FORGERY, PERJURY CHARGED TO HEALEY

PHOENIX, Sept. 24.—Found guilty largely on the testimony of a woman, James J. Healey, former editor of the Parker Post, faces a term of imprisonment in the Florence penitentiary. Healey, who was charged with false impersonation, was tried in Judge Stanford's court yesterday the entire morning and greater part of the afternoon being given over to the examination of witnesses and the arguments in the case. The jury was out five hours and a half, and returned a verdict of guilty and recommended that the court extend clemency to the defendant.

The warrant on which Healey was arrested was issued on the complaint of Fred W. Moore, a partner in some mining claims near Needles, Cal. Mr. Moore charged that Healey had forged his name to a deed transferring his interest in the claims to Healey; that he had impersonated him before a notary public and that when the notary refused to take his acknowledgement, he went before another notary who did not know him and swore that he was Moore. The deed was recorded in San Bernardino county and an exemplified copy of it was introduced in evidence establishing the fact of the forgery. The accusations of impersonation and perjury were established by the testimony of witnesses.

Clara Powers, the young notary who refused to take acknowledgement of the deed brought here by Healey, was the principal witness for the state.

THE VALUE OF KINDERGARTENS

Studies are now being made by the bureau of education of the United States government into the kindergarten work of the country have been attacked by a leading educator, Miss A. M. Winchester, whose report is given publicity by this bureau. Miss Winchester is a thorough believer in the value of the kindergarten work—in which El Paso schools were pioneers and in which El Paso is deeply interested—and she thinks it is of great value to the child but cites that it is difficult to tell just what the actual, permanent effects are upon the pupils. The studies the government is making, she believes is wrong.

"For several years investigations have been undertaken in different cities," says the review, "for the purpose of ascertaining the advantage gained by children with kindergarten training over non-kindergarten children. The emphasis in these investigations has been placed usually upon the rate of speed with which the children make the successive grades."

"The fallacy of drawing conclusions from such surveys," says Miss Winchester, "is manifest at once. It is well-nigh impossible to gage the speed correctly, because in the first grade both kindergarten and non-kindergarten children are placed together, and by the rule of uniformity which seems necessary in school systems, the teacher unconsciously standardizes the progress of her class. The laggards are brought up by dint of conscientious work, and the forward ones are held in leash, so that by the time the fifth or sixth grade is reached, whatever special impetus may have resulted from the child's kindergarten training has ceased to be measurable.

"In any event the permanent value of the kindergarten has little if any connection with the number of years required to go through the grades. The kindergarten's concern is with the content of the years rather than with their number; with the fullness of the life of the child rather than with the mere economy of time. Power to think and do, a tendency to assume right attitudes toward life, and ability to work and play happily with one's fellows—these are the results of training based upon the belief in education by development."
