposition which in my opinion will meet the wants of both raiser and seller, and accomplish the end in view, viz: bind ourselves to ship our goods to no firm who charges less than ten per cent. commission, and hold the consignees strictly responsible for the faithful and honest discharge of their duties as commission merchants, to the full extent of the law. And let inspectors be appointed at all the depots and wharves to classify and mark all produce that may be shipped.

L. T. LECATO, Concord, Oct. 19, 1891.

The Game Law. Partridges may be killed between the 15th day of October and the 15th day of January only. It is unlawful to kill the buzzard, or to capture for sale or transportation or to kill the mocking bird, or kill or capture the brown thrush, cardinal or red bird, wood robin, blue bird, game martin, or starling, or destroy their nests.

Query: It is unlawful to kill or capture the "wood robin." Is the "wood robin" our ordinary "robin red breast"? This is a question. By some the "rusty mocket" is called the "wood robin," by others the "robin red breast" is the "wood robin." Which is it? The small boy is interested in the answer. Will the Commonwealth's attorney reply?

Arrested While on His Honeymoon. Walter A. Ames was arrested Tuesday in Accomac county, Va., where he was spending his honeymoon. Ames enlisted in the United States army eighteen months ago. For some time he was stationed at Fort McHenry. On October 6th, he left the fort and the next day was married to Miss Katherine Payne, of Virginia, who was staying at the time of her marriage on Chesnut street. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. E. L. S. Tressel, and Mr. and Mrs. Ames left the same day to visit the parents of the bride. Ames was charged with desertion from the army. Detective Mitchell learned of his whereabouts, went down into Virginia and brought him back to Baltimore and took him to Fort McHenry.—Baltimore Sun.
