T. J. Faus, for several years employed by The Sun as a compositor, left yesterday for DeFuniak Springs, where he has accepted a position on The Herald. The management of The Sun, together with Mr. Faus' associates, regretted very much to see him leave, but wish him well in his new home. Mr. Faus is one of the oldest and most widely known printers in this section of the State. He was working on The Times-Union when the yellow fever broke out in that city in 1858, and was one of the few who "stood by the craft" during that epidemic. He retained his position as compositor through this time, never losing a day.

The most beautiful and unique performance ever seen in Gainesville was presented Wednesday evening on Mr. W. W. Hampton's spacious lawn by a number of the loveliest young ladies of this city. Under the rays of many colored lights tempered by the clear moon beams, clad in fine white raiment of the Grecian priestess, they came with slow and stately tread, winding in and out among the magnolia trees, keeping time to the sweet strains of piano and violins, which floated softly out to the audience from the piazza. Moving in harmony and exquisite grace and dignity they gave many classical postures, such as the "Invocation to the Altar," the "Attitude of Supreme Prayer" and others.

The young ladies are deserving of many thanks from the Guild of Holy Trinity church in whose behalf they labored so faithfully in getting up this part of the entertainment.

It was to be regretted that a performance so lovely and costing so much time and labor should have been interrupted by the antics of a lot of young hoodlums who had evidently never been taught the necessary requirements of appearing among the respectable element, and causing one to feel that before paved streets, municipal ownership of electric lighting plants or other improvements, Gainesville needed a reform school for its younger generation.

E. DeWitt Dow of Tampa is in the city, having been summoned here on account of the illness of his brother, W. E. Dow. The patient's condition was not reported favorable yesterday.

The latter, who recently arrived from the Klondike, was deeply impressed with the beauties of the famous spring, which he declares is one of the most marvelous works of nature he has seen in his extensive travels around the world.
