Our Forest Reserves.
The forest reserves of this country are almost twice the area of Pennsylvania.

How to Open a Book.
Hold the book with its back on a smooth or covered table, let the front board down, then the other, holding the leaves in one hand while you open a few leaves at the back, then a few at the front, and so on, alternately opening back and front, gently pressing open the sections till you reach the center of the volume. Do this two or three times, and you will obtain the best results, says Modern Bookbinding. Open the volume violently or carelessly in any one place, and you will likely break the back and cause a start in the leaves. Never force the back of the book.

How to Make Indian Sandwiches.
Put a cupful of chopped ham in a chopping-bowl or mortar, with two tablespoonfuls of creamed butter, a dash of paprika, a tablespoonful of Indian chutney, a tablespoonful of vinegar from prepared horseradish and a tablespoonful of finely minced chervil. Pound to a paste and spread on buttered, thin slices of bread.

How to Renovate Chairs.
To renovate willow or rattan chairs that have become soiled with age and use wash off every bit of dust in all the interstices and with a soft, long haired brush tint the entire surface with oak green stain, sienna or sienna and vandyke brown. This must be done with great care so as to cover every particle of the surface. This treatment is suitable for willow because it will take stain, but rattan, which is less porous, requires to be painted or stained. Whether stain or paint is used, varnish heightens the luster.

CHESS BY WIRELESS.

Game Played on the High Seas Won by an American Team.

For the first time since the advent of wireless telegraphy rival chess teams on two rival steamships have managed to play a game to a finish, says the New York Herald. This contest was between a team chosen from the saloon passengers of the American liner Philadelphia and one from among the voyagers of the Cunarder Lucania. The result was told when the vessels reached New York the other day and told with great glee by the Philadelphians, whose side had won. There was a bit of international pride in the victory, too, for the team of the American liner were all Americans, while that of the Cunarder were all Britshers.

The Philadelphia was well off the banks when she got in touch by wireless with the Cunarder. That was Friday noon, Jan. 16. After an exchange of positions, which showed the Philadelphia to be about forty miles in the lead of her English rival, the Philadelphia signaled a challenge to play a match game of chess. "Accept!" replied the Lucania. "Will play immediately after lunch." The teams were elected, that of the Philadelphia consisting of F. C. Caldwell of Chicago, N. B. Whelen of Philadelphia and W. Weiss of New York. The Lucania unshaded six chess experts to her defense. These were E. Marshall Fox and E. Horace Mundy, both of London; F. W. Young, R. W. Milbank and William Evans of Liverpool, and Captain H. R. Campbell. The champions assembled in the smoking rooms, and quartermasters were detailed to carry messages to and from the operator's station. The Philadelphia took the white and made the first move. The game lasted about three hours. The players on the Philadelphia thought their opponents cultivated too soon the virtue of resignation, as it did not seem to them that the Lucania team's case was hopeless when they gave up the game.

It was to combat and expose quacks and fools that laughter was invented.—Thackeray.

Bowser and Hoyle

He Plays a Game of Euchre With His Wife and Is Unmercifully Walloped

(Copyright, 1902, by C. B. Lewis.)

MRS. BOWSER had had a hard day's work cleaning one of the bedrooms, and Mr. Bowser might have patted her on the arm and said a few words of praise when he came home to dinner. He did nothing of the kind, however. Some one had passed a lead nickel on him during the day, and while he didn't exactly ache for a row, it was apparent that he felt edgewise. There was irritation on the other side, but peace remained unbroken. Dinner had been over for an hour and Mr. Bowser had skimmed over his paper and finished his cigar when he suddenly asked:

"Why don't you learn to play euchre, so that we can go out for an evening occasionally?"

"Why, I know how to play," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"That is, you think you do."

"But I'm sure I do. I believe I'm a pretty fair player."

"Haugh! Suppose you get the cards out."

"All right."

There had been several games of euchre played in the Bowser family, and in each and every instance there had been a row, caused by Mr. Bowser's queer understanding of the rules of the game. On the last occasion Mrs. Bowser had said that she would never play cards with him again, and therefore he was considerably surprised at her present willingness. She got out the table and cards, and as he looked more closely at her he didn't feel easy in his mind.

"Is this game to be according to Hoyle?" he asked as the cards were ready.

"Just as you say," she replied.

"Well, we'll make it Hoyle, and neither of us will do any kicking. In the best of good nature I warn you that I shall win at least five games out of six. You are too sensible to get mad over it. As I'm the better player we'll start off by giving you the first deal."

"Thank you, but we are to go by Hoyle," she laughed. "We will cut for the deal."

"I see. Don't want any favors, eh? Well, the deal is yours. Perhaps you'll get one trick out of the first game. It's your lead."

"As I dealt, it's your lead."

"So, Mrs. Bowser, you've begun already," he exclaimed as he held his cards suspended. "It's a mighty queer thing that we can't have a game of cards without you getting mad over it."

"Stop right there!" said Mrs. Bowser as she laid down her cards. "It is your first lead, according to Hoyle or anybody else. If you don't know that, then you don't know how to play."

"I don't, eh? Well, let it go. I'll give you all the advantage. Clubs are trumps, and you play to that ace of diamonds."

"I take it with a trump."

"You do? You have a diamond and must follow suit. Don't attempt any trickery here, Mrs. Bowser."

BOWSER TOOK AFTER HIM AT FULL SPEED.

"I have no suit. Play to that trump."

"Are you leading trumps?" he shouted.

"As you see."

"But who ever heard of such a thing? That shows you know nothing of the game. Take it back and lead a small heart."

"I know what I am doing, Mr. Bowser. That calls for a trump from your hand."

"Well, take it, then," he growled, throwing down the only one in his hand. "If a man plays cards with a child, he must play as the child does. What are you counting two for?"

"Because I took all the tricks."

"Oh, you did? Well, you needn't chuckle over it and bob around like a hen with her head cut off. I simply gave them to you. Now I'll show you something."

Mr. Bowser dealt the cards and turned up a heart. He hadn't a trump in his hand and therefore passed for her to make it. She said spades, and he brought his fist down on the table and shouted:

"Spades, spades! But you can't do it!"

"Why not?"

"Because you must make it next."

"I can do as I like, Mr. Bowser, and
