

THE BUCKMAN BILL CHANCES ARE GOOD

Speaker Trammell Offered a Substitute Which Prevailed.

BOTH WILL COME UP TODAY

Debate on the Measure Very Animated. The Opposition Working to Block Buckman's Pet Scheme—Oratory Makes a Warm Session.

Special to The Daily Sun.

Tallahassee, May 25.—The Buckman educational bill came up on special order at 4:30 p. m., and the forces were arrayed against each other. The victory in the House had given the Buckman forces courage, although the opposition was not without hope.

The reading of the bill was the signal, and Speaker Trammell took the floor and offered a substitute, which brought out a most animated debate, but finally the substitute was ordered printed and the bill and substitute were made a special order for tomorrow afternoon.

The feeling is quite warm here, although the chances favor the passage of the original Buckman bill.

THE COMMITTEE RETURNS.

They See Little Chance of Defeat of Buckman Bill.

A majority of the committee who went to Tallahassee in the interest of securing if possible the defeat of the famous Buckman bill, returned Thursday a disappointed aggregation, since they reported to the effect that the bill would undoubtedly pass the Senate.

Among those who returned were B. F. Jordan, C. C. Pedrick, E. Baird, H. L. Phifer, W. W. Hampton, H. A. Ford and Syd L. Carter. They left in Tallahassee W. R. Thomas, Dr. J. L. Kelley and Walter G. Robinson.

STUDENTS RETURN HOME.

Touching Incidents Upon Separation of Friends of East Florida Seminary.

If our memory serves us rightly, we believe it was Shakespeare's Romeo who said to Juliet that parting was such sweet sorrow that he could say good-bye until the morrow. This remark was addressed to Romeo's sweetheart as he kissed her hand a parting farewell from a veranda, under the pale light of a silvery moon, on the eve of his starting for a long journey. It was indeed a beautiful and touching scene, a trying moment, but one which would not surpass a similar incident which transpired at the Atlantic Coast Line station Thursday as students of East Florida Seminary, young men and young women, were about to leave for their respective homes and their college mates and friends were there to bid them farewell, probably never to see many of them again, as several of the students were leaving the old school for the last time, having graduated at the term just closed.

It was a touching scene even for a hard-hearted reporter, and Ticket Agent Goodwin had to occasionally wipe away a tear with the elbow of his coat sleeve. He wouldn't admit that he was affected, however, but declared he had gotten some insect powder in his eyes.

This scene was one intermingled with pleasure and sadness—pleasure that the school had closed one of the most successful terms of its history, had turned out upon the world a number of graduates who would prove a credit to themselves and the institution, and sadness because the time had come to say good-bye. There were few dry eyes among those young people, and many handkerchiefs were moistened with tears which, for sincerity, were as pure and clear as the morning dewdrop nestling securely in the lily.

As the train pulled slowly away from the station many could not stand the situation, but turned their backs and walked away in silence.

A Busy Place.

Those who have not visited the plant of the Gainesville Bottling Works, 806 West Main street S., have no conception of the business conducted by this enterprising firm, which is now manufacturing almost everything in soft drinks imaginable. The firm is employing several men, and is enjoying a fine trade not only in Gainesville, but in the surrounding towns.

Davis & Brooks, the proprietors, are practical bottlers, which accounts in a large measure for their success. Another feature of the products of the firm is the fact that they use nothing but the purest fruit syrups, upon which they have established a reputation.

GROWING UP

There's something the matter with the child that fails to grow up. A child that grows up too much, however, without proper filling out of flesh, is almost as badly off. Nothing will help these pale, thin "weedy" children like Scott's Emulsion. It supplies the rounding out of flesh and the rich inward nourishment of blood and vital organs which insures rapid growth a healthy and uniform development.

GANEY A BAD COON.

Man Who Made His Escape From Baker's Camp Not a Trusty.

In its issue of Saturday last The Sun contained mention of the fact that Thomas Ganey, a negro convicted for murder in this county and sentenced to prison for life, had escaped from the camp of P. H. Baker, naval stores operator at Campville.

It is true that Ganey did escape, and notwithstanding the efforts of the authorities to apprehend him, the man is still at large. He was not a "trusty," however, as he had the reputation of being one of the stubbornest convicts in the camp.

Definite particulars of the escape of this prisoner have been furnished by Mr. Baker himself. Mr. Baker states that the convict, with a number of other prisoners, was working in the woods under guard. In moving across a small but thick growth Ganey made the dash for liberty. His position was such that the guard could not fire at that time, which would endanger other lives, but as soon as a position could be secured he discharged his rifle three times at the fleeing negro, without effect.

Captain of Guards Wilson was notified as soon as possible and put the dogs on the trail, but Ganey, who is fleet-footed, had gained considerable headway. The dogs tracked the man to North Gainesville, however, where they lost the trail. It was then that Captain Wilson telephoned Mr. Baker of the affair, when Mr. Baker sent Deputy Sheriff Granger, Marshal Pinkson and others in an endeavor to find the man. A thorough search failed to reveal his place of concealment, with the result that the posse returned to the city the following morning without their game.

Mr. Baker is conducting one of the most orderly convict camps in the State, employing none but competent guards, and the information as given The Sun was erroneous.

Judge Mason's Court.

Moses George was arraigned in Judge Mason's court Thursday upon a charge of carrying concealed weapons. He was convicted and sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs or spend three months on the "gang."

An appeal was taken, however, and George gave the required bond and was released.

It will be remembered that Moses George is alleged to have shot his brother, Amos George, at a picnic at Haile's sink, the first of the present week. In the melee three other negroes were seriously cut.

ORGANIZED LABOR WANTS NINE HOURS

Carpenters' and Joiners' Union Pass Significant Resolution.

ARE PAID NONE TOO WELL

While They Are Not Asking for Increase in Salary Just Now, They Will Insist on Nine-Hour Day, Effective on and After June 1.

The organized carpenters and joiners of the city, at a recent meeting of the union, came to the conclusion that they were giving "too much sugar for a dime," with the result that a resolution was passed to the effect that after June 1, nine hours, instead of ten, would constitute a day's labor.

In speaking of the matter Thursday one of the most competent carpenters in the city, and a prominent member of the union, stated that the carpenters of Gainesville not only received a miserably low compensation for their labor, but were compelled to put in a full day of ten hours. "The highest wages paid a carpenter in this city is $2.50," he said, "and he must be a first-class workman to command that salary. The average carpenter gets from $1.75 to $2 a day, and is compelled in many instances to work beside an unskilled laborer who is drawing within a few cents of the same salary that the skilled man receives. We have talked this thing over very carefully and weighed the matter with justice to all, and after June 1 if the contractor wants a carpenter he must take him at the present salary on nine-hour service."

The contractors have not yet been heard from in the matter. Whether they propose to concede to the demands of the carpenters and joiners, or whether they will oppose the reduction of working hours, is a question to be awaited. However, the latter are anticipating no trouble.
