The Moral Stimulus of Good Clothes. Men grow in self respect as they wear good clothes. Their clothes earn them the approval of their fellows.

In turn they are forced to grow to fill the measure of good opinion, so that, forced forward by the clothes he wears, men attain to their highest capability.—Sartorial Art Journal.

The Exception. "Doesn't your husband like cats, Mrs. Blinck?"

"No, indeed. He hates all cats except a little kitty they have at his club."—Baltimore American.

SO DECEPTIVE. Elaborate mechanism and applications of electricity produce this great effect. The mechanism of two great cradles, twenty feet in length and fourteen feet wide, and which are movable back and forth on railways, is supported by a bridge structure capable of holding twenty tons.

On each of these treadmills a horse is secured by steel cable traces, which hold him in place and prevent him from moving forward off the runways. As each horse gallops, the treadmill revolves under his feet, thereby eliminating the forward pressure created by the impact of his hoofs, which would force him ahead on an immovable surface.

By this mechanical arrangement it is possible for the horses actually to gallop with all their speed within the space of their length. It is considered the most realistic effect ever seen upon the stage.

For the Jacksonville Production In Arousing Great Interest.

Much interest has been manifested concerning the mechanical methods of the thrilling chariot race employed in Klaw & Erlanger's new and greater production of Gen. Lew Wallace's spectacle, "Ben-Hur," which is to be presented at the Duval Theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, and Saturday matinee, Dec. 1, 2 and 3.

In this great arena contest the spectators see eight horses galloping at break-neck speed and straining every muscle to gain the advantage in the race within the amphitheatre. Behind each quartet of horses is a Roman chariot. The wheels revolve rapidly; the chariots lurch and sway and the flaming, beribboned garments of the drivers flutter behind them, adding intensity to the realism of the scene. The illusion is still further increased as the interior wall of the amphitheatre moves along and the dust flies in blinding clouds beneath the crushing wheels of the chariots. The clatter of the rushing hoofs of the horses and the rattle of the chariots are distinctly heard.

Elaborate mechanism and applications of electricity produce this great effect. The mechanism of two great cradles, twenty feet in length and fourteen feet wide, and which are movable back and forth on railways, is supported by a bridge structure capable of holding twenty tons.
