BISBEE NEWS
Daily Happenings at the Great Copper Camp.
Budget of Interesting Items from our Regular Correspondent.

The mail arrived today noon as is its daily custom, and as the avenues of news have dried up in and about Tombstone, we made a rush for the postoffice possessed of great expectations; and waited patiently about, like Marv's lamb, for the window open, when we fondly anticipated a letter from Bisbee telling us all about the explosion of giant in the Bisbee mines, the clandestine meetings of pretty Miss Jones and her gay charmer; the capture of the bank robbers, and many other catching items with which to fill this column of the PROSPECTOR and give it a start for the week's run that would only stop with the going down of Saturday's sun. But just imagine, if you can, our surprise on being told by Postmaster Sydow that the mail intended for the PROSPECTOR had either gone on to Benson, got lost on the road or had never left Bisbee, he didn't know which. We could take either horn of the dilemma, but that was all he knew about it; and now we don't know what to think, but confidently expect something from the copper camp tomorrow.

A ROUGH EXPERIENCE.
Captured by Rustlers and Taken to Sonora.

F. A. Lindsey whose long absence from home at Globe, according to the Bell, caused his wife and friends much uneasiness, returned to Globe last night, and relates a thrilling experience. He left there July 29, for Fort Thomas, expecting to be gone ten days. Having finished his business at Thomas, and when about to start on the return trip, he was approached by a white man who offered Lindsey $40 to take him and three companions to Bisbee, which Lindsey gallantly agreed to do, and started the following morning.
Lindsey was paid $25 in advance and nothing unusual occurred until when within a few miles from Bisbee, the man who had all along acted as spokesman, suggested that they camp for the night. Lindsey at first demurred but finally consented to do so, and was about to stop when he was told to turn into a road leading to the south. Surprised, Lindsey turned to re-monstrate when he found himself looking into the muzzle of a six shooter.
Lindsey drove on. In fact he never stopped driving until next morning and having crossed into Sonora, they came to a cabin where they met two men mounted and heavily armed.
Lindsey had been relieved of his money, $27.50, and watch and chain, and after resting the horses, four of the party drove off with the team leaving Lindsey with two of the men who had accompanied him from Fort Thomas.
The following day they saddled horses and rode some 20 miles or farther into the interior, where Lindsey was abandoned and left to his fate. For four days he was without food, and when about to throw up the sponge he came to a Mexican's cabin near the line, who directed him to a ranch in the San Simon valley, and after many vicissitudes he reached Bowie station and took the train to Gerónimo thence to Globe. Lindsey feels that he is lucky to be alive, and we regret that we have not the time and space to do justice to his tale of woe, which would make first-class material for a dime novel or furnish the plot for a blood and thunder play.
