VULTURES OF MEXICO

HOW THESE BIRDS HAUNT THE ARID ALKALI PLAINS.

The Whiting Black Cone of Eager Desert Scoundrels and the Way in Which the Cresting Mass Descends Upon Its Carrion Prey.

At night the moon looks down upon a desolate, arid plain, stretching away to the great Sierra Madre mountain chain, deep, shadowy blue, against the western sky. The air is chill, and a bleak wind searches out every fold in our blankets—we might almost be spending a night on the tundra.

With scarce a moment of dawn the sun floods everything, a most welcome warmth for awhile, soon to make one gasp in its breathless heat. Long before the rainy season actually begins vegetation seems to feel a quickening in the air; the plants send the coming moisture weeks beforehand; the rushing streams, swollen with the melting snows from the lower mountain tops, bring life to the lands through which they flow; spring is awakening everywhere—except on the alkali plain.

Where a thin rind of red brown grass roots partly covers the white dust, parched mesquite bushes find root, and strange, mouthy oronchi cacti rear their column, like mammoth candelabra. Here wild eyed cattle roam unheeded, nibbling occasionally at the bitter grass stems.

Further out in the desert, where even the mesquite and cacti fall, we ride slowly across the parched surface, wondering if a single living thing can endure the bitterness of the earth. In the distance move the whirlwinds of dust, tall, thin columns with perfectly distinct outlines.

Most remarkable it seems to us when a strong dark blue heron now and then flies silently up from the desert which can possibly attract these birds to such a place of death as this, distant even from the bitter pools? and taps slowly out of sight. Twice a great ebony raven sails through the dusty air over our heads—the same bird reappearing. No other life is visible save the balanced black specks high against the blue, as invariably a part of a Mexican Dalmatian, he carried off by falcons which he saw in one of the villages, and he refused to give it up. He was attacked so furiously by the justly incensed villagers that it was with the utmost difficulty that he managed to make his escape.

King John used to send both to Ireland and to Norway for his hawks. We are told by Froissart that when Edward III. invaded France he had thirty falcons and every day either hunted or went to the river for the purpose of hawking. Henry VII. imported good single bird—a much greater sum in those days than at present. Henry VIII. while hawking at Hitchin, and the king was immersed head first into the mud and would have perished had not his falconer dragged him out.

Elizabeth and James I. were much interested in the sport. The latter sovereign indeed expended considerable sums on its maintenance. Aubrey in his "Miscellaneous" says, "When I was a freshman at Oxford I was wont to go to Christ church to see Charles I. at supper, where I once heard him say that as he was hawking in Scotland he rode into the quarry and there found the covey of partridges falling upon the hawk, and I remember his expression further, 'And I will swear upon the book 'tis true.'"

A Waterfowl. Some interesting particulars are given as to the ground covered by a waterfowl in dancing attendance upon the guests in a restaurant in Christiania. The waiter had provided himself with a pedometer before starting his work. According to his calculations, he took rather under 100,000 steps, covering some thirty-seven miles, between 8 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. Working and walking four days a week, he calculated that he covered more than 7,000 miles in a year, which would seem to show that Swedish waiters take their work very seriously, unless, indeed, the pedometer was "fast."—Westminster Gazette.

Crystallized Grasses. Grasses may be crystallized as follows: Place a saucupan partly filled with water on the stove and in it dissolve enough alum to make it of sufficient density to bear an egg. Let this boil. Take off the saucupan and lay your grasses (dried and tied in bunches to suit the fancy) in the water. When the water is perfectly cold lift out the bouquets and you will find them a mass of beautiful crystal.

A Disclaimer. Guest (in cheap restaurant)—I say, waiter, have you such a thing as a hot roll? Waiter—Stop yer kiddin'. On de level, pard, do I look like a guy wot has money ter burn? Ser, if I had a million dollars, youse kin betcher life I wouldn't be doin' stunts in dis beaverny. Ser?—St. Louis Republic.

Satisfied. First Boy—Did yah have plenty of nice things to eat at that party? Second Boy—Did we? We had loads of food, but when I was in the kitchen I wouldn't be doin' stunts in dis beaverny. Ser?—St. Louis Republic.

Time to Change. Edyth—Are you going to Niagara Falls on your wedding trip? Babette—No; I went there on my two previous wedding trips, and I believe it's a hoo doo!—Detroit Free Press.

A Good Impression. This ability to bring the best that is in you to the man you are trying to reach, to make a good impression at the very first meeting, to approach a prospective customer as though you had known him for years without offending his taste, without raising the least prejudice, and getting his sympathy and good will, is a great accomplishment, and this is what commands a great salary.—Success Magazine.

Not For Their Larder. "Suppose the butcher," said the teacher, "asks 25 cents a pound for mutton chops, what would three pounds come to?" "Well," replied Susie Wise, "they wouldn't come to our house. Mom would never pay that much for chops."—Philadelphia Press.

Things Different Here. Frenchwomen have the privilege of wearing pants by taking out a $10 license. The American woman wears them without taking out any license whatever.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

LACE BARK TREES.

The Many Uses to Which Their Attractive Light Fabrics Are Put.

There are in all about half a dozen lace bark trees in the world, so called because the inner bark yields a natural lace in ready made sheet form which can be made up in serviceable articles of apparel. Only four of these curious species of trees are of much practical value. Tourists who have stopped at Hawaii or Samoa may recall the lace bark clothing of the natives—clothing of a most beautiful color when new, of remarkable strength and of a fragrant odor, like freshly cured tobacco leaf. The native tapa cloth, as it is called, is made from the bark of the brunstonia papifera, but it is not usually included among the real lace bark trees. In its natural state the real lace bark is of a delicate cream white tint. It is probably a kind of fibrous pith. When the outer bark is removed it can be unfurled and unwound in one seamless piece, having a surface of a little more than a square yard. Washing and sun bleaching give it a dazzling white appearance. The fabric is airy light. It is used in the West Indies for mantilles, cravats, collars, cuffs, window curtains—in a word, for every purpose that ordinary lace is used. In making up shawls, veils and the like it is customary to piece two sheets of lace bark together. Delicate and apparently weak as it is in single mesh, a bit of lace bark, if rolled into a thin string, will all but resist human strength to break it.

Despite its practical use there is no essential demand for lace bark. It has been used by the natives for hundreds of years and yet is comparatively little known in this day. A few specimens of lace bark articles exist in different countries of Europe. These were made hundreds of years ago, yet, although their age is considerable, they are said to be in a good state of preservation.—Chicago News.

FALCONRY.

It Was a Favorite Sport of Many English Monarchs.

Richard I. when in the Holy Land amused himself with hawking on the plain of Sharon and is said to have presented some of the birds to the Sultan. Later on, while passing through Palestine, he carried off a falcon which he saw in one of the villages, and he refused to give it up. He was attacked so furiously by the justly incensed villagers that it was with the utmost difficulty that he managed to make his escape. King John used to send both to Ireland and to Norway for his hawks. We are told by Froissart that when Edward III. invaded France he had thirty falcons and every day either hunted or went to the river for the purpose of hawking. Henry VII. imported good single bird—a much greater sum in those days than at present. Henry VIII. while hawking at Hitchin, and the king was immersed head first into the mud and would have perished had not his falconer dragged him out. Elizabeth and James I. were much interested in the sport. The latter sovereign indeed expended considerable sums on its maintenance. Aubrey in his "Miscellaneous" says, "When I was a freshman at Oxford I was wont to go to Christ church to see Charles I. at supper, where I once heard him say that as he was hawking in Scotland he rode into the quarry and there found the covey of partridges falling upon the hawk, and I remember his expression further, 'And I will swear upon the book 'tis true.'"

Tract No. 1.—This is a tract known as the Bailey land, tenanted by W. T. Harris, and located on Onancock Creek, within 1/2 miles of Finneys Wharf and containing 48.30 acres, of which 19 acres are in good state of cultivation, the remainder being well set in pine timber. This is a valuable piece of "struck" land, and is conveniently located to schools, post office, stores and shipping points. Upon it is a dwelling, and suitable outbuildings.

Tract No. 2.—This is also a part of the Bailey land, where John T. Scott at present resides. It contains 48.90 acres of which 13 acres are in good state of cultivation, the balance being well set in good pine timber. This tract is located on the county road leading from Cashville to Onancock, is within one and a half miles of Finneys Wharf, is convenient to school, post office, churches and stores, and has upon it suitable and comfortable buildings with outhouses.

Tract No. 3.—This tract is a part of the Thos. W. Finney farm, and is tenanted by Mr. Otto White. It contains about 50.33 acres, of which about 50 acres are in high state of cultivation, 10 in pine thicket the remainder in swamp. This land is located on the main county road near Cashville. Upon it are all necessary buildings which are in fair condition. It is convenient to schools, churches and shipping points. This farm is especially desirable to any one seeking a home.

Tract No. 4.—A tract of land on Finneys Creek containing 26.30 acres, of which 20 acres are in cultivation, the balance being in timber, with abundance of resources. It has upon it a dwelling with necessary outbuildings, all in good condition. This farm would be a desirable home, and is convenient to schools, churches and shipping points. This farm is especially desirable to any one seeking a home.

Tract No. 5.—This is a piece of swamp land adjoining tract No. 3 containing about 20.70 acres, and is a part of the original Thos. W. Finney tract and has upon it some timber and plenty of manure.

Tract No. 6.—This is the tract known as the Oliver Farm and is now tenanted by Mr. Charles A. Rue. It contains about 129.50 acres of which about 75 acres are in cultivation, the balance being well set in pine timber. This farm is located immediately on Pungetoague Creek, within half a mile of Evans Wharf. Upon it is a large and well arranged dwelling in good condition, and suitable outbuildings. A large lawn well set in fine shade trees contributes to the beauty and comfort of this elegant place. This tract has upon it a tenant house and has land and resources enough for two good sized truck farms. It is convenient to schools, churches, stores, post office and shipping points. Its location and beauty would make it an ideal summer home, where bathing, boating, crabs and fish could be enjoyed in summer, and oysters and crabs in winter.
