BANNER SALVE, the most healing salve in the world.

Foley's Honey and Tar for children, safe, sure. No opiates.

Foley's Honey and Tar heals lungs and stops the cough.

Too Hurred. A "tenderfoot" who was trying his luck on a western ranch was at first horrified by the table etiquette which prevailed among his associates.

One day his feelings evidently came so near the surface that a cowboy whose performances with a table knife of unusual size had aroused the tenderfoot's amazement, paused with another knife of food half way to his lips.

"What's the matter?" inquired the cowboy with disconcerting promptness, in the tone of one who means to be answered.

"Ab—er—nothing," hastily responded the tenderfoot.

"Look here," cried the cowboy, with an accompanying thump of his unoccupied hand on the table, "I want you to understand that I've got manners, but I haven't time to use 'em—that's all!"—Youth's Companion.

Something For Nothing. Some time ago there appeared in several Paris papers an advertisement of an obscure fruit dealer, in which he offered to give a prize of five francs for the largest apple sent to him.

"Well, miss, I kin chew, but I can't swaller no more!"—New York Sun.

Outsida and the Duchesses. Lord Rathmore told a friend how he once took Outsida in to dinner and how disappointed he was to find that the novelist devoted herself to the dishes rather than to intellectual refreshment.

In answer to the different subjects he introduced: "I'm afraid I'm singularly unfortunate in my choice of topics. Is there anything we could talk about to interest you?"

To which the chronicler of society's shortcomings replied: "There is one thing which would interest me very much. Tell me about the duchesses. I have written about them all my life and never met one yet."

The Double Letter. The double letter is scarcely of use in any language. Sometimes we are purely inconsistent. Letter must have two t's, literal one. The double letter very seldom affects the pronunciation.

The Exact Truth Exacted. Caller—You look like a good and truthful girl. Tell me—is your mistress really out? Domestic—She is, ma'am.

Caller—Where? Domestic—At the elbows, ma'am.—Chicago Tribune.

A vulgar man is captious and jealous, eager and impetuous about trifles. He suspects himself to be slighted, and thinks everything that is said meant at him.

beasts. I have seldom heard of an animal being burned in this manner, however, so there is nothing cruel in the treatment. It would not do for the keeper to burn the charges under his care, for the scars would mar the animal for exhibition purposes.

"In circus menageries the animals often become almost unmanageable. This is true of the younger specimens, who do not like the idea of being so closely housed, so much hauled about and so often cut off from the light of the outside world.

"I've got a black pony," crowed Charlie exultantly. "I've got a new baby brother," cried Jessie.

"Mim! That's nothing; I've got two of 'em," retorted Fred. Marjorie's eyes flashed. "Oh!" she cried. "I've got a heap more!" she cried. "I've got an auntie as old as Methuselah and black as tar."—Leslie's Weekly.

Arouned Her Curiosity After All. "Don't want any," said a North Broadway house-keeper from her second story window to a street vender whose wagon was standing a few steps away and who had just pulled the bell.

"Don't want any what?" gruffly asked the arab, who hadn't had even a chance to tell what his wares were.

"What have you got?" asked the housekeeper, whose curiosity was getting the better of her annoyance. "Oh, never mind. You don't want any. Git up, Bob!"

"Now, I wonder what that exasperating man is selling, anyhow?" she exclaimed as the wagon disappeared around the corner.—Baltimore Sun.

Boorish. De Vere—That's Miss Winter. Lovey girl, but awfully boorish. Ponsonby—How do you know? De Vere—I proposed to her the other day, and she said that, though she liked dogs, she didn't care for puppies.—Pick-Me-Up.

stake every- thing we had, even down to our good names. I started the case briefly but eloquently, and I must have made a good impression, for when I had finished, he said it would be all right. The stranger's part of it all to me was when he handed me a dollar bill.

"I know how it is myself," he said. "You want to put up a bluff before these girls. Just hand me the dollar for the pictures when I'm through."

"That was what pleased me, and I flashed that bill before the girls with the air of a magnate. It was just a month later that I learned from a brother of one of the girls that they had noticed our worried looks and had forestalled us by paying the photographer the dollar I flourished so proudly."—Pittsburg News.

He Was Up to the Limit. A young society woman tells a story of a very little newsboy who so appreciated her kindness to him at a newsboys' dinner that he went to the extent of great suffering for her sake.

For Over Fifty Years. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately.

Sold by druggists in every part of the world. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

least she thinks it was appreciation, but others have doubts. At all events, the young woman who, with a number of others, was engaged in serving the boys, noticed this little boy off at one end of the table. Many of his larger fellows were already hard at work on the various good things, but this little fellow had evidently been neglected.

Clearly here was a case of urgent charity, so the amateur waitress flew to his side, and for an hour she saw to it that he did not lack for anything. Plate after plate of turkey was literally showered upon him. Finally, as she set another piece of plum pudding in front of him, he rolled his eyes meekly toward her and said in muffled tones:

"Well, miss, I kin chew, but I can't swaller no more!"—New York Sun.

THE FIRST GERMAN PAPER.

Ben Franklin in 1732 Printed the First Zeitung in America. The first newspaper printed in the German language in America was the Philadelphiaische Zeitung, published by Benjamin Franklin in the year 1732. The Pennsylvania Gazette for June 8-15, 1732, contains the following announcement:

"The Gazette will come out on Monday next and continue to be published on Mondays.

"And on the Saturday following will be published Philadelphiaische Zeitung, or Newspaper in High Dutch, which will continue to be published on Saturdays once a fortnight, ready to be delivered at Ten a Clock, to Country Subscribers. Advertisements are taken in by the Printer hereof, or by Mr. Louis Timothee, Language Master, who translates them."

In undertaking this new enterprise Franklin expected to secure a liberal support from the German population of the province, for whom he had been doing considerable printing, but in this he was disappointed, and the publication of the Zeitung was discontinued after a few numbers had been issued.

The Zeitung was a small sheet of four pages, 6 1/2 by 9 inches, the text printed in double columns with Roman type, and at the bottom of the fourth page bore the imprint: "Philadelphia: Gedruckt bey B. Franklin in der Mark-strasse, wo diese Zeitungen vor 5 Schillingen des Jahrs zu bekommen, und Advertisements zu bestellen sind."

The first number was issued June 10, 1732, and the second "Sonabend den 24. Junii, 1732." The publication of the Zeitung, therefore, antedates by seven years the Hoch-Deutsch Pennsylvaniaische Geschicht-Schreiber, published by Christopher Saur.—Chicago Times-Herald.

thing to eat and was just sitting down at a table when his eye caught a sign which read: "Watch Your Hats! The Management Will Not be Responsible For Umbrellas and Hats Unless Checked by the Cashier."

"Where's this here cashier?" he asked the woman who came to wait on him.

"Up there in the little cage by the door," said the waitress. The farmer stalked to the cashier's desk and laid down his umbrella and a big hat that was new five or six years ago. The cashier looked up in amazement.

"Keep your hat," she said. "It will be all right." The farmer walked back to his table, read the sign again and thought it over. Then he climbed on a chair and took the sign from his hook. He carried it up to the cashier.

"What does this mean?" he asked. People were beginning to laugh, and the pretty cashier got red in the face. She took the hat and umbrella and wrote out a receipt. It was the first time in her life that she had been asked to check a hat, and she has been a cashier more years than one.—New York Tribune.
