The Fourth of July casualties, as reported to The Record-Herald of Chicago, reached the total of 1,700. The cracker of the giant variety did the greatest damage.

The Interstate Tobacco Association at Richmond has decided to erect a $100,000 independent factory at Boston, where the farmers can take their tobacco and have it manufactured independent of the trust.

The old saying is that "a man who uses his money dishonestly never comes to a ripe old age to enjoy it." Perhaps the reason he dies so young is because the funeral before it is known he has acquired his wealth.

President Roosevelt released two convicts from the Federal prison at Atlanta, on the ground that their sentences were excessive. There may be hundreds of just as good men serving terms in various prisons that find sentences very confining.

All the men who will miss the Secretary Hay there will be none to replace his death more keenly than the President Roosevelt. His long career in diplomatic matters had made him one of the most brilliant of any country. He knew every detail of the chains of the government.

STATESMAN OF THE OPEN DOOR

John Hay served as Secretary of State under two Presidents for a period of seven years, says The Wall Street Journal.

He was the thirty-sixth to hold this great office, and only four of his predecessors—James Madison, John Quincy Adams, W. H. Seward and Hamilton Fish—held the position longer. Their tenure was eight years, but Mr. Hay would have broken the record if death had not ended his career while still in service.

The office of Secretary of State has a history scarcely less distinguished than that of President. There have been twenty-five Presidents, of whom it may be said that, not counting the two still living, there have been only six—Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant and McKinley, whose names shine with brightest lustre through the years; while the names of Jefferson, Marshall, Clay, Webster, Calhoun, Seward, Blaine and Sherman appear in the list of Secretaries of State, in addition to those of James Madison, James Monroe, John Quincy Adams, Martin Van Buren and James Buchanan, who also served as Presidents, and of Edmund Randolph, Edward Everett, W. L. Marcy, Lewis Cass, and in later years Black, Fish, Evarts and Bayard, who were scarcely less distinguished. Indeed it may be said that there are more names generally remembered by the people in the list of Secretaries of State than in the list of Presidents.

It was Mr. Hay's distinction also to have served in another office which has been made great by a succession of great men. He was ambassador to England long enough to have made a distinct and favorable impression in a company where only high intellectual power counts. Among his predecessors as ambassador were such men as James Monroe, J. Q. Adams, Rufus King, Albert Gallatin, Washington Irving, Martin Van Buren, Edward Everett, George Bancroft, James Buchanan, Charles Francis Adams, John L. Motley, James Russell Lowell and Edward J. Phelps, men distinguished in letters, politics, law and diplomacy.

Mr. Hay was the peer in intellect, character and achievements of all these men. It is his special distinction to have been a leader in the "new diplomacy"—the diplomacy of openness and fair dealing. He will be known as the statesman of the "open door," and his death will be deplored in other countries besides ours.

CABBAGE WORM.

People who ever made a statement regarding the great injury the cabbage snake was doing, should now lose no opportunity to try and repair the injury which has been wrought by this little harmless worm. The refutation of the damage this myth was thought to be able to do is not so readily grasped as the sensational story that one worm would poison a whole family, and when it is learned that he is harmless the matter seems absurd, and it is dropped without comment.

But it has done considerable harm in many localities, and it will take some time to change the minds of many people in regard to this matter, but its absurdity has surely proven it all a humbug.

The streets of our city should be the pride of every resident, and an effort should be made to keep them in the best possible condition. Until the city gets a system of sewerage there can be no permanent improvements in many places, but the shade trees and bushes that are along some of them can be trimmed up and beautified. Gainesville has always been known as the most beautiful inland city in the State, and it will take but little effort, if all will do their share, to maintain such high opinion.

The celebration of the Fourth of July in Florida was more general than in any other State in the Union. The people of this State are to be congratulated for this manifestation of their devotion to the old flag and the loyal spirit manifested. Although the spirit of progress is manifested on every hand in the South, and cities and hamlets are struggling for supremacy, yet there was a cessation of labor on the glorious Fourth and all joined hands and did honor to the anniversary of our natal day, and the inspiring patriotic songs seemed to fill all with a glow of pride that was manifest on every countenance on that day. Both old and young united in praising the Power that has made and preserved our Nation—spelled with a big N.

The Bobolink Route.

The bobolinks are so open in their movements that the passage from Florida to Cuba and thence to South America is known as the "bobolink route." So energetic and brave is this plump little traveler in feathers that it often compasses in a single long ocean flight the 700 miles from Cuba to South America, while many other species which also use the "bobolink route" stop at Jamaica, apparently dreading the long, sustained trip across the Caribbean sea.—Youth's Companion.

Precocious.

Small boys have a way of listening to remarks that older persons make and using them when least expected. A mother was surprised the other day to have her young son reply to her when she was reproving him for some trifling misdemeanor: "Well, mamma, you must put up with me. You know I'm just at the trying age."

A Mean Retort.

Wife—According to this paper, hot water will prevent wrinkles. Husband—So? Then how do you account for the numerous wrinkles I have? Wife—How do I account for them? Husband—Yes; you keep me in hot water nearly all the time, you know.

Breaking it Gently.

A young man married against the will of his parents, and in telling a friend how to break the news to them he said, "Tell them first that I am dead and then gently work up to the climax."

WORMS

"I had for years suffered from what medical men called Dyspepsia and Catarrh of the Stomach. In August I purchased a box of Cascarets and was surprised to find that I had 'em'—you-a wiggling, squirming nose left me. Judge your doctor's surprise when I showed him thirty feet, and in another day the remainder about the same length of a tape-worm that had been sapping my vitality for years. I have enjoyed the best of health ever since. I trust this testimonial will appeal to other sufferers." Chas. Blackstock, 219 Divinity Place, West Philadelphia, Pa.
