Englishmen in Canada.

It is not true, as reported, that all Englishmen are disliked in Canada. We try to like them all. Apart from the Socialist, a hopeless exotic in this climate, the only type of Englishman who is disliked on principle is the broken-down dandy. He cannot dig or do anything else, but is not ashamed to borrow on the strength of his connections. Wherever he goes the Englishman of the right sort holds his own and more.—Winnipeg Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

Illuminating Gas.

Like most other important inventions or discoveries, that of illuminating gas takes us back through devious ways and to many points. But we get very near the head waters of the question in the Rev. Mr. Clayton, of England, who, in 1730, published a paper in the "Philosophical Transactions" detailing his experiments with the gases obtained by the decomposition of pit coal in heated close vessels. But Mr. Clayton had made the discovery long before this date, as he alludes to it in a letter addressed to the society in May, 1682.—The American.

Rabies.

The "mad dog" season begins with the warm weather, to continue as long as heat, dust, noise and neglect strain the nerves of dogs and men. A homeless cur, kicked by a cruel or thoughtless boy, runs barking through the street. A child is bitten, and the panic-stricken bystanders assure it that hydrophobia will develop. If their victim is sufficiently impressionable its death follows, and another "mad dog scare" is well under way.

Just at present States Island is indulging in one of these unreasonable and dangerous frights, with the aid and assistance of certain health authorities. The alarm of the people is not to be wondered at, but the fact remains that physicians disagree as to the existence of the disease rabies, while men acquainted with dogs are almost unanimous in declaring that no such thing as the "mad dog" of popular imagination ever existed. Mr. Freer, of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, asserts that in fourteen years the agents of the society have been bitten not less than 15,000 times, and that not once have the symptoms of rabies followed.

Wounds caused by animals are not more dangerous than wounds resulting from falls or blows. They should be cleaned promptly and thoroughly, cauterized or rendered aseptic in some other way, and kept clean while healing. If these precautions were always taken, and people would stop talking about rabies, the "mad dog season" would soon cease to occupy an important space in the calendar.—New York Sun.

A Curious Musical Box.

In the South Kensington Museum in London is a curious musical box. It was originally the property of Tipu (or Tippoo) Sahib, the "Tiger of Mysore," who died in 1799, being killed during the British assault and capture of Seringapatam, the capital of Mysore. He always hated the British, and to show his enmity he had this instrument constructed. The box is a life-sized statuary group showing the symbolic tiger of India at the throat of England, represented by a British officer. When Tipu wished to amuse his court, one of his attendants turned a handle, when the tiger emitted horrible growls and the man raised and lowered his arms and uttered terrifying shrieks. Inside the tiger are four rows of pipes and a set of ivory keys, which are either of French or British manufacture.—Chicago News.

Scrubbing Device.

In the ordinary process of washing textile goods by hand it is customary to rub the goods over corrugated washboards or like surfaces, by which with the aid of water and some detergent substances the scrubbing serves to remove the dirt. The object of the device shown in the accompanying illustration is to reverse this method. It consists of an arrangement of a series of flexible pockets capable of compression, so as to produce a vacuum and suction through the goods while being moved over them with pressure. The scrubbing is effectually performed without wear on the hands. The compression and suction continually forces the water and soap through the goods with the effect of a rapid and perfect cleansing.—Washington Star.

A Poor Corner.

When a girl puts a man off by saying she will keep a little place in a corner of her heart for him, he may be sure that it is a corner for which she doesn't expect to have much use.

KRYBER PASS, HISTORIC PATHWAY OF MANY NATIONS.

CHILDREN SOLD AS FARM SLAVES.

Parents Take Them to German Labor Market, Where They Are Inspected Like Cattle.

The Friedrichshafen (Germany) correspondent of the New York World writes:

The child-abor market was held to-day—an institution a century old—which local newspapers declare is only a youthful slave mart thinly cloaked, and which, nowadays, arouses intense indignation in the frontier provinces of Austria, Switzerland and Germany.

As usual each year their parents brought here, from their homes in the outlying districts of the Tyrol, about 350 girls and boys, from eleven to fourteen years old, and sold their services to farmers for seven months, from April 1 to October 28. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of the children are thrust into this bondage by their parents' avarice. The farmers pay for a girl's services for the seven months about $12.50. For a strong boy's work the princely sum of $20.

The children were ranged early this morning in the market place, and all day long a crowd of farmers inspected them as if they were so many pigs or cattle, felt the muscles of their arms, poked them in the ribs to learn if they were fat or lean, meantime loudly discussing their merits or condemning their physical faults.

Some of the children had been sold last year or the year before; they had exchanged confidences; they shrank from the farmers who had been cruel to them, and stealthily tried to warn their younger companions of the fate that awaits them.

By dusk contracts had been signed for every unfortunate here. The fathers of some were tipsy by nightfall and cursing their luck that this girl or that boy is not larger and more muscular so that more money would have been paid for them.

To-night the child-slaves, with their new masters, are hurrying to the farms.

The terms of the contracts are harsh, providing that the children, regardless of sex, may work at "cattle herding, housework, stable and stall clearing, nursing children, feeding cattle, running errands and whatever else the master may require them to do."

"Good treatment" is included in the condition, but, according to a local newspaper which has conducted an inquiry, this clause is more often broken than observed, and many children return home crippled or wrecked in health by their master's brutality.

Next October 25, which is called "Packing Day," the little workers return here afoot and assemble at the Children's Society's headquarters, whence they are sent to their homes, there to await another seven months' bondage.

WISE WORDS.

Shall we weep for those who have done weeping? We rejoice in the belief that there is no impassable gulf between us and those who have gone before.—Channing.

Bodily senses imply their objects; the eye, light; the ear, sound; the touch, the taste, the smell, things relative thereto. Spiritual senses likewise foretell their object, are silent prophecies of the endless life.—Theodore Parker.

Our beloved never die. Do not admit their non-existence. The tendencies that follow them becomes for our hope a bridge reaching out from these mortal shores toward the imperishable land. You will see again all those you have loved; you will recognize them.—Charles Wagner.

We also have our calling of God, as truly as any ancient prophet; and round us also the tempest at times shouts, and beneath our feet the earthquake trembles, and about us the fire threatens to destroy. Well for us if, at such times, we can wrap our mantle about our face, open the eye and ear of the spirit, and hear the still, small voice within.—John Page Hopps.

That solemn moment in which, for those who have gone before and for us who are to follow, the eye of sense beholds taught have the ending of the world, the entrance upon a black and silent eternity, the eye of faith declares to be the supreme moment of a new birth for the disenthralled soul, the introduction to a new era of life compared with which the present one is not worthy of the name.—John Fluke.

Love for self, sympathy for self, activity for self, do not produce life or the sense of life. No vivid or exalted sense of individual being can ever fill the heart of man until he escape from the circle of self-involvement, and spread his being over all the world.—Stephen A. Brooke.

QUEEN OF ACTRESSES PRAISES PERUNA.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE.

"I am glad to write my endorsement of the great remedy, Peruna, to do so most heartily."—Julia Marlowe.

Any remedy that benefits digestion strengthens the nerves. The nerves centers require nutrition. If the digestion is impaired, the nerves become anemic, and nervous debility is the result.

Peruna is not a nervous tonic or stimulant. It benefits the nerves by benefiting digestion.

Peruna frees the stomach of malarial congestions and normal digestion is the result.

In other words, Peruna goes to the bottom of the whole difficulty, when the disagreeable symptoms disappear.

Mrs. J. C. Jamison, Wallace, Ga., writes:

"I was troubled with my stomach for six years. Was treated by three doctors. They said that I had nervous dyspepsia. I was put on a liquid diet for three months. I improved under the treatment, but soon as I stopped taking the medicine, got bad again.

"I saw a testimonial of a man whose case was similar to mine being cured by Peruna, so I thought I would give it a trial.

"I procured a bottle at once and commenced taking it. I have taken several bottles and am entirely cured."

Two Sedalia (Mo.) women went to jail because they refused to send their children to school.

Capodine Cures Indigestion Pain, Belching, Sour Stomach, and Heartburn from whatever cause. It's Liquid. Has immediate effect. Doctors prescribe it. 25c., and 50c., at drug stores.

CHEAP.

"That's a beautiful rug. May I ask how much it cost you?"

"Three thousand dollars' worth of furniture to match it."—The Holston Standard.

TWO WATERS FROM ONE WELL.

Twin Pumps Draw Up Fresh Water and Mineral Water.

Salt water and fresh water from the same well is an Ohio novelty discovered by a member of the United States Geographical Survey engaged in making investigations of ground water conditions in Hamilton county. Except for the fact that two pumps are set in it side by side, it resembles an ordinary well. But one of the pumps supplies water excellent to taste, whereas the water from the other is so highly charged with various mineral salts that it is almost brine. This water has been recommended by some physicians as being big medicinal value.

When first dug the well was a great wonder. The secret of the phenomenon lies in the fact that the water bearing beds confined between layers of limestone occur at two points, the upper carrying fresh water and the lower salt. The water of the fresh water pump is but a few feet long, and that of the salt water pump is thirty-five feet long, being heavier than the fresh water, does not mix with it, but remains at the bottom of the well. The longer pipe consequently draws only the salt water.—Cincinnati correspondence of the New York Herald.

BUILT UP

Right Food Gives Strength and Power.

The natural elements of wheat, barley, including the phosphorus, are found in Grape-Nuts, that is why persons who are run down from improper food pick up rapidly on Grape-Nuts.

"My system was run down by excessive night work," writes a man. "In spite of a liberal supply of ordinary food."

"After using Grape-Nuts I saw improvements at once in strength, nerve and brain power."

"This food seemed to lift me up and stay with me for better and with less fatigue. My weight increased 20 lbs. with vigor and strength in proportion."

"When traveling I always carry food with me to insure having it." Name given by Postum Co., Brockton, Mass. Read "The Road to Wellville," in part.

"I've read elsewhere that 'one appears from time to time' that are genuine, true, and full of interest."
