LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS

Some of It May Interest You; All Of It Is Worth a Perusal.

Position of The News Politically

As stated on the title page of this paper, and as has been stated editorially from time to time, The News is independent in everything, politically as well as other things. This does not mean that the paper and its editor are bound not to support the candidacy of persons nominated by any political party; it means that the paper, and its editor, reserves the right to support the candidacy of persons of any political party whom it, and he, deems worthy of support, regardless of their political affiliations.

Being independent politically we expect to vote a mixed ticket at the election on the 7th of November. Both of the two leading parties have nominated men on their tickets whom we deem better qualified for the office they seek than are any others seeking those offices. For this reason, and for the additional reason that the day of hide-bound party allegiance is a relic of the dark ages, we shall vote and work for those people whom we believe to be best fitted for the places to which they aspire. And in this, and the next two issues of the paper, we shall express ourselves somewhat explicitly as to why we think certain candidates should be elected. In voicing our sentiments we shall confine ourselves almost exclusively to county candidates.

Probably the most important office in the county is that of supervisor. For this office only the best men should be selected; men of strict integrity and sound business judgment. Two such men have been nominated by the democrats of Navajo county, and they are worthy of the support of every voter in the county.

J. C. Paulsell and John A. Freeman are both pioneers of the county; each has made a success in his own business affairs and each will use the same business acumen in the conduct of county affairs that he uses in the management of his own affairs. We, therefore, most heartily endorse the candidacy of Messrs. Paulsell and Freeman for the office of county supervisor.

Next in importance, possibly, to the office of supervisor is that of county attorney. Under the laws of Arizona the county attorney is the legal advisor of the board of supervisors, and besides he is the prosecutor in all criminal actions that are brought in the courts of the county. A man to acceptably fill this office should be first of all a man well versed in law; moreover, he should be a man of good character, and a man in whom the public generally has confidence.

A man who measures up to these general qualifications, and who possesses many other equally important qualifications, is Thorwald Larson, the democratic nominee for county attorney. Mr. Larson is an old resident of the county and is well known to all the voters; he is a lawyer of exceptional ability and is splendidly equipped to fill acceptably the office to which he aspires. He should receive the vote of every democrat in the county, and of many republicans.

The office of county treasurer is one of great importance and should be filled by a man of strict integrity and sound business judgment. Not only should the treasurer be honest and have good business ability, but he should be a man of large affairs—a man competent to grasp and attend to big financial problems. Such a man is J. W. Richards, democratic nominee for treasurer of Navajo county.

Mr. Richards served two terms as county treasurer before Arizona became a state. He would have served longer had not the statute forbidden that a county treasurer should hold more than two terms in succession. During the two terms he served the county under the territorial government, Mr. Richards inaugurated many reforms in the office, the most notable of which was that of perfecting an arrangement with the banks in the county to pay 2 per cent interest on daily balances of county money in the banks. Previous to that time the banks paid nothing upon deposits of county funds.

Mr. Richards is now finishing a two year term, and is seeking reelection to a second term. The record he has made during the last two years in office certainly entitles him to reelection, and the big majority of voters in the county will no doubt look at the matter in this light.

Lack of space in this issue prevents further discussion of county candidates at this time, but the others will be discussed in subsequent issues of the paper.

Lecture by Wool Expert

W. T. Rich, the Australian wool expert, who is employed by the American Range Wool Improvement Association, delivered a very interesting lecture in the superior court room in Holbrook last Saturday afternoon. Owing to the bad condition of the roads, occasioned by recent heavy rains, the wool growers of the county did not attend in so large numbers as they would otherwise have done. However, those who listened to the lecture were well paid and secured a lot of valuable information.

Mr. Rich explained the system of shearing the fleece, and grading the wool, which is followed in Australia. In that country the wool growing industry is conducted along advanced, scientific methods, while in America old and crude methods are still in use in parts of the country.

A Near Tragedy

Wednesday evening about eight o'clock, as Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Kelly were leaving their home, a bullet struck Mrs. Kelly on the side of the neck, making a slight flesh wound. The bullet was fired from a high power rifle by John Jolly, who was shooting through the side of his house, across the street from the Kelly home. Jolly had been drinking hard for several days and had fired several shots before the one that struck Mrs. Kelly.

After assisting his wife into their home Mr. Kelly summoned Undersheriff Clemons and Jolly was disarmed and placed in jail. Thursday afternoon he was arraigned by County Attorney Jordan before Judge Boyer and was bound over to the superior court under heavy bond.

Mrs. Kelly had a very narrow escape from death for had the bullet gone an inch one way it would have killed her.

Schuster Store Dedicated

The mammoth new store building of the A. & B. Schuster Co., was dedicated Monday night by the giving of a grand free ball therein. An immense crowd was in attendance and for once the social bars were thrown down and everybody helped themselves to a good time. Many were in attendance from our neighboring towns. F. W. Nelson, in a neatly worded little speech, bade the guests welcome, and on behalf of the Schuster company, thanked them kindly for past favors and good will and solicited a continuance of their patronage. The Apache theater orchestra discoursed incomparably sweet music, and the dancers, many of them at any rate, did not weary of the gay fiesta until the small hours of the morn came creeping in. Hearty congratulations and good wishes are due the members of the popular A. & B. Co. —St. John Observer.

Aviation at State Fair

To those who have watched aviators soar into the clouds and have wished for an opportunity to do the same, the announcement that Harvey Crawford, the Pacific coast aviator, will be at the Arizona State Fair, November 13 to 18th will be an agreeable surprise. A surprise because this is the first trip Crawford has made away from California as he was instructing the Aero Squadron of the state the last anyone heard of him, and an agreeable surprise as he is the builder and owner of a passenger carrying machine that he will bring with him on this trip.

The time has past when we were contented to take our thrills at second hand. To stand on a fair grounds and watch the aviator fly away. Now we wish to experience the same sensations that have become so common to him. The easy rise, the rush of air as the machine spirals up and up. The heave of the machine as the pilot "banks" stiffly to the right and left. The earthward swoop as we descend and finally to enjoy the looks of admiration from our less nervy friends as we step from the machine.

Crawford has been carrying passengers on the coast for the past two years and, he said to his credit, he has never had a serious accident of any kind. He is admitted to be the most careful aviator of the Aero Club of America—that is when he has a passenger. When up by himself it is a different matter. Then he is the worst "fool-flyer" in the country. He loops the loop, flips up-side-down, does the side slip and jelly roll and every other stunt that any other aviator has ever attempted. These things he will do at the Arizona State Fair when he is not carrying passengers.

Little Tom's Place

Tomas Ortega, owner of the building, has taken over the furniture and fixtures of the Little Giant Cafe, and has reopened it under a new name and new management. The place will now be known as "Little Tom's Place", and it will be run as a first-class and up-to-date restaurant. Both regular meals and short orders will be served, and everything will be done to merit the patronage of the public.

Why not try Little Tom's Place for your next meal?
