C. W. Wilson, made a brief business stop in Holbrook the first part of the week, while en route to Washington, D. C. Mr. Wilson is livestock inspector in the Indian service of the Interior Department, with headquarters at Keams Canyon, and his visit to the Great City are of matters pertaining to his official duties.

200,000 YEAR OLD HUMAN SKELETON FOUND

(Continued from first page.) ing to find other human bones or additional evidence of some other kind to make the case complete, he was lying right among the mastodons which are accredited by scientists to the Pleistocene period.

The tree under which, perhaps, the pigmy was enjoying the shade, is about six inches through at the trunk and twenty feet high.

The tree itself is a notable discovery. It antedates by a least half a geological period, it is said, the petrified forests of Arizona. It is therefore the oldest tree ever found.

The nice point to be decided by scientists is whether the human was in the same stratum as the mammoths. Two or three feet above or below, they say, might mean multiplied hundreds of centuries nearer to or farther from the present.

Ages passed over them and the mountains wore down and filled the plains, infinitesimal in its yearly addition to the burial robe of earth, almost inappreciable through the centuries, but twenty feet thick in 200,000 years.—John A. Gray.

A. H. Pratt, of Springerville was in town recently.

Norman Bennett, of Winslow, was in town over Monday.

Mart Blevins of Heber, is in town today.

Among those from Winslow who attended the wedding dance of Messrs. James Donohue and Emmett Wallace at the Pastime Monday night, were Bert Kliendienst, Ed Stiles, the Misses Rena and Gladys Marley and Miss Ruth Hesser.

J. H. Fuller, who, with his family, is making a trip to the Panama canal zone, was in Holbrook the first part of the week, having been called from San Diego on some matter of business. He has rejoined his family whom he left enjoying themselves in San Diego and together they will proceed on their journey, following the original outline. The party left Winslow some two months since, touring the Southern part of the state and California in a motor car.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kliendienst left on No. 10 last Saturday night for a two months visit with relatives and friends, in and around Washington, D. C. Mr. Kliendienst is one of the best boosters in our city and intends to keep up his reputation while in the East. He says he is going to get some of that loose capital back there and bring it back to Arizona in the spring, and we hope he does, for we can get the land if we have some one to put forth a little coin and dam up the rivers and canyons. Mrs. Kliendienst will renew acquaintances around the Capital City, returning with her husband.—Winslow Mail.

The Price She Paid

The thrills one experience in reading David Graham Phillips' book, "The Price She Paid," are even more strongly brought out in the stage offering of that name which will be seen at the Pastime on Wednesday, 25th. It is seldom that this territory gets a genuine treat, such as will be offered by the the management of the new attraction when the big New York company of stars visits this city. Heading the list is Miss Sylvia Summers, who has been favorably compared with Maud Adams in the same kind of work.

"The Price She Paid" is a play brought up to date. It deals with a designing man of means, a dishonest boy, and a girl who believes in the teachings of her mother as regarding the defense of her virtue. Critics have never failed to place it in its deserved position in the American drama.
