THE TASK. Said Duty: "Take thy pen and write Life throbbing lines, words weighed with import." Enough of snoring on Smith's eye! Enough of singing of her nose and white!

THE SECRET SERVICE. Tiresome Work of Reading a Cipher Dispatch of 2,000 Words. Some governments make use of numerals for their ciphered communications with their agents abroad, others a mixture of numerals and words, and yet others exclusively words. Of course,

Old People's Eyes. Often become iritated and painful. Hundreds of old people have been made comfortable by using John R. Dickey's Old Reliable Eye Water. It is absolutely reliable—absolutely painless. Send for circulars or testimonials, or get a bottle for 25 cents at Wight & Bro.'s Drug Store.

The only problem that needs solution in dispatches of this kind is to ascertain the key number or key word. When that is accomplished, the remainder is easy, though generally very tedious. Indeed it is difficult to conceive of a more tiresome, head-splitting piece of work than either to cipher or decipher a dispatch of some 1,500, or 2,000 words.

Occasionally the dispatch will appear a mere jumble of consonants without any meaning, while at other times it will be so ciphered as to contain sensible and plausible sentences, the meaning of which appears on the surface. It was a code of this kind that was used by the Spanish secret agents in this country during the war with Spain, and the clever staff of secret service men employed by the United States government were in a very short time possessed of a key to the cipher in question.—New York Tribune.

For Over Fifty Years. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It softens the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Hunting Baboons in South Africa. The baboons which frequent this rocky country are so destructive to the stock farms that organized raids have to be made upon them. It is useless trying to get a shot at the baboon during the day; he is a wily creature and knows the deadly effects of a rifle just as well as his hunter.

PER CONTRA. Go, Fame, a center like a silly Through at the streets a necks of Killie; Tell ev'ry social, honest billie To cease his grievin', For yet, unskilt'd by Death's gleg gullie, Tam Samson's livin'!

A KAFFIR "SMOKER." The Native Women Are Enthusiastic Devotees of the Weed. In South Africa the native woman smokes incessantly. Your native servant smokes as she cooks and as she washes. The tobacco she likes is rank. The dainty cigarette an English or Russian lady of fashion enjoys, smoked through a quill, so that no nicotine can stain either teeth or fingers, would be sneered at by a Kaffir. "Give me a pipe and something in it I can taste," is in effect what she says.

It Heals the Lungs. When suffering from a racking cough, take a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. The soreness will be relieved and a warm, grateful feeling and healing of the parts affected will be experienced. Take no substitute. Wight & Bro.

Victim of an Awful Calamity.

"It came out, as I journeyed on horseback through Dakota, that almost every settler's land was under mortgage," said a westerner, "and one day, when I came upon a pioneer scated on the grass by the roadside, with a troubled look on his face, I asked him if it was the mortgage that he was worrying about."

"Wuss, than that, stranger," he replied as he looked up wearily. "Sickness or death in the family?" "Wuss than that."

"Then it must be a calamity indeed. You didn't lose family and home by a prairie fire?" "Nope, but you are right about its being a calamity. I've been tryin to think of that word for two hours past. Yes, sir, you can put it down as an awful calamity."

"But won't you explain? I persisted." "I will, sir. That was a mortgage on the claim, and I was feelin as big as any of my neighbors and takin things easy when my wife was left $600. Stranger, dare I tell you what she did with that money?"

"She didn't lose it?" "No, sir. She jest paid that mortgage, bought two horses and a plow, and this mornin I was bounced out of my own cabin because I wouldn't peel off my coat and go to work! Yes, sir, you are right. It's a calamity—a calamity that's landed me on the outside—and between my durned pride and her blamed spunk somebody'll be eatin grass afore Saturday night!"—Washington Post.

Burns and Tam Samson. Tam Samson was a gray haired veteran sportsman, who on one occasion, when out moorfool shooting and feeling the weight of years begin to press upon him, expressed the belief that the expedition was to be his last and desired, in somewhat tragic style, that he might die and be buried in the moors.

with the plaintive line, "Tam Samson's dead." Some one having told Samson that Burns had written a poem—"a gay queer one"—about him, he sent for the poet and in something like wrath asked him to read what he had written. On hearing the recital of his exploits he smiled grimly and seemed by no means displeased. "But," he exclaimed, "I'm no dead yet, Robin. Wherefore should ye say that I'm dead?" Burns retired for a few minutes; then he returned and recited to Tam the following verse, which he had composed in the interval:

Go, Fame, a center like a silly Through at the streets a necks of Killie; Tell ev'ry social, honest billie To cease his grievin', For yet, unskilt'd by Death's gleg gullie, Tam Samson's livin'!

Samson laughed gleefully and exclaimed, "That's no' bad, Robin; that'll do," and the poet was received once more into his good graces.—Chambers' Journal.

Relics of Former Ages. The big tree of California is unique in the world. It is the largest, oldest and most majestically graceful of all trees. Scarcely of known tree species, it is the best living representative of a former geologic age. It has come down through the ages simply by reason of its superb powers of defense against hostile conditions. The bark is sometimes as much as two feet thick and is almost noncombustible. The oldest specimens felled are still sound at the heart. Yet, with all its advantages, the big trees do not seem to have increased their range since the glacial epoch.—Washington Post.

Not His. The drill instructor's face turned scarlet with rage as he rated a raw Irish recruit for his awkwardness. "Now, Rafferty, you'll spoil the line with those feet. Draw them back instantly, man, and get them in line!" Rafferty's dignity was hurt. "Plaze, sargint," he drawled solemnly, "they're not mine; they're Micky Doolan's, in the rear rank!"

Lord Russell's Dilemma.

Once, when he first came to London and was laying the foundation of his great career, says a London letter, the future Lord Chief Justice Russell went to the pit of a theater. The piece was popular, the pit was crowded and the young advocate had only standing room. All of a sudden a man at his side cried out that his watch was stolen. Mr. Russell and two other men were hemmed in.

"It is one of you three," cried the man minus the watch.

"Well, we had better go out and be searched," said Mr. Russell, with the alertness of mind that did not fall him at a trying moment amid an excited crowd. A detective was at hand, and the suggestion was accepted. As Mr. Russell walked out the idea flashed through his mind that if the man behind him had the stolen property he would probably try to secure it in the pocket of his front rank man. Quick as thought he drew his scabbard about him—only to feel, to his horror, something large and smooth and round already in his pocket.

While he was still wondering what this might mean for him, the detective indignantly seized the hindmost man, explaining: "What, you rascal! At it again!" To Mr. Russell and the other man he apologized and made them go free.

But Mr. Russell, before he had taken many steps, reflected that he could not keep the watch. He went back to the box office and explained, with a courage on which he afterward said he rarely experienced greater demands, that though he did not take the watch he had it. So saying, he put his hand into his pocket and pulled out—a forgotten snuffbox.
